Nixon talks of Watergate

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Former President Richard Nixon, breaking his year-long silence on Watergate, said in a court document Wednesday that he — not Congress — would decide whether to make public his secret Watergate tapes.

In a 171-page deposition filed in U.S. District Court, Nixon also denied under oath that his remarks in a critical White House tape show that he ordered the Watergate coverup.

Nixon's sworn testimony was taken at San Clemente July 25 by a battery of lawyers involved in his suit to gain custody of White House tapes and documents. Several times Nixon refused to answer questions directly related to Watergate, taking the advice of his lawyers who said the matters were not relevant to the suit.

AS FOR PUBLIC disclosure of the tapes and documents, in government custody pending outcome of the suit, Nixon told the lawyers:

"I shall determine . . . not the Congress, what can appropriately be made public. The President should have a right to make a determination as to whether or not and how and when there should be a disclosure."

Nixon said he intended to make the material public, but only after a review "which can only be undertaken by me and members of my family."

"Do you expect it to be longer than five years?" one lawyer asked.

"I can't tell you until I see how big the task is," Nixon replied.

In his only comment bearing directly on his role in the Watergate scandal, Nixon said he never ordered the Watergate coverup in a March 23, 1973, meeting with John W. Dean III, his counsel.

At one point during that meeting,

As guard against stadium action

2,000 sign petition on home-rule issue

More than 2,000 Arlington Heights residents have signed petitions calling for a vote on home-rule powers, but they (the petitions) will not be used unless the village board decides to finance the proposed Chicago Bears Stadium without a referendum.

Mrs. Mickey Hartley, 104 E. Hawthorne St., an organizer of the petition drive, said Wednesday her group has collected 77 petition sheets and "I'm sure there will be many more coming in."

Mrs. Hartley said the village board's decision to hold a referendum on the stadium has had little effect on the number of people signing the petitions.

"I DIDN'T HAVE any problem at all getting signatures. I had people sign it who were for the stadium as well as people who were against it. They all agreed there should be a referendum," she said.

The petition drive was organized by Katherine Muller, 418 S. Lincoln Ln., and is being coordinated by Joan Hammerstone. Mrs. Hammerstone said the petitions would not be used unless the board gives approval of the stadium without voter approval.

Mrs. Hartley said her group was surprised that Village Pres. James Ryan called for a referendum on the stadium because his "first reaction was not at all favorable."

"I'm glad he decided to go along with the suggestions to hold the referendum. We just hope it will be worded in a way that the residents definitely have a choice," she said.

MRS. HARTLEY said her group would file the petitions if the referendum does not give residents a "definite yes or no vote" on the stadium question.

The petitioners needed to collect signatures totalling 10 per cent of the number of voters participating in the last election, or about 1,200, before a repeal vote could be called.

Ryan called for a binding referendum on village financing of the stadium at a press conference last week. He said a vote could be scheduled in October or early November after final facts and figures on the stadium project are available to village officials and the public.

The village board voted Monday night to guarantee a public referendum on the football stadium proposal if trustees should ever determine the project is financially feasible or desirable.

Arlington Hts. rejects auto service center plan

by JOE SWICKARD

A proposal for an automotive service center by Rolling Meadows Mayor Roland J. Meyer and developer Leo Romano was turned down by Arlington Heights officials.

Meyer and Romano presented plans for a muffler shop, a car wash and a tire, battery and car accessories store on Golf Road near Goebbert Road in Arlington Heights.

Members of the subcommittee said the plans represented a use too intensive for the area and conflicted with nearby houses.

Despite the lack of approval for the auto center, Meyer and Romano said they would appear before the plan and subdivision subcommittee at its next meeting, August 28, with plans for other property in the area.

Two sites mentioned were at Arlington Heights and Golf roads and a 20-acre site west of Arlington Heights Road between the tollway and Algonquin Road.

Meyer indicated the first parcel would be the site of a shopping center with a major food store and drug store.

A temporary use as a golf driving range was suggested for the land between the tollway and Algonquin Road.

ROMANO is a land developer with extensive holdings along Golf Road and developer of the proposed Outer Planets, a residential and commercial project in Schaumburg.

Garage sale in memory of Tommy

by JOE SWICKARD

Tommy Cronin died last week of leukemia when he was just 20 years old. His death, however, was not the end for his brother and sisters who felt there was still something else they could do.

The family and friends will be raising money Saturday and Sunday for the Greater Chicago Chapter of the Leukemia Society of America, Inc., through a garage sale.

"After the funeral we kids were sitting around and someone said, 'Let's do something worthwhile for Tommy,'" said Patricia Figlio, his eldest sister.

THE IDEA OF the sale just evolved from that point, Mrs. Figlio said.

Through the sale of the items, the family plans to further the contributions started as a memorial in Tommy's name to the society.

Although there are no plans at the present for the fund to be ongoing, Mrs. Figlio said it would be nice if it grew from the sale at the family home at 904 W. Grove, Arlington Heights.

Tommy graduated from Arlington High School in 1973 and had attended Harper College for a year. He had

Arlington man electrocuted in car wash

A 25-year-old man was electrocuted Wednesday when he touched an electric-brush housing at the Northwest Auto Wash, 900 W. Euclid Ave., Arlington Heights.

William R. Calvert, 309 N. Drury Ln., Arlington Heights, an employee of the car wash, was pronounced dead at 4:15 p.m., about an hour after the mishap.

Police said Calvert, along with other employees, was painting an interior wall about 2:30 p.m., when he reached back and touched the metal covering for a set of rotating brushes.

He was jolted by an electric shock and collapsed. Police said the brushes had not been working properly, but did not know the specific malfunction.

Arlington Heights paramedics attempted to revive Calvert and rushed him to Northwest Community Hospital.

Best form of government? None, Deer Park decides

by JOE SWICKARD

"Governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed, that whenever any form of government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the right of the people to alter or abolish it . . ."

So said Thomas Jefferson and so say some residents of Deer Park as they petition to abolish their tiny village almost 200 years after the nation's founding principle was spelled out.

Deer Park hardly seems a town with insurmountable problems. Its borders are marked with signs set in bean fields and its residents live in two subdivisions or on scattered farm sites.

There is no business district, nor even a village for the town, incorporated in 1957. There are just the nice homes set in rolling, wooded fields.

THE SIGNS SAY there are 500 people in Deer Park, but the 1970 census said there are 632 residents of the community north of the Lake-Cook county line.

Under state law, the village can be disbanded through a referendum if 51 per cent of persons voting in the last election so petition. In Deer Park, that means only 53 valid signatures are required to force a vote on dissolution and residents of the community are gathering the names.

What's so wrong in Deer Park that the residents would want to disband the 18-year-old corporation?

"Nothing really. There aren't many problems here. It's just the way the decisions are being made," said Roberta Schmitt, one of those petitioning to end the village.

"The signers want to be heard. It's a matter of communication," said trustee Alice Grogan.

After 18 years, "The village has served its purpose," said Carl Johnson, one of the original trustees in 1957 and self-described "anchor man of the village."

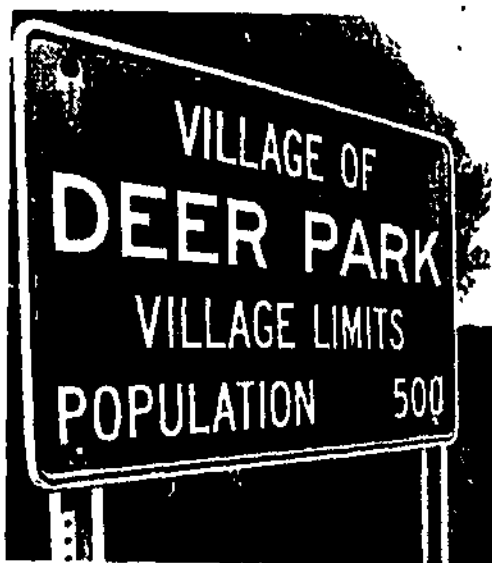

THE ISSUES are not complex. The village board, under the leadership of President Charles Brown, recently

Accord reached on gas price ads

An agreement has been reached to eliminate misleading advertising of gasoline prices by Illinois service stations, Illinois Atty. Gen. William J. Scott said Wednesday.

The agreement between Scott's office, the Illinois Dept. of Agriculture and three Illinois gasoline wholesalers, Checker Oil Co.; GO-Tano Service Stations Inc. and Disco Oil Co., has been placed in the form of an order by Cook County Circuit Court Judge Arthur L. Dunno, Scott said.

The accord settled a suit filed by the wholesalers seeking an injunction to prevent the state agriculture department — which is responsible for enforcing weights and measures legislation — from enforcing a ruling which said displayed or advertised gas prices must equal the price stated on gasoline pumps.

Teachers, board make progress

Contract negotiations between teachers and board of education members in Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 have resumed, but neither side expects to reach an agreement before school starts Aug. 20. The two groups met for two hours Wednesday, exchanged counter-proposals and set their next meeting date for Aug. 28. Both sides said Wednesday's talks were "positive." "We're satisfied we can go ahead," said Richard Zweiback, Dist. 15's professional board negotiator. "There is a better feeling of give and take," he said. Sandra Johnson, president of the teacher's union, said, "The indication today is that we're no longer at an impasse."

2,000 sign home-rule petitions

More than 2,000 Arlington Heights residents have signed petitions calling for a vote on home-rule powers, but they (petitions) will not be used unless the board gives the go-ahead for the Chicago Bears Stadium without voter approval. Mrs. Mickey Hartley, 104 E. Hawthorne St., petition drive organizer, said her group has collected 77 petitions and "I'm sure there will be many more coming in." The petitioners needed to collect signatures totaling 10 per cent of the number of voters who participated in the last election to call for a referendum. Only about 1,200 signatures were needed. Mrs. Hartley said the board's decision to hold a referendum on the stadium has had little effect on the number of people signing the petitions.

Tax may not be deductible

Hoffman Estates residents may not be able to deduct the village's 3 per cent utility tax from their 1975 federal income tax. Village officials have requested the Internal Revenue Service to send them a written ruling on the matter. Finance Director Keith Wendland said the ruling is expected shortly, but IRS officials told the Herald Wednesday the tax is not deductible "if the rate differs from that of the general sales tax..." Hoffman Estates officials, however, said when the tax was imposed Jan. 1, they were told by the IRS the levy would be deductible because it is a temporary tax to expire Dec. 31.

Hospitals' costs increased 17.5% in last 6 months

by KAREN BLECHA

Costs at community hospitals rose an average 17.5 per cent during the last six months and hospital officials predicted Wednesday that the price tag would continue to grow.

The cost increase is the worst in 15 years, said David Drake, of the American Hospital Assn., speaking at the AHA convention in Chicago.

AHA officials said it costs a hospital an average $131.20 per patient per day, which covers room, board, tests and other hospital procedures but not the cost of the attending physician. The cost is passed on to the consumer.

The $131.20, based on national average of costs from January to June, is more than a 50 per cent increase over the $83.61 patients paid four years ago, AHA officials said. In 1972 the cost was $93.13; in 1973, $101.54 and in 1974, $111.66.

Drake said the inflation is the result of an increase in hospital employee wages and the price of supplies. He pointed out while hospitals on the average increased personnel by 12.6 per cent the first six months of this year, wages went up 29.7 per cent.

He said quantity of goods and services purchased by hospitals increased 13.7 per cent, while the price of those goods and services rose 44 per cent.

Figures released by the AHA also showed a 3 per cent drop in hospital admissions nationally with a 9 per cent increase in outpatient services. H. Robert Cathcart, chairman elect of the AHA board of trustees, said the increase in outpatient services and the drop in admissions was the result of attempts by hospitals to deliver as much outpatient care as possible to save patients money.

He speculated the drop in admissions could be because the unemployed cannot take advantage of employee hospital insurance and may be postponing medical care.

Cathcart said the national average occupancy rate at hospitals across the country is 76.7 per cent but stressed there is no ideal occupancy rate or break-even point.

SPOKESMEN AT area hospitals reported occupancy rates of 87.5 per cent for the last 9 months at Northwest Community Hospital in Arlington

Israeli warplanes raid guerrilla camps

by United Press International
Israeli warplanes raided several Palestinian guerrilla training camps near the Roman ruins of Baalbek in east Lebanon Wednesday in apparent retaliation for a guerrilla attack inside Israel earlier in the day, Palestinian sources in Beirut said.

Guerrilla sources said at least three persons were killed and 37 others were wounded, 30 of them civilians.

The Israeli military command in Tel Aviv said Israeli warplanes attacked one guerrilla base deep inside Lebanon in a retaliatory raid.

Spokesmen in Beirut for the leftist Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine and the Palestinian Liberation Organization said their camps both came under attack from three waves of Israeli planes.

A Lebanese military communique reported the air attacks on the region, but gave no details.

The raids came on the eve of the arrival in Israel of Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, resuming his diplomatic shuttle to seal an interim peace agreement between Egypt and Israel.

Israel Ambassador Simcha Dinitz, who has been holding talks with Kissinger in Washington, said the negotiations have gone as far as they could without the on-the-spot mediation of Kissinger.

Kissinger left Washington Wednesday night, and will arrive in Tel Aviv Thursday. On Friday he will fly to Egypt. His itinerary after that was open, but he planned to visit Syria, Jordan and Saudi Arabia on the 10-day trip. If successful, this probably would be Kissinger's last such effort as American secretary of state.

Dinitz told an Israeli radio interviewer the Washington discussions did not deal with the state of public opinion in Israel, where right-wing groups have staged demonstrations opposing the pact all week, "but like the rest of us, Kissinger reads the papers and listens to the radio."

Protest demonstrations took place Wednesday at the Jerusalem homes of Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin and Foreign Minister Yigal Allon. A few of the demonstrators locked themselves in one of the rooms in the Allon home and police and border guards moved in and carried them away.

A military command spokesman in Tel Aviv said the warplanes struck at the base of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine in the region of El Hams, about 45 miles east of Beirut near the Syrian border.

The Marxist PFLP leads the so-called "rejection front" of guerrilla groups opposed to any peaceful Middle East solution.

AN ISRAELI policeman fingerprints one of the squad attack apparently timed to coincide with three Arab guerrillas killed by security forces near U.S. Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger's latest Hanita, Northern Israel Wednesday in a death Middle East shuttle trip.

Evidence relating to RFK death reportedly destroyed

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Bullet-scarred ceiling panels from the Ambassador Hotel's pantry and the left sleeve of Robert F. Kennedy's coat were destroyed shortly after the senator's assassination in 1968, a special counsel in the city attorney's office told a newspaper Wednesday.

Dion Morrow was quoted by The Daily Journal, a legal newspaper, as saying that some of the evidence related to Kennedy's death no longer exists.

"There were no x-rays made of the ceiling panels and the panels were destroyed in June of 1969," he told the newspaper. "There was no place to keep them — you can't fit ceiling panels into a card file."

"The left sleeve of the senator's coat disappeared before the trial. But there was no significance to the sleeve. Kennedy's shirt is in the possession of the court, and there are no bullet holes in the left sleeve."

A superior court judge last week ordered a new ballistics study in an effort to determine whether some of the bullets fired in the Ambassador Hotel's kitchen the night Kennedy and several bystanders were shot came from another gun besides the weapon wielded by Kennedy's convicted assassin, Sirhan Sirhan.

Morrow said he learned from someone within the Los Angeles Police Department that in June, 1969, a "low-echelon" police employee decided to destroy the ceiling panels because the Sirhan trial was over and the panels were not introduced as evidence.

Nixon breaks silence on Watergate

the White House tapes show Nixon saying: "I want you all to stonewall it, let them plead the Fifth Amendment, cover it up or anything else, if it will save the plan. On the other hand, I would prefer, as I said to you, that you do it the other way."

In the deposition, Nixon stressed repeatedly the phrase "I would prefer it the other way" meant that his top aides should go before the Watergate grand jury and testify openly.

With that exception there was little new revealed about the Watergate scandal.

On other matters, Nixon said:

- His secretary, Rose Mary Woods, was the route through which close friends and Cabinet members dealt directly with the President. This, Nixon said, prevented his being isolated by the so-called "palace guard" created by his two top aides, H. R. Haldeman and John D. Ehrlichman.
- He never called Watergate Judge John J. Sirica "a wop." Nixon said that when Dean told him Sirica was a "tough judge," Nixon replied "that's what I want." That quote was garbled in the tape transcript, Nixon said.

- Denied that jewelry and gifts given to him as president had been converted to personal use. "None of them has been sold and none have been appropriated," he said.

- The White House taping system was installed by Nixon on the advice of former President Lyndon B. Johnson, who had a similar system, Nixon said.

Rigid controls at veterans hospital

Foul play speculated in 7 deaths

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (UPI) — Amid speculation that someone may have deliberately used a paralyzing drug to kill patients, officials at the Veterans Administration Hospital Wednesday imposed rigid controls — as strict as those on narcotics — on all possibly suspect drugs.

Federal investigators sought to determine the reason for an alarming increase in respiratory failures. At least seven patients have died of such episodes at the hospital within the past month and the hospital has recently reported 40 cases of respiratory failure — total loss of breathing.

"The drugs that could be used, that could be involved, are now under as strict controls as narcotics," Dr. Laurence Foye Jr., deputy director of the Veterans Administration in Washington, said Wednesday.

A team of VA officials and the FBI conducted separate investigations.

Foye told a news conference the "most likely medication, if there is one involved," was muscle relaxers.

One of the drugs — succinyl-choline — was described in a medical manual as a drug that should be used "only by those skilled in the management of artificial respiration" since it can induce respiratory arrest.

Dr. Ronald Bishop, chief of medicine at the hospital, said earlier an intravenous tube taken from one of the victims showed possible traces of a drug used to induce paralysis. He said a quantity of paralyzing drugs was found in the refrigerator in the intensive care ward, and termed it an "inappropriate" place for the drugs.

The hospital had three cases of respiratory failure within one 20-minute period last Friday. The wave of such cases sparked alarm among hospital employees and led the facility's administrator, Arnold E. Moush, to ask the FBI for an investigation.

Foye said investigators were concentrating on 15 cases, two of them deaths. "We have reviewed all the cases in the past month and came up with 15 cases . . . If there were problems, they would be in these cases," he said. "We are going through these cases page by page."

"When you suddenly see an increasing number of cases, you are puzzled," Foye said.

One investigating source said there was a better than 50-50 chance that a killer was loose in the facility, which normally has an average daily patient population of 311.

Foye said this was just "speculation." He admitted the theory "is a possibility" but said so far "leads on drug misuse have led to nothing."

Czech jet crashes in Syria; 126 die

DAMASCUS, Syria (UPI) — A Soviet-made Czechoslovak jetliner with reported engine trouble crashed and exploded in flames in the desert outside Damascus Wednesday, killing 126 passengers and crew members. Only two persons survived.

A Syrian doctor miraculously escaped unhurt and a two-year-old girl survived but was reported in serious condition. Her Czech mother and Syrian father were among the dead.

A one-year-old boy was pulled out of the wreckage alive, but died shortly afterward.

Among the 115 Arab and European passengers who perished were eight children and the Czech military attaché to Damascus, Col. Jaroslav Pomarek, who was returning from a vacation in Prague.

The spokesman said the Ilyushin 62 airliner on a night flight from Prague with 128 persons aboard crashed in the hilly desert region of Wadile El-Rabel, 13 miles east of Damascus airport during its landing approach shortly after 3 a.m.

Damascus airport sources said the plane's pilot contacted the airport control tower only moments before the crash and reported "something had gone wrong" with one of the plane's four engines. Syrian and Czech officials refused to confirm this report, however, and said the cause of the crash was still under investigation.

Another unconfirmed report said the plane had approached too low and hit a sand dune.

When it struck the ground, the plane exploded into flames that consumed the fuselage, witnesses said.

A photographer reaching the crash site hours later said rescuers were still sifting through twisted, smoldering wreckage, pulling out bodies charred beyond recognition.

Guerrillas on attack in Argentina

Left-wing rebels killed five policemen Wednesday in a shooting and bombing spree that included a sniper attack on government headquarters in Cordoba, Argentina and led the government of Isabel Peron to order army intervention. Raul Lacabanne, an official in the provincial government, said seven policemen were wounded and "several" guerrillas also were killed or wounded by police gunfire. In Santiago del Estero, meanwhile, ex-president Arturo Illia called for the resignation of Mrs. Peron as a patriotic act.

Gomes predicts Portugal government switch

President Francisco da Costa Gomes, buckling to heavy pressure from dissident military officers, said Wednesday Portugal's current government would be out in a matter of days. "It is not simple to be a member of a government team whose duration will expire in a few days," the president said.

Liz, Burton will remarry

• Richard Burton and Elizabeth Taylor have been reconciled and plan to remarry, their press spokesman said Wednesday. The two will go to Israel next week at the invitation of the Israeli minister of culture, and Burton said "We might be married" there. Burton and Liz were divorced on June 27, 1974. Liz had said "Life with Richard became intolerable."

• Midtown Manhattan police have reported their first arrest for drunken stagecoach driving — the first this century anyway. Mounted policeman

Leeverne Wilson saw a four-horse stagecoach, used for advertising, careening west on 45th Street. He galloped after the coach and caught it, but not until the driver sideswiped two automobiles. It took a while to figure out charges against Bernard Symanski, 44, but it was decided, among other things, to charge him with driving while intoxicated and overdriving an animal.

• W. T. Hardison IV, who once bilked two banks out of more than $1 million, now tools around Nashville, Tenn. in a borrowed cab with only his furry adviser, the Commissioner, at his side. The Commissioner, an 11-year old Yorkshire Terrier, is rumored to be the only soul besides Hardison, who knows what happened to the money. W. T. as he is affectionately called, swears he spent the money traversing the globe.

• Edgar M. Bronfman, 46, Seagram whiskey magnate, Wednesday married ex-British barmaid Georgiana Eileen Webb, 25, to the harp strains of "Love Song" on the lawn of his sprawling Westchester County, N.Y. estate. The nuptials took place just four days after the FBI rescued his kidnapped son, Samuel Bronfman II, 21.

• Warner Brothers has announced the studio will make a sequel to "The Exorcist," which has earned more than $100 million. To be called "The Exorcist, Part Two," the film will again star Linda Blair, who played a young girl possessed by the Devil in the first movie.

LONDON (UPI) — The Soviet Union has spent 50 per cent more than the United States on naval shipbuilding in the past 10 years and the still growing Russian fleet can only be intended for aggressive action, the authoritative Jane's Fighting Ships said Wednesday.

In a foreword to its 1975-76 edition, Jane's editor, Capt. John E. Moore, said, "There is no answer to the question which of the superpowers navies is 'Number one.'"

"But," he said, "the Soviet Union has spent 50 per cent more than the United States on naval shipbuilding in the past 10 years and is currently expanding one-third more than the United States for this purpose."

"The ever-growing Soviet Navy has outrun the legitimate requirements of national defense and has no logical merchant defense role in time of war. Until the adherents of unilateral disarmament can persuade the Soviets that they should reduce their massive armaments to the level of necessity, the NATO nations must abide by the lesson of history — unnecessarily large forces are intended for aggressive action."

Jane's said the French navy is rapidly becoming the largest in Western Europe. It said the British navy, once the world's mightiest, while "by no means on its beam ends," would be "desperately stretched in the event of a crisis."

It said China now has 58 submarines — seven more than a year ago — and has the world's largest fleet of small fast attack craft. But it said the Chinese navy is primarily a defensive one.

Deer Park seeks to end era as town

voted to pave some interior roads, contract for police service with Barrington and started a study for sewers.

The decisions split the town into two camps: the older areas versus the two newer subdivisions. Although the first petition fell three names short of forcing a referendum to dissolve the village on their first attempt, they vow to petition until they get the 51 percent from the last election that is needed to call for the question.

Mrs. Schmitt, a 20-year resident of the area, said the actions of the board are high-handed.

She and other petitioners would rather that it not come to a vote, but they think they have no other way to get the board's ear, Mrs. Schmitt said.

The "improvements" voted by the board are unwanted and unnecessary, she said. Unimproved roads discourage drag racers; the Lake County Sheriff provides adequate protection and improved sewers would just encourage more development of the rural area, she said.

Johnson, the original board member, said the village "served its purpose" and is no longer needed. He said Deer Park was incorporated to block a developer's plans for incorporating on his own with higher density.

THE NEEDS ARE met by county services for police, road repair and snow plowing, said Johnson. He said he is sorry that others do not get that service. "But there's nothing I can do about it."

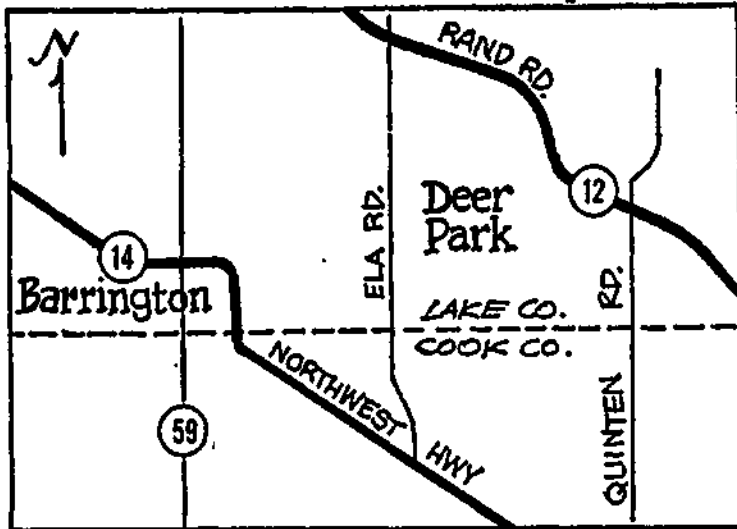

Trustee Grogan said some could have gotten the impression that the board is arrogant from the board's effort to strike a balance between an efficient meeting and one that gives everyone a chance to be heard.

"It's difficult to run an efficient meeting. People feel they aren't getting a chance to be heard. We can't turn the meeting over to the public and they feel put down," Mrs. Grogan said.

Part of the problem, Mrs. Grogan said, is that the people are not talking with trustees outside the formal board setting.

"The trustees will try to do anything the people want — if they just let us know," she said.

EVEN THOUGH almost half the people voting in the last election want to abolish the village, Mrs. Grogan said "I feel this is a good thing. It's important to know what the people are thinking. We never like to see extremes, but we'll see what we can do."

Village Pres. Brown is not so sure the petition is such a good idea. "It bothers me no end. This has been a labor of love. It hurts — really hurts," Brown said.

Like Mrs. Grogan, Brown said part of the problem is that unhappy residents haven't conveyed their wishes to the board in the past. Brown said the petitioners have assumed a "begrudging attitude," when village funds were spent on services for others.

"There is a definite communication problem here. Unfortunately, they don't tell me what they're unhappy about. And of that, I accuse them very harshly," he said.

Brown said citizen apathy is almost staggering at times. When the petition was first put forward, he said there were only four citizens at the meeting.

"I asked them what was wrong and they didn't say boo," he said. "What am I supposed to do if they won't tell me what's wrong?"

HE SAID HE IS convinced the referendum, should it be held, will be defeated by a 3 to 1 margin. But he is still upset, and sounds wounded, by its proposal.

"I would expect some input about their problems, but this hasn't been the case at all," he said.

Brown said if the referendum is successful, residents would find it hard to reincorporate as protection from large developers or losing area to neighboring towns.

"Their problems are mine, too. I have no personal ax to grind in this. But if the timbers start breaking away, the village will sink," he said.

For good or ill, the revolutionary idea of the citizens' absolute power over their government still is struggling in Deer Park.

Douglas golf course ready in fall

The County Forest Preserve's newest golf course in the Paul Douglas Forest Preserve may be ready for partial play by late fall.

The 200-acre, championship course under construction in the preserve at Roselle and Central Roads, Hoffman Estates, had been expected to open this summer, but poor weather during the past two years of construction has delayed completion.

Frank Stein, forest preserve district supervisor of special activities, Tuesday said 9 holes of the 18-hole course may be ready by late fall. "We would have been ready this summer, but the rain really set us back," he said.

Although golf play will not begin for several months, Stein said the course's driving range has been opened. The range's 40 tees can be used from 9 a.m. to 10 p.m. daily for a cost of $1.25 for a bucket of balls.

taken a break from his studies to work for the Arlington Heights Park District, of which his father, Charles, is a past president.

"TOMMY WORKED for us part time, just seasonal at first," said Angelo Capulli, director of maintenance for the district. "He came to me and asked to work full-time. He had been in recreation and concession sales but he said he wanted to work maintenance."

His father's position was not something the young Cronin tried to use for his advantage, Capulli said. "When he asked for the job he told me he didn't want it to be a criteria," he said.

Capulli said his co-workers are making a donation to the society in Tommy's name.

Mrs. Figlio said the lingering tragedy brought the family together.

"The family became so close during his illness (18 months), Tommy never wanted us to worry. He told us he was going to get out of the hospital and not to worry about him. He was a little champ," she said.

"PEOPLE who didn't know us were kind and good to him. Even the nurses donated blood for him. The people showed love," she said.

"It was a blessing when he died because he was so ill. We wanted to do something for him because he always told us that life was so neat," she said.

The sale will be from 10 a.m. until dark Saturday and Sunday at the Cronin home across the street from Frontier Park. Running the sale will be his brother James, 26, and sisters Patricia, 28, Mary Lee, 21, and Janny, 15.

Flood control gives beauty, recreation

by JERRY THOMAS

The muted rumble of the massive dirt mover as it cuts lake basins in the Busse Woods Forest Preserve is sweet music to Jim Takahashi's ears. Takahashi, construction engineer with the Illinois Division of Water Resources, heads the Busse Woods Reservoir site excavation project, part of the Salt Creek Watershed flood control plan.

"I don't really see the machinery or chewed up landscape; in my mind's eye it is transformed into the serene, lake-dotted landscape that will soon be here," said Takahashi.

He has supervised the excavation project since the first dirt was dug out of the main pool in late 1973.

TAKAHASHI AND resident engineer William Doeringfeld gauge the weather by the amount of cubic yards of dirt it will allow them to move that day. They both hate rain.

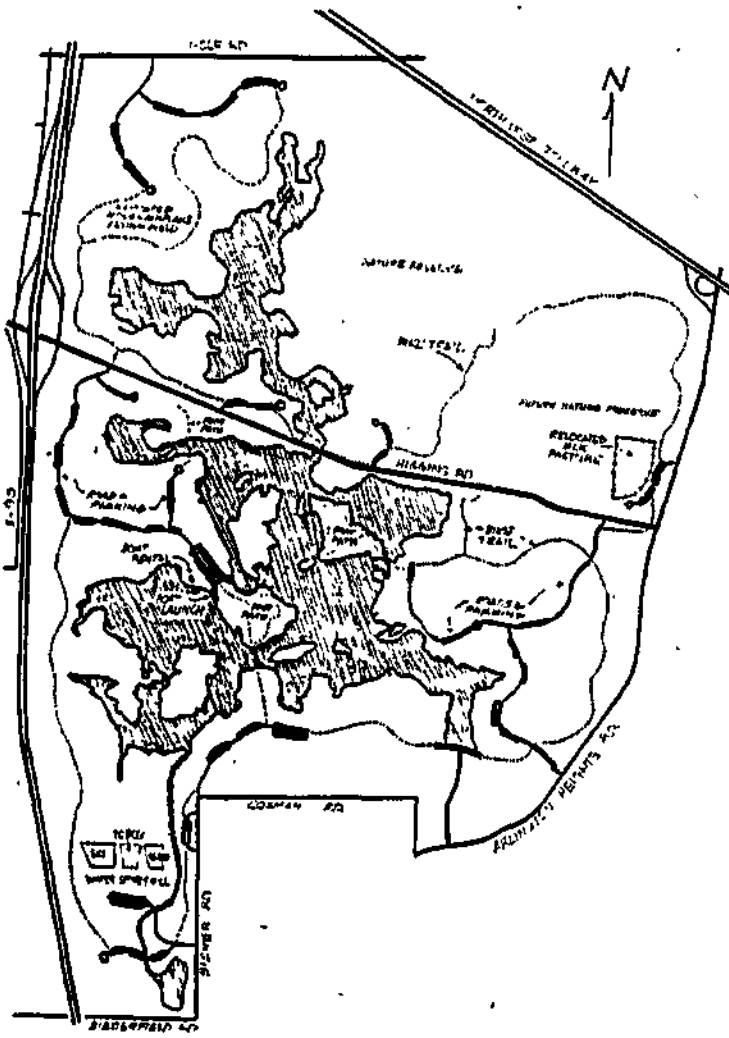

The massive dirt moving project involves excavating more than one million cubic feet of dirt. This is just part of the damming and improvements that eventually will create a 589-acre lake and connecting waterways and smaller basins.

The Division of Water Resources is responsible for the reservoir work it expects to tame Salt Creek, and alleviate flooding in the area.

The Busse Woods project is in its final phase of construction, with more than two thirds of the excavation completed and only minor shaping still to come.

Although Takahashi's job is to create a system of waterways and a reservoir to curb flooding, he also has an opportunity to create a natural recreation area by working closely with the Cook County Forest Preserve District.

THE FOREST PRESERVE owns the land and is planning to develop it as a recreation area to attract an estimated 3-million people each year.

Although the watershed project covers about 32,000 acres, the Busse Woods area is approximately 3,600 acres.

Takahashi said that with luck and dry weather, the remaining 850,000 cubic yards of dirt to be excavated will be moved by December.

Two of the three dams are built, and the main dam at the southeast border of the project near Arlington Heights and Cosman roads in Elk Grove Township should be constructed by late 1976.

Although some surface water has partially filled the main lake and pools, flooding will not be complete until the main dam is constructed.

APPROXIMATELY $9 million went into the site excavation flood control portion of the project. The total project is expected to cost $33 million.

State studies show Salt Creek caused an estimated $10 million in flood damage on suburban communities, including Elk Grove Village, Schaumburg, Rolling Meadows and Palatine, during 1972.

"The years of temporary mess that includes dust and construction noise is worth the final benefit — the end of flooding for people who live along the Salt Creek Basin," said Takahashi.

A tour of the construction area gives a hint of its recreation potential.

Although the Busse Woods area is surrounded by Schaumburg, Elk Grove Village and Palatine, the land has been contoured so its users can enjoy open vistas of water dotted landscape, without a background of houses or roads. A ski hill and hiking and nature trails also are planned.

FOREST PRESERVE Forester John Froehlich, who has also been concerned with the project since its beginning, works closely with the Division of Waterways engineers and acts as liaison between the district and the department.

Froehlich is impatient. He said the area already is a haven for waterfowl and small animals, despite the heavy construction.

Two local students in summer program

Two Arlington Heights students were among 1,000 others from four countries and 28 states to participate in the Third Annual Summer Youth Program at Michigan Technological University.

Bill Hansen, a senior at Arlington High School, worked on performing, producing, directing and camera techniques in television production. Marisa Naujokas, an eighth grader at Our Lady of the Wayside School in Arlington Heights, learned about microscopes, cameras and slide preparation in her study of photomicrography.

New 'Super Bowl' lottery to give away $15 million

A new $1 Illinois Lottery "Super Bowl" game will give away more than $15 million in 12 weeks.

Illinois Lottery Supt. Ralph Bate said Wednesday the new game will include a $1 million grand prize and have a quarter of a million winners in all. He said the new program, which begins next month, will offer 16 chances for weekly cash prizes ranging from $40 to $100,000.

The tickets also include a special "playoff" section that allows winners to qualify for big cash prizes and the ultimate jackpot of $1 million. Playoff qualifiers will win a minimum of $1,000 and a maximum of $34,000. The $34,000 winners will qualify for a special, $1 million Super Bowl drawing Jan. 9, 1976.

The first Super Bowl drawing will be Sept. 12, and the first playoff drawing will be Sept. 19.

Illinois briefs

Klan activities rapped

A leader of the Aurora black community Wednesday called for concerted federal, state, and local action to curb operation of the Ku Klux Klan, which he said has "threatened and humiliated" the black residents of the community. The Rev. Robert Wesley, head of Aurora's Operation PUSH, charged that law enforcement officials have done nothing to stem "abusive and racist" Klan operations.

Walker hits school firings

The Chicago schools should save money by cutting middle management and bureaucracy instead of cutting teaching jobs, Gov. Daniel Walker said Wednesday. Walker said Chicago has a lion's share of state education funds and charged that Joseph Hannon, Chicago school superintendent, has no reason to fire teachers.

Hannon has said Walker's budget cuts will require the elimination of 3,000 jobs, including 1,700 teachers. "The state is providing more than enough money in next year's budget to make such sweeping firings unnecessary," Walker said. "The state has provided for Chicago over a half billion dollars, a minimum of $505 million next year." Walker said the figure is 25 per cent higher than last year, including funds for new school construction.

Cooper works for GOP nod
Republican gubernatorial hopeful Richard H. Cooper said Wednesday he will work his way into the governor's mansion. Cooper said he will work in coal mines, on farms and at homes for the aged. The Chicago businessman said he plans to do "hard work with my hands to expand my understanding of Illinois' wide-ranging economic problems." Cooper is running against former U. S. Atty. James Thompson in the GOP gubernatorial primary.

Commitment law favored

A three-judge federal panel has upheld a law allowing the state to commit a mentally ill person to an institution without proving the person has a history of dangerous conduct. The panel, in a split decision, found that the state law does not violate an individual's constitutional right to due process of law. U. S. Appeals Court Judge Phillip W. Tone, who wrote the majority opinion, said the law complied with a recent Supreme Court ruling that held that a state may not confine a mentally ill individual who is not dangerous and who is capable of surviving in freedom himself.

Heights; 87.6 per cent for the last year at Lutheran General Hospital in Park Ridge; 83 per cent for the last 6 months at Alexian Brothers Medical Center in Elk Grove Village; and 74 per cent for the last 6 months at Holy Family Hospital in Des Plaines.

Both Cathcart and Drake predicted costs would continue to rise with inflation. Drake estimated costs would rise another 13 to 15 per cent by the end of 1975.

"This kind of inflation doesn't help anyone," he said, pointing out that the increase in charges is not paying for any more or better hospital services but is simply keeping current quality "at a plateau."

Cathcart said hospitals were working to keep costs down and in the last 15 years have become more cost-conscious. He said a possible solution to the cost problem is hospital specialization within certain areas so hospitals would not duplicate services.

Harper students can take Euclid to school

Harper College students heading for classes Monday can take Euclid Avenue, college officials said Wednesday.

Euclid, which has been extended this summer, is not completed between Plum Grove Road and Roselle Road but "we think that will be the best way to get to the college," said William Mann, college vice president.

The college entrance on Euclid and the one on Algonquin Road will both be open, Mann said, but road construction on Roselle will probably mean the college's western entrance will be closed.

Official refuses to leave

A federal official who refused to leave his job and locked himself in his Chicago office to prevent his transfer was removed Wednesday by government security police.

Craig A. Ford, equal opportunity director for the Housing and Urban Development Dept. in Chicago, was released without charge after being held in federal custody a short time.

Ford was placed on administrative leave, but will continue to draw his $24,540 a year salary. He barricaded himself in his office Tuesday to protest his transfer, which he called "rampant racism." Ford said he was transferred to keep him from making the department adhere to guidelines for aiding minority building contractors and tradesmen.

LOWELL BECK, a graduate of Buffalo Grove High School, tests a blood sample at the Lutheran General blood bank.

by DOROTHY OLIVER

Lowell Beck, Richard Rosenquist and Laura Naujokas are exploring the tip of the medical profession's iceberg. The three high school students, all future doctors, are spending their summer at Lutheran General Hospital working long hours in the laboratories without pay.

The three are among four winners of work-learn scholarships awarded by the Northwest Suburban branch of the American Cancer Society. Although the students do not receive a salary, the scholarship pays for their lunches and transportation.

Lowell, a graduate of Buffalo Grove High School and a resident of Arlington Heights, is working on a project in the hospital's blood bank studying the amount of antibodies built up by pregnant women with negative blood types.

LAURA, A SENIOR at Sacred Heart of Mary High School and a resident of Arlington Heights, works in the hematology lab experimenting with ways to test blood clotting.

Rich, a senior at Prospect High School and a Mount Prospect resident, also works in hematology, counting blood cells and feeding information into a computer.

"We're constantly learning, always asking questions and reading up on things," said Rich. "The more you read the dumber you feel. There's just so much."

All three planned a career in medicine, and the summer at Lutheran General has confirmed their decision. Laura is thinking of specializing in obstetrics, Rich is interested in either pediatrics or internal medicine, and aspiring doctors medical realities

Lowell is considering entering general practice.

"I have a more realistic goal now, after being at the hospital," said Lowell. "It's given me a better understanding of what's going on. When you're a doctor you need to understand the blood bank, chemistry and hematology. I'm learning a lot about everything on a simplified level while I'm here."

DR. TAKASHI Okuno, hospital pathologist who supervises the program, said the students are not just given busy work but are assigned to research projects, working alongside hospital personnel.

"We start from scratch with them — perhaps all they've had is classroom chemistry," said Okuno. "The work they are doing is indirectly related to cancer," he said explaining the scholarship.

Rich spends his days doing blood tests, making slides and analyzing his work under the microscope. "I was trained with blood that had already been tested. Now I do it myself," Rich said. "It makes me tense at times."

"Some things you see are unnerving," Laura said. "It scares me to think if I make it, I'll have a person's life in my hands. Some people look at a doctor like he's God — he's always depended on."

IN THEIR day-to-day contact with doctors, nurses and technicians, the students are seeing the realistic side of a glamorous profession.

"It's unbelievable the amount of effort doctors put out, and the hours are ridiculous," said Laura. "The TV shows always show doctors as really having a lot of time to come out and take care of people at any time. But that's really utopia."

MICROSCOPES AND SLIDES occupy most of Richard Rosenquist's time these days. A student at Prospect High School, he has spent the summer working in the hematology lab at Lutheran General Hospital.

Tax increases 'inevitable' without the federal subsidy

Townships set to battle for revenue-sharing funds

by DIANE MERMIGAS

Suburban township supervisors plan to battle for the continuation of federal revenue-sharing funds when the program is reviewed this fall, because they say township tax increases are inevitable without the federal subsidy.

Townships began funding and establishing a number of social services agencies when revenue-sharing funds were first made available in 1971. Township officials say the services will be continued even without the availability of revenue-sharing funds, but at a direct cost to the township taxpayer.

As a result, township officials are making every effort to make sure they get their slice of the federal money next time around, despite the adverse opinion of groups like the League of Women Voters.

BUT MEMBERS OF the Illinois League of Women Voters believe "that any amount of revenue sharing townships receive is too much," said Ann Scollay, a representative of the league's county board.

The league has sent letters to state representatives, urging the continuation of the revenue sharing program without including townships.

Palatine, Wheeling, Elk Grove, Schaumburg and Maine township officials have sent letters to their own Congressional representatives, urging them to renew the program. Palatine Township has even sent letters to every member of Congress.

"We sent each Congressman an account of how we have spent our revenue sharing to go on record showing what can be done with the funds on a township level," said Howard Olsen, Palatine Township supervisor.

Palatine and other area townships have allocated most of its revenue sharing to social agencies for the aged, poor and youth and to mental health organizations.

Palatine Township has specifically used its funds to open and operate a child care center and a senior citizens center. Palatine and Wheeling townships plan to use federal revenue sharing funds to partially finance the construction of new town halls.

"TOWNSHIP government has existed in Palatine for 122 years, and I don't think it will collapse just because we don't receive anymore revenue sharing. We could continue to support the agencies that we presently give revenue sharing money to with tax revenues," Olsen said.

Richard Hall, Elk Grove Township supervisor, said that the townships would provide "much less financial support to these social services agencies if we only had our tax revenues and not revenue sharing to rely on."

"We support groups like Shelter Inc., the Northwest Opportunities Center and Clearbrook Center. We have worked with Schaumburg Township to establish a cooperative mental health agency," he said.

"It would be a lot tougher to support agencies like these without revenue sharing funds. And it would mean an eventual tax increase for township residents without the revenue sharing," Hall said.

James Dowd, Maine Township supervisor, said, "There is no doubt that the townships would have to have a very substantial tax increase without the revenue sharing program to continue to pay for social services to the aged, the sick, the poor and to the youth. That's why we are pushing for the renewal of revenue sharing so hard," Dowd said.

V. A. Laubenstein, Schaumburg Township supervisor, said that residents "have had a greater voice in how the townships spend revenue sharing funds" and that townships have made the funds available to groups that could not receive funding from other municipalities.

"REVENUE SHARING has definitely played a big part in township government over the past five years. It has allowed townships to grow and play a more responsive role in government," he said.

Federal revenue sharing funds, allocated to all municipalities on the basis of population, have comprised 20-40 per cent of annual township budgets.

Each township has received a varying amount of revenue sharing since the program began in 1971. Elk Grove Township has received an average $180,000 a year, Schaumburg has received about $32,351 since the program began and Palatine Township has received about $312,339 since the program began.

Maine Township has received about $300,000 and Wheeling Township has received about $594,000 in revenue sharing since 1971.

Mrs. Scollay said The League of Women Voters, which has traditionally opposed township government, could have "some bearing" on the final decision made on the federal revenue sharing program.

"WE FEEL THAT cities, villages, counties and other municipalities should be getting the revenue sharing funds that townships are receiving. The agencies that townships are allocating revenue sharing funds to now could receive the money from other municipalities instead," Mrs. Scollay said.

U.S. Rep. Abner J. Mikva, D-10, said there have been

"rumblings" in Congress about cutting back on the revenue sharing program by eliminating townships and small municipalities.

Mikva said, "The townships, more than any other form of government, have used the revenue sharing funds to start new programs that were not being offered. I know because I've conducted a survey in the 10th district to see how they are spending the funds. I'm going to push for continuation of the revenue sharing program, including the townships."

About 70 per cent of the townships that responded to Mikva's survey said they expect additional tax relief for residents because of the availability of revenue sharing funds.

About 40 per cent of the responding townships said they have provided new services with the program funds and 35 per cent said they have expanded their services, he said.

Edward Murnane, an aide to U.S. Rep. Philip M. Crane, R-12, said Crane "prefers to see the federal government provide tax cuts and budget cuts so that local municipalities could raise the money themselves without the need for a revenue sharing program."

Crane feels the federal government should be eliminated as the "middleman" in the revenue sharing program, Murnane said.

"The government takes tax money from the local governments, skims off enough of the funds to pay for the administrative costs of the program, and returns the remaining funds to the local governments in the form of revenue sharing. He would rather see an alternative to the program," Murnane said.

Many Labor Day events slated within easy reach

Families throughout the Northwest suburbs are planning to celebrate Labor Day weekend next week with short vacation trips.

To help travelers, The Touring Dept. of the Chicago Motor Club has compiled the following lists of some weekend destinations within a reasonable driving distance.

• New Glarus, Wis.: This Wisconsin town is at the junction of Wis. Rtes. 39 and 69, about 40 miles north of Freeport, Ill. On Labor Day weekend New Glarus celebrates its annual "Wilhelm Tell Festival" which attracts people throughout the Midwest.

Highlighting the weekend is the Wilhelm Tell Drama adapted from the famous story of the Swiss fight for independence. The play is staged in a natural outdoor theater. Activities also include a nightly festival of Swiss entertainment, a free street dance downtown and an outdoor art fair Sunday.

The drama is performed Aug. 30-Sept. 1 at 1 p.m. Reserved seats are $3. General admission is $2 for adults and $1 for children under 12. The drama is in English on Aug. 30 and Sept. 1 and in German on Aug. 31.

Other attractions here include the Chalet of the Golden Fleece, a typical Swiss mountain chalet; the Swiss Miss Lace factory and the Swiss Historical Village.

• Mount Pleasant, Iowa: The nostalgic whistle of the steam engine will sound over this southeast Iowa community Aug. 28 through Sept. 1 as the Midwest Old Settlers and Threshers Assn. stages its 26th annual five-day festival of steam.

A $3 fee admits an individual for one or all five days. Children under high school age are free. A Bicentennial pageant will be presented Aug. 28 and Aug. 31 at 8:30 p.m. All seats are $2.

Grand Ole Opry talent will visit the festival Aug. 29-Sept. 1 performing two shows daily.

Four trolleys, including a second open-bench car, will provide nostalgic rides and the Midwest Central Railroad will make its usual runs.

• Hessport, Ind.: What began as a weekend demonstration by a threshers' club has become a major Labor Day attraction in northern Indiana.

On display at this annual event are antique steam trains, steam threshers, sawmills, antique gasoline engines and traction engine rides. Unusual livestock model trains huff and puff down small scale tracks, while a flea market of antique autos and an electric generating plant illustrate human ingenuity. The Steam Show is sponsored by the LaPorte County Historical Society and will be held on LaPorte County Road, 1000 North, about 2½ miles east of Ind. 39, halfway between the LaPorte exit of the Indiana Tollway and the M-239 exit of I-94. The show runs between Aug. 30 and Sept. 1.

• Bonneyville Mill, Bristol, Ind.: Located on County Road 31, south of Ind. 210, approximately 2 miles east of Bristol, the oldest existing grist mill in Elkhart County (about 1837) lends a touch of history to the greenery of Bonneyville Mill County Park. Excellent for family outings, facilities include picnic tables, a large, clean shelter house and charcoal grills. Log jams and deep running pools in the Little Elkhart River provide trout angling during the season. An Indiana fishing license and trout stamp are required.

• Hannibal, Mo.: Samuel Clemens (Mark Twain) lived in this famous Missouri town as a boy and later used it as the setting for many incidents in Huckleberry Finn and The Adventures of Tom Sawyer. Sites worth a visit include Mark Twain's Boyhood Home and Museum, Mark Twain Cave, Riverview Park and the Rockcliff Mansion. Across from the boyhood home are Mark Twain's father's law office with period courtroom furniture, the Becky Thatcher House and Grant's Drug Store, displaying old apothecary items. Hannibal is located on the Mississippi River and U.S. 36.

• Galena, Ill.: Located in the far northwestern part of the state, Galena is famous for the finest period architecture in the Midwest. Among the sites worth seeing are the Ulysses S. Grant home on Southlimer and 4th streets; the Galena Historical Museum, 211 S. Bench St.; Dowling House, Main and Diagonal streets; Market House State Memorial, Commerce streets; and the Stockade on Main Street.

Herald opinion

Let's rebuild
a downtown

Arlington Heights officials are wrestling once again with the perplexing question of what to do about the village's quietly decaying central business district.

It is a familiar question around village hall, and to persons like L. A. Hanson, Arlington Heights village manager, it has been a continuing object of concern. When Hanson came to Arlington Heights 18 years ago, the trustees were talking about it. Year after year, the debate has gone on, but little in the downtown has changed.

Today, there is renewed hope that strong and positive steps will be taken by the village, property owners and businessmen to start the redevelopment of what can be a vigorous and attractive downtown.

Although organizations have been formed in the past to confront this task, we are hopeful that two committees, one proposed, one in formation, may begin to assign responsibility and create excitement for the revitalized downtown.

Recently elected Village Pres. James T. Ryan has created a committee to study the need for a downtown parking garage.

Composed of 10 members of the plan commission, the business community and others, it will have to "winnow, sift, digest and just make very hard business-type decisions," Ryan has said. Whether a downtown parking garage, viewed by some as a cornerstone to development, is ever built depends on the effectiveness of this committee.

An equally important step toward redevelopment is the formation of an industrial development committee, as proposed by Trustee David Griffin. An advisory committee to the village board, such a commission could examine the chances for downtown revitalization. Griffin wants to encourage new business and industry, and downtown Arlington Heights certainly is a good location for such development.

Hanson says the obstacles to downtown redevelopment are "difficult to pinpoint." Possibly by forgetting about the futility of the past, the village and the business community can begin to see a future for this commercial center which has grown tired with the passing years and no longer is the vital core of a growing suburban community.

deserves challenge

The McHenry County Board last week acted against the needs of mentally retarded adults when it rejected a proposal to start a home for them near Woodstock.

The home, which would have housed 100 severely retarded adults from the Northwest suburbs and McHenry County, was rejected by a 22 to 1 vote.

The board's decision rejected the county zoning board's recommendation to rezone the property, as requested by the Suburban Townships Assn. for the Retarded (STAR).

Last Tuesday's decision makes little sense to us, and we encourage STAR to go to court to seek the right to buy the $1.3 million St. Joseph Novitiate.

The zoning board's decision had sharply limited the use of the buildings; the building would have been used strictly for a home, and no outpatient facilities were planned for the property. It's difficult enough for severely retarded adults to find a place to live; the McHenry County Board's decision is a violation of their rights and needs and should be overturned.

Tomorrow...

EDITORIAL: Mount Prospect's trustees should stop playing politics with the village's budget deficit.

He believes all of those downtown redevelopment plans.
Completely out of touch with reality!

'Federal rathole' eats taxes

by BOB LAHEY
Political Editor

While one should probably not anticipate dramatic change, there seems to be a glimmering of hope that sentiment for meaningful cuts in the wastrel spending by the federal government is growing.

Such diverse personalities as U. S. Rep. Philip M. Crane, R-12th, a devout conservative, and U. S. Rep. Abner J. Mikva, D-10th, a dedicated liberal, have recently issued proposals — by all indicators arrived at independently — that such sacred cows as the Interstate Commerce Commission and the Civil Aeronautics Board could be summarily disbanded with no adverse effect on The Republic.

There are signs that others in the Congress are taking such proposals seriously and are beginning to recognize that some common sense inspection of the frivolities of the federal budget could result in meaningful relief for the beleaguered American taxpayer.

For congressmen who have suspected that, perhaps, a dollar or two could be shaved from the gargantuan national budget, a recently published book should be required reading.

The book is entitled The Federal Rathole (Arlington House, $7.95). It is authored by Donald Lambro, who has spent the past eight years as a congressional reporter for United Press International and who augmented the knowledge of government waste gained in his daily activities with a year or more of part-time research.

Recent news stories have revealed one or two of the ludicrous government expenditures which Lambro includes in his book: A $19,300 study to determine why children fall off tricycles; an $11,540 grant for research into the habits of a bisexual frog in Poland.

But Lambro's book goes much further. Among the items he details are:

- $113,417 by the Agriculture Department's Economic Research Service for a study entitled, "Mothers' Attitudes Toward Cotton and Other Fibers in Children's Lightweight Clothing." The study concluded that mothers prefer children's clothing that do not need ironing.

- $69,111 for a five-year study on the long-term storage of acorns in Poland.

- Millions of dollars (Lambro estimates $75 million) for such superfluous advisory committees as the Panel on Sunburn Treatment, a review committee on laxatives, the National Peanut Advisory Committee, and the Board of Tea Tasters, which Richard Nixon attempted unsuccessfully to abolish in 1970.

PHILIP CRANE

The
almanac

Today is Thursday, August 21, the 233rd day of 1975 with 132 to follow.

The moon is full.

The morning stars are Mars, Jupiter and Saturn.

The evening stars are Mercury and Venus.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Leo. Britain's Princess Margaret was born August 21, 1930.

On this day in history:

- In 1940, Leon Trotsky, a prime builder of the Soviet Communism, was assassinated in Mexico City where he had lived in exile for three years.

- In 1951, the United States ordered construction of the world's first atomic submarine.

- In 1968, the Soviet Union and other Warsaw Pact forces invaded Czechoslovakia to choke off a growing drive to free the nation from Moscow's control.

- In 1971, three officers and four convicts were killed in an escape attempt at San Quentin prison in California.

A thought for the day: President Woodrow Wilson said: "Sometimes people call me an idealist. Well, that is the way I know I am an American. America is the only idealistic country in the world."

- Pentagon restaurants where "top brass" may dine on filet mignon or lobster, with appetizer, salad, three vegetables and baked Alaska, for $2.50, at the cost of a government subsidy of $1.9 million.

The list is almost endless. But Lambro pointed out in a telephone conversation the other day that he had only studied 50 areas of government. "There has to be another 100 or more," he said.

The examples cited here are chosen, frankly, for shock value. In terms of a $359 billion budget, even the $19,000 tricycle study may seem insignificant. But as Sen. Everett Dirksen once said, "You take a billion dollars here and a billion dollars there, and pretty soon you're talking about real money."

Lambro's book deals with other expenditures — such as $2 billion a year for travel by federal employees, and $11 billion a year in foreign aid — which may not be as quickly condemned as a $6,000 expenditure for an "Anatomical and Ecological Study of the Indian Whistling Duck."

But his book is painful evidence that your money and mine is indeed being poured down The Federal Rathole.

In her recent television interview, first lady Betty Ford referred to the Supreme Court's abortion decision as "... a great, great decision."

This decision was called by Justices William Rehnquist and Byron White "... an exercise in raw judicial power," with no precedent in law or custom. On its first anniversary, January 22, 1974, Justice Harry Blackmun said Roe v. Wade might well be "the worst decision the Court has ever handed down." Chief Justice Warren Burger admitted that the Justices had not had the time to study the evidence for the humanity of the unborn child in making that decision.

Constitutional lawyers have called Roe v. Wade a violence done to the preamble of the Constitution, which guarantees the "securing of liberty to ourselves and our posterity." Historians see the decision as bad history, selective and biased. Scientists are appalled at its unscientific dismissal of the humanity of its unborn victim. Journalists who have taken the time to study the decision find it deplorably biased writing.

The abortion decision demeans the Hippocratic Oath, the cornerstone of the medical profession. It places one medical procedure, abortion, outside the laws that govern other medical activities and allows abortion to remain ungoverned, unrestricted and done without true informed consent of the patient.

It has led to the sterilization and complications of some 200,000 women and has caused between 700 and 1,000 maternal deaths in this country. It has resulted in perverting the medical profession, and has made purveyors of death of our newspapers and radio stations advertising the business of destroying unborn human lives. It has divided churches, families and the professions. It removes the father from responsibility over his own child and denies parents the right to protect and safeguard the health and welfare of their minor child who becomes pregnant.

It has resulted in the deaths of more than three million innocent, unborn human beings, and has taken from the individual states their sovereign right to protect their members. It has left Americans confused. It has destroyed credibility in the Justice System and is a constant source of litigation and legislation.

Roe v. Wade is without doubt the greatest single disaster to have befallen the people of this country since the founding of the Republic two centuries ago. And this is the decision Betty Ford calls "a great, great decision."

Thanks Army Reservists

I am deeply grateful to the Army Reservists, in particular Staff Sgt. Donald Bavaro, who did everything in his power in making our school paper drive a success. It would be difficult to find a more courteous or helpful person in the military or civilian life. I scouted most of the groups and organizations in Arlington Heights trying to find one truck that could be lent to drive our paper to Waukegan's recycling center. There weren't any to be found. I heard of the Army's community interest and involvement by a Camp Fire Girls leader who expressed her delight with these courteous men. Therefore I talked with the officers at the Nike site and they guaranteed me manpower and two trucks, plus another just in case we needed it. Well lo and behold, because of the men's pep talk to the school children, and the participation of these soldiers we had an overwhelming success of a paper drive. These gallant men produced six trucks to accommodate our collection and all in one morning's notice. Who but the Army could have come to our rescue?

The Reserve unit at the bast helps to lend, serve, or assist any needy group, school or church. They are helping a church in Palatine with a toy drive. They are helping a ski club for the blind with their garage sale and they have helped the Boy Scouts with ecological and conservation projects. They are willing to do much more. This is a resource most of us group leaders can't resist. They set a great example to our youngsters as courteous and helpful defenders of our country as well as being the fathers and brothers in our neighborhoods. If you have a project and need manpower or transportation I highly recommend Staff Sgt. Bavaro and the Army Reservists.

PROVIDENCE, R.I., Aug. 21 — The colonial congress voted to prohibit pilots from guiding British warships in and out of the province's waterways. The legislature also imposed an official ceiling of three shillings a pound on any gunpowder imported after the following April.

Family size smaller

Fewer pupils as suburbs change

Last year, just before school started, I noted that somewhere in the Northwest suburbs a high school senior would sell elevator tickets to freshmen in a school without any elevators.

That prediction is undoubtedly just as good this year as it was last. But this year another event which in the future may become just as inevitable will occur.

This is the year that declining enrollment will really begin to haunt local school officials.

Elementary schools throughout the area are planning for an acute shortage of kindergarten students this year. Many districts also will watch enrollment drop in the higher grades. As one school official said last week, "It's kind of weird; students will go along through several years of school and then they will just vanish — never to be replaced."

THERE WILL STILL be pockets where the old story of ever-increasing enrollments will be true. Schaumburg Township Dist. 54's enrollment will continue to increase and High School Dist. 211 will grow for awhile.

But what is happening, quite probably, goes beyond a temporary downturn in the birth rates. It is possible the nature of the suburbs is changing in some basic ways.

The evidence comes from those children who are, in the words of that school official, "vanishing never to be replaced." These children are obviously moving away and the families that are moving into the homes they vacate don't have the same number of children.

In the past people moved to the suburbs "for the sake of the children." And the large houses with several bedrooms were perfectly designed for large families.

NOW, HOWEVER, working couples are moving into many of those homes and converting the bedrooms into studies, offices or studios. They may have one or two children but the chances are their lives don't revolve around their children in the same way as the families which lived up to the 1950s "togetherness" ideal.

Philosophers and social critics will undoubtedly have much to say about the new shape of the family. And while people who thought America in the post-war period was too "child-centered," may see the new trend as healthy, others probably will say the "selfishness" of modern families will be our final undoing.

None of these philosophical musings will be much help to local school officials trying to figure out how to cope with declining enrollment, however. The problem, which generally combines declining revenue, inflation and the necessity to cut staff, is a sticky one.

It is virtually guaranteed, for example, that a new watchword in negotiations between boards and teacher unions will be the "RIF clause." RIF stands for "reduction in force," and teacher unions will be trying to get the clauses into teacher contracts to regulate the way school boards will lay-off teachers as declining enrollment accelerates.

by Wandalyn Rice

THE ISSUES involved in "RIF" are complex and will be discussed later. But the changing nature of the suburbs, in addition to the economic problems caused by declining enrollment, will figure prominently in the considerations of school boards and teacher unions alike.

The factor is the change in the nature of the suburbs referred to earlier. As more and more families that are not "child-centered" move out here, it will be harder and harder for schools to find the unquestioning support they received in previous years.

This will make their problems more difficult to solve. And it also ensures that, for the foreseeable future at least, the fall ritual of returning to school will be different than it was for years.

The story is going to be less and less, not more and more.

Hearing on school district problems slated in Skokie

A hearing on problems of suburban school districts will be held by a subcommittee of the Illinois House Education Committee Thursday, Aug. 28 in Skokie.

The subcommittee is concerned particularly with problems facing school districts with declining enrollments, but will consider any other matter relating to schools, said State Rep. Aaron Jaffe, D-Skokie, a member of the subcommittee.

The meeting is at 7 p.m. at Old Orchard Junior High School, 9300 Kenton Ave.

A number of suburban schools face declining state aid because of reductions in their enrollment.

As a first step in providing financial aid to these districts, which still must meet rising costs, Jaffe and State Rep. Glenn Schneider, D-Wheaton, have introduced legislation that would base state aid on an average daily student attendance over the past three years, rather than only on the last year. Schneider is chairman of the House Education Committee, and will chair the hearing.

Jaffe described the bill which he and Schneider are sponsoring "just a starting point" in a series of legislative proposals to aid financially troubled school districts.

He invited persons who wish to testify at the hearing to telephone his office at 673-6888. Anyone appearing at the hearing will be allowed to testify, however, Jaffe said.

Hearings will also be held in Springfield and another Downstate location before the Illinois General Assembly reconvenes in October, Jaffe said.

RECYCLING PROGRAMS may increase and roadside litter problems may be reduced if a "bottle bill" is adopted in Illinois. A Chicago hearing on a beverage container deposit bill is slated Aug. 27.

The environment

Public comment urged on proposed 'bottle bill'

by LEA TONKIN
Illinois citizens are invited to offer viewpoints on a proposed "bottle bill" at a legislative hearing Wednesday in Chicago.

A subcommittee of the Illinois House of Representatives' Environment Committee will hear public comment on the proposal for mandatory deposits on beverage containers. The bill, HB 1839, sponsored by State Rep. Daniel Pierce, D-Highland Park, is aimed at reduction of roadside litter and increased recycling efforts.

The hearing will start at 10 a.m. at the State of Illinois Building, 160 N. LaSalle St., Room 1818. Information gathered at the hearing will be used to develop a committee bill.

Supporters of the bottle bill cite the laws requiring deposits on soft drink and beer containers in Oregon and Vermont. The Illinois Environmental Council, Springfield, said those states have reduced roadside litter and enjoyed a net gain in employment due to the bottle regulations.

Container manufacturers and unions counter that the bottle deposit proposals would cause unemployment problems. Copies of the bill can be obtained from Bridget Lane, House Democratic Staff, State House, Springfield, Ill. 62706.

PEP meeting Aug. 28

The Pollution and Environmental Problems Inc. (PEP) organization will meet Aug. 28 at the Palatine Village Hall, 64 S. Brockway. The meeting will start at 8 p.m.

Environment class Sept. 3

An environmental workshop for elementary and secondary teachers will be offered by the National College of Education, Evanston. The workshop, titled, "Environmental Field Study of Illinois Prairie," will start Sept. 3. Classes will be held at Oak Lawn Community High School, 9400 Southwest Hwy., Oak Lawn. For additional information call the Open Lands Project in Chicago, 427-4256.

Freeway system opposed

The Illinois Committee on Freeways is seeking support in its opposition to the construction of the Illinois Supplemental Freeway System. The committee cites high costs, increased traffic congestion and the disappearance of parks and recreational areas as problems created by the system. The Ill. Dept. of Transportation estimates the project will cost $7.5 billion. It will add some 1,700 miles of highway to the existing Illinois road system. The committee calls for the widening and resurfacing of existing roads as an alternative to the Supplemental Freeway. For additional information, contact Illinois Committee on Freeways, P. O. Box 2392, Station A, Champaign, Ill. 61820.

Insecticide spraying hit

The Citizens for a Better Environment organization announced Wednesday that it filed an enforcement action against the North Shore Mosquito Abatement District for violations of the Environmental Protection Act caused by the spraying of malathion insecticide. Malathion is used for mosquito control. Barry Grever, CBE research director, said he questions the effectiveness of the insecticide. He said the organization is aware of numerous persons whose health is adversely affected by the insecticide spraying activity.

Market plunges 15.25 points; 32 in 2 days

NEW YORK (UPI) — The stock market plunged to its lowest level in more than four months Wednesday in a selloff triggered by fears the economic recovery would be aborted by inflation and rising interest rates.

The Dow Jones industrial average, a 14.34-point loser Tuesday, skidded another 15.25 points to 793.26 to close at its lowest level since 789.50 April 11. The worst previous loss was a 20.89-point setback May 6. The closely followed average has lost 32.38 points in the past three sessions.

Volume on the New York Stock Exchange swelled to 18,630,000 shares from 14,990,000 traded Tuesday. It was the heaviest turnover since 18,998,820 shares were traded July 29.

STANDARD & POOR'S 500-stock index gave up 1.00 to 83.00. The average price of an NYSE common share decreased by 60 cents. Declines routed advances, 1,292 to 183, among the 1,801 issues crossing the tape.

Virtually every stock group felt the sting of selling. Blue chips and glamors, leaders in the market's rally the first half of the year, were hard hit.

American Telephone & Telegraph was the third most active Big Board issue, off 2 1/8 to 46 on 252,700 shares.

Citicorp led the Big Board actives, off 1 1/8 to 30 3/8 on 570,900 shares, including a block of 321,000 shares at 29 1/2. Sterling Drug was the second most active issue, off 3/4 to 15 1/4 on 336,200 shares, including a block of 260,000 shares at 15 1/4.

PRICES CLOSED sharply lower in fairly active trading on the American Stock Exchange. The average price of an Amex share fell 19 cents. Volume totaled 1,940,000 shares, compared with 1,510,000 traded Tuesday.

In the Amex options, 19,214 contracts were traded, compared with 14,234 Tuesday. Walt Disney October 45s led the actives, off 7-16 to 17-16 on 846 contracts. Disney October 50s followed, off 1/8 to 3/4 on 634 contracts. Disney October 40s were third off 5/8 to 3/4 on 581 contracts.

On the Chicago Board Options Exchange, 57,888 contracts were traded, compared with 47,387 Tuesday. Polaroid October 35s led the actives, off 3/8 to 2 9/16. Xerox October 60s followed, off 3/8 to 1 5/8. Syntex October 35s were third, off 1/8 to 1.

Chicago soap users may buy in suburb stores

Chicago consumers who are fussy about their laundry are expected to trek to the suburbs to buy detergents that contain phosphates, said John Sobut of the Illinois Food Retailers Assn., Chicago.

A Chicago ordinance that bans the phosphate products became effective Tuesday.

Sobut said no statistics are available on the phosphate detergent ban, but he said a number of Chicago consumers would likely buy the products elsewhere.

Sobut said the consumer demand for phosphate detergents is similar to the purchase of cigarettes in Indiana by Illinois residents and the possible trend toward increased liquor sales outside Cook County, both caused by differences in tax levels. Warehouses have not shipped phosphate detergent products to Chicago stores for the past two months, he said.

A spokesman for Jewel food stores said consumers in Chicago have adjusted to the no-phosphate products. The company also supplies suburban stores with no-phosphate detergents to simplify distribution.

Sanford Arenberg of Sanford Chemical Co., Inc., Elk Grove Village, said there is a loophole for institutional cleaners produced by his firm. The Chicago compliance deadline for institutional cleaners is mid-December, he said.

Walker signs several Regner bills into law

Gov. Daniel Walker recently has signed into law a number of bills passed by the Illinois General Assembly under sponsorship of Sen. David J. Regner, R-Mount Prospect.

Among the bills signed by the governor is one prohibiting the use of public school travel funds by anyone other than a member of a school board.

Regner said the law will eliminate questionable practices by some school board members who have used school funds to pay expenses for members of their families while attending conventions and other meetings.

"It is a clear and obvious abuse of the powers of office for a person to use public money for other than official business," he said.

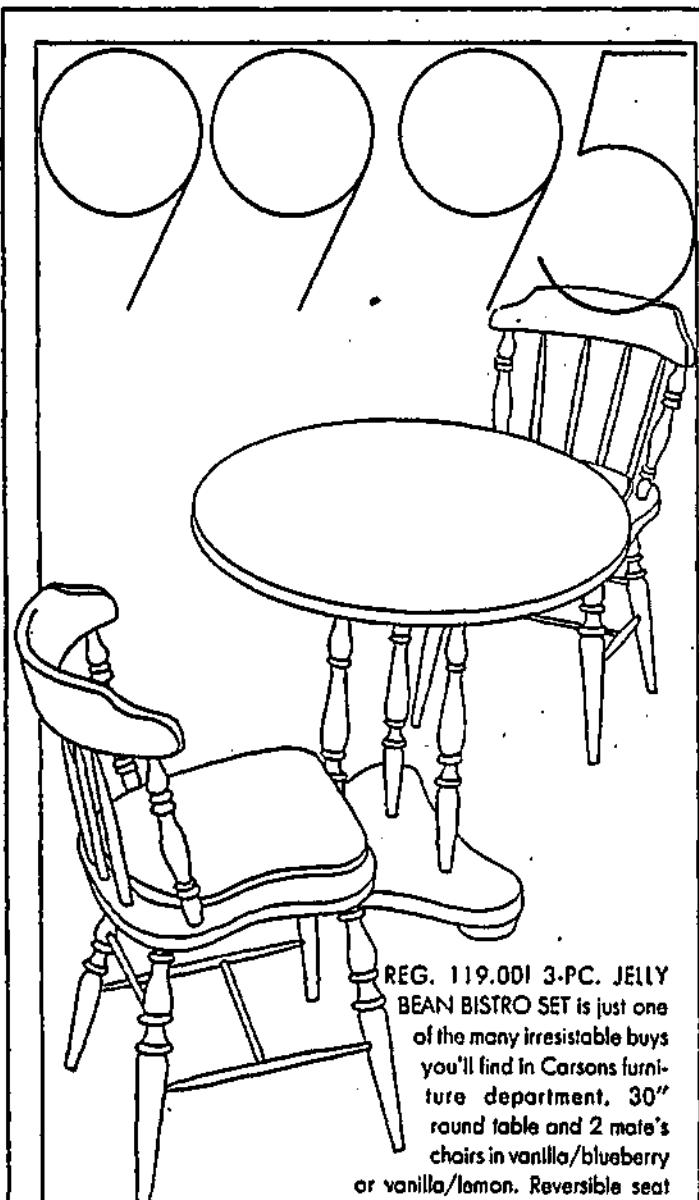

Other bills sponsored by Regner which the governor has approved include:

• A law giving the state responsibility for paying for investigations of mine accidents. Under former law, the responsibility for paying for such investigations was laid to the counties in which accidents occurred. Regner said that of the dozens of types of investigations required by state law, those involving mining accidents were one of only two types for which the state did not pay the bill.

• A law changing the designation of "township auditors" to "township trustees." Regner said the purpose of the law was simply to eliminate the confusion over the role of township officials, who actually are policy-making officers and do not, in fact, audit anything.

• A law transferring administration of insurance for state-owned motor vehicles from the Department of General Services to the Division of Risk Management within the Department of Finance. Regner said placing the state contracts for auto insurance in the hands of professional insurance personnel will result in better coverage and lower costs.

Ecology — nature's balancing act

WHAT EXACTLY IS ECOLOGY?

This word was invented when certain sensible folk woke up to the fact that they belong to the planet earth. It was coined from a couple of older words meaning house and study. Basically, it's the study of how groups of plants and animals share life in a natural environment, somewhat as people share life in an orderly household.

Nowadays we hear a lot of scary reports of how people are destroying the earth's ecology. It is easy enough to understand how thoughtless pollution contaminates our air, water supplies, soils and even the oceans. We need a wider understanding to see why this changes the global ecology — for the worse.

Outdoors the global scenery changes from mountains to flat plains, from moist rivers to dry deserts, from tropical to polar zones. All these landscapes are bounded by the salty seas. And every scene provides a suitable home for a certain group of plants and animals to share life in a special environment. This is ecology.

It works in balanced harmony because each local species can make a living in its natural environment. What's more, in so doing it also helps all the neighboring plants and animals to make a living. The various animals produce carbon dioxide and organic wastes for the plants, which provide oxygen and basic food.

One of the most important threads in the interwoven ecology is the food chain. For example, the deer who dwell in woody areas eat greenery and add wastes to enrich the soil. As they multiply, they could consume all their local food supplies, creating famine and starvation.

However, the laws of nature are stern and may seem cruel. Pumas or other large predators share the local ecology and help to keep down exploding deer population. The puma population is limited by the numbers of meat-producing deer. Meantime, bobcats and other smallish predators keep the ratty rodent population within bounds. This is but one of many systems that keep a local ecology in balanced harmony.

Basically, everything depends on planetary features such as climate and air, soil and water. When a marsh is drained, frogs, fishes and water birds lose their homes. Even a small change can upset the delicate ecological balance. For example, when herds of humans attack the bullrushes, the secret nests are left without shade and numerous birds lose their winter supplies of seeds.

Andy sends a 7-volume set of the Chronicles of Narnia to Don Hess, 11, of Eugene, Ore., for his question:

DOES A HUMMER REALLY RIDE ON A GOOSE'S BACK?

Suppose someone told you that a tiny hummingbird can fly hundreds of miles nonstop over land and ocean. Most likely you wouldn't believe it. Certainly the bird watchers refused to believe it long ago, when they learned for a fact that hummers do indeed travel long distances. It seemed logical to assume that these tiny birds must have help, for example, in migrating between North and South America. Perhaps they hitchhike rides on the backs of geese or other big sturdy birds.

Nowadays we know for a fact that a tiny hummer does not need to hitch a ride from a goose or any other big bird. He is a small miracle of dynamic energy, and for his size he rates as the most superior flier of the entire bird world. In short spurts, he is the speed champion and his mighty little wings beat 200 strokes per minute. He migrates with no help to and from various points between Alaska and Brazil. Come fall, he strokes up on nectar and small bugs, and then flies, also without help, 500 miles nonstop across the Gulf of Mexico.

Florence Erdmann

A funeral Mass of the Resurrection for Florence M. Erdmann, nee Renault, 76, will be offered at 10 a.m. today in St. Mary Catholic Church, Buffalo Grove Rd., Buffalo Grove. Burial will be in All Saints Cemetery, Des Plaines.

Mrs. Erdmann died Monday in Brookwood Convalescent Nursing Home, Des Plaines, where she had been a resident.

She was preceded in death by her husband, William, a brother, William Renault, and a sister, Cathryn Cashman. Survivors include three sons, William Jr. (Rita) of Des Plaines, Robert (Dorothy) of California, and John of Waukegan; a daughter, Marion (Ernest) Schott of New Jersey; 20 grandchildren; three great-grandchildren; and a sister, Louise Frederick of New York.

Family requests in lieu of flowers, donations to your favorite charity or masses preferred and appreciated.

Oehler Funeral Home, Lee and Perry streets, Des Plaines, is in charge of arrangements.

Drugs treat high blood pressure

Would Aldomet taken in 500 milligrams three times daily cause any nausea or dizziness?

Aldomet (methyldopa) is a commonly used medicine to treat persistent high blood pressure. It has a complex chemical action that counteracts certain chemicals in the body that induce high blood pressure in some people. It is a good and effective medicine.

It is not unusual to have some side effects when the medicine is first started. And, the dosage sometimes needs adjusting to a little less or in some cases a little more than you are taking.

With the lowering of blood pressure dizziness is a common symptom until the body adjusts to the newly lowered pressure. Nausea is a less common symptom but can occur. I don't think you should readjust your own dosage, but I do think you should talk to your doctor about your symptoms. He is used to having to make individual adjustments to fit each case and also knows that it takes a while to adjust to the medicine in some cases.

Our new pediatrician has just given our son, who is five years old, his annual checkup. He says our son is in perfect health, however, he has an innocent heart murmur, but to disregard it.

He is a very active, normal boy in all respects, but we cannot help worrying about this innocent heart murmur.

Because of moving he has had two other pediatricians, neither of whom have told us of such a condition. He is in nursery school now and full participation in all activities has been recommended by the doctor.

Should we be concerned or just dismiss it from our minds as the doctor suggests? We would appreciate your opinion and any information on innocent heart murmurs.

The doctor says by Lawrence E. Lamb

Relax. Many young children and even some adults have innocent heart murmurs. A heart murmur is simply a sound generated by the movement of the blood through the heart. When there is a defect in the heart the turbulence of the blood caused by the defect causes the sound.

In normal people with active circulations, as you find in children, the vibrations can be caused from the movement of the blood, even though there is no defect at all in the heart. Your doctor is trying to tell you that the murmur is on this basis and does not, in his opinion, indicate that there is anything at all wrong with your son's heart or circulation.

Because many parents react as you have, with understandable anxiety, when they are told their child has even an innocent heart murmur, it is not unusual for the doctor to spare them that mental anguish by not alarming them or mentioning what is simply a normal finding. Then too, such innocent murmurs tend to come and go. During one examination the child may be quieter and for a variety of reasons the sound of the circulation may not be present.

In any case I would not lose any sleep over an innocent murmur that your doctor has told you to disregard. It is important that you not let your anxiety affect your normal, active boy's development. Let him join the rest of the kids without any burden of unwarranted restraints or concern.

Suburban GOP seeking added convention power

In a letter to the Illinois Republican State Central Committee, GOP leaders from the 30 suburban townships in Cook County urged adoption of a rule to allow selection of convention delegates on the basis of party voting strength in each congressional district.

Present rules of the state central committee anticipate allocation of three delegates to each of the state's 24 congressional districts. Carl R. Hansen, Elk Grove Township GOP committeeman and chairman of the Cook County Suburban Republican Organization, said the proposed formula would allow selection of from two to five delegates per district, depending on the Republican vote in the 1974 elections.

"Suburban Cook County accounts for close to double the general election Republican vote in Chicago, and three times the primary tally," said Hansen.

"Recognition of this suburban congressional district Republican vote is long overdue," said Hansen, "particularly in view of the current trend for representation to reflect actual voting results."

Irving-Lake loses in national finals

Special to The Herald
SEATTLE, Wash. — Irving-Lake of Illinois, an afternoon loser, fought late Wednesday evening against defending national champion Sugar Creek (Mo.) to avoid becoming the fifth team to suffer elimination from the Senior Babe Ruth National Tournament here in Sicks' Stadium.

The host Seattle team scored single runs in the fifth, sixth and seventh against pitchers Keith Abraham, Tim Domek and Al Ponder to administer Irving-Lake's 3-2 afternoon loss.

That presented coach Lou Bocci's ballclub with an almost insurmountable task... winning five straight games to avoid being cast aside in the double elimination tournament which has temporarily been spared rainstorms which fouled up first round scheduling.

Through Wednesday afternoon, Lubbock (Tex.), Prattville (Ala.) and Narragansett (R.I.) had been eliminated. Brooklyn (N.Y.) and Sacramento (Calif.) plus Irving-Lake and Sugar Creek each played losers' bracket games last night.

Irving-Lake's Abraham pitched scoreless baseball through four innings. But neither figured in the decision.

Eric Wilkens relieved Damgaard with two outs in Irving-Lake's fifth when the Illinois club collected three hits, one walk and loaded the bases with two outs but scored just one run.

Wilkens yielded a sixth inning run but nothing in the seventh to earn the victory. Domek took the loss for Irving-Lake by helping Seattle with a sixth inning wild pitch and allowing the bases loaded with none retired in the Seattle seventh.

But the game winning hit, Henry Hansen's bases loaded single against a drawn up infield, came against Ponder, Irving-Lake's third pitcher.

Domek walked Nick Valenzuela and Dana Papasidero to open Seattle's seventh. Nobody fielded Gene Picchena's sacrifice attempt, leading the hags and causing Irving-Lake's Bocci to bring in Ponder.

Hansen was the first batter Ponder faced.

Seattle's sixth inning run was borne on a walk, sacrifice, wild pitch by Domek who relieved Abraham and winning pitcher Wilkens' RBI infield hit.

Amazingly, Seattle scored just once in the fifth against Abraham despite three singles and one double.

Irving-Lake's final run in the sixth came when Ponder singled, moved to second on Wilkens' wild pitch and scored on Jim Cole's single.

But Irving-Lake passed up its best chance to score big in the fifth. Cole singled but Jim Dastice struck out into a double play.

Pete Hernandez walked, Glenn Loney singled and Jeff Ironside singled, loading the bases. Wilkens replaced Damgaard and promptly wild pitched Hernandez home. But Pete Pavich grounded out, ending the rally.

SCORE BY INNINGS
Irving-Lake 000 011 0-2 8-0
Seattle 000 011 1-3 10-1

Waukegan Open begins Friday

Six years ago, Palatine's Les Zikes won a ticket to the Firestone Tournament of Champions by thundering to the Professional Bowlers Assn. Waukegan Open title at Bertrand Lanes.

Although still eligible for the Firestone, the Beverly Lanes manager in Arlington Heights would like nothing better than to renew that ticket with his second PBA victory.

The $50,000 Waukegan PBA Open will celebrate its 12th annual renewal Friday beginning at 9 a.m. when a host of tour stars begin rolling in the four-day competition that climaxes at Monday's finals.

While Zikes attracts the local attention, such superstars of the game like PBA Player of the Year Earl Anthony, defending champion Dick Ritzger, Chicago's favorite son Carmen Salvo and consistent cashiers Don Johnson, Johnny Petraglia, Larry Laub and Nelson Burton Jr. will be topling pins at Bertrand Lanes, 2816 Washington Ave.

Following the Pro-Am event tonight, the touring pros will get down to qualifying business both Friday and Saturday at 9 a.m. and Sunday at noon and 7 p.m.

The finals will be nationally televised, but blacked out locally Monday at 7 p.m. Admission to the tournament is $1 per session except for the finals which carry a $2 spectator charge.

Heinz, Lynch lead Tri-City play

A low gross score of 88 and a low net of 67 highlighted play in the Tri-City Women's Golf League this week at Mount Prospect Country Club.

Playing in the Class A flight, Paula Heinz shot an 18-hole gross score of 88 with a net of 72—tops on her level.

Meanwhile, Marlene Lynch, competing with the Class D players, came in with a net 67 after an 18-hole round of 103.

In between, Trudy Kerzek paced the Class B golfers with a 93 gross and 70 net and Babbie Wood was the leader of the C Class with 102 and 75.

Fern Rowe posted the only birdie on the 13th.

Zambole wins State Junior by 4 strokes

Nicky Zambole, a junior at Palatine High School, captured the coveted Illinois State Junior golf championship title Wednesday at Indian Lakes in Bloomington, thereby qualifying for two weekend events at Village Green in Mundelein.

Zambole fired a 73-74-77-224 to gain his four-stroke victory in the NIMAGA-conducted State Junior which was shortened from 72 to 54 holes by rainstorms.

Thirty-six holes were scheduled for Wednesday but tournament officials quickly backed off to 18 when rain hit the Indian Lakes course yesterday morning.

Zambole will golf Friday in the 36-hole NIMAGA Junior Championship at Village Green. And he'll return to Mundelein Saturday for 18 holes in the President's Challenge Cup.

That prestigious event pits the top dozen NIMAGA juniors against the best dozen NIMAGA men.

At Indian Lakes, Waukegan's Dave Ogrin won a one-hole playoff over Ottawa's Craig Lewis to earn second behind Zambole. Each tallied 228 through 54 holes in the tournament for 14-to-17-year-old boys.

Ogrin earned his 228 with 73-78-77 while Lewis was shooting 78-73-77.

Barrington Hills' Quinn Griffing finished in a sixth place tie at Indian Lakes with 76-76-82-234. Buffalo Grove's Mike Marshall was tied for ninth with 78-75-83-236.

Griffing and Marshall could each earn one of six President's Challenge Cup positions still available to junior players. But they must qualify with two excellent rounds Friday at Village Green.

Elsewhere, the CDGA Illinois State Amateur at Bloomington Country Club was apparently a two-day affair for five local golfers.

With a portion of the field still golfing, information director Denny Davenport said a 147 two-round total would be the high qualifying score for today's 36-hole finale.

Local scorers were Palatine's Len Flocca 75-77-152, Mount Prospect's Craig Ridley 73-80-153, Schaumburg's Brent Inman 76-77-153, Arlington Heights' Brad Stake 84-71-155 and Palatine's Cliff Garcia 87-78-165.

The entire field is chasing Nick Soli's 83-89-137. Only the low 30 scores plus ties advance to today's 36-hole championship finale. Soli is from DeKalb.

Sox beat Yankees

Orta's big night keys Wood's 13th

Jorge Orta rapped a single, double and triple, scored three runs and drove in another Wednesday night to pace the White Sox to a 5-3 victory over the New York Yankees.

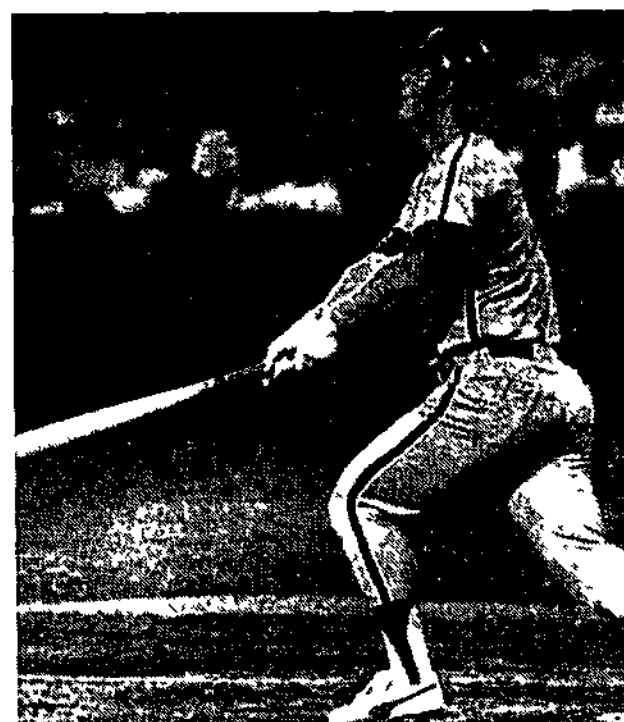

Bobby Bonds of the Yankees belted a three run homer off winning pitcher Wilbur Wood, 13-16, in the second inning to give the Yankees a 3-0 lead.

The Sox got one back in the third inning on a leadoff single by Orta, an error by losing pitcher Rudy May, an infield out and Bucky Dent's sacrifice fly. Orta scored another run in the fifth, when he walked, moved to second on an infield out and after Jerry Hairston walked, Dent got his second RBI of the night with a single to center.

The Sox won it with a two-run rally in the sixth. Designated hitter Bill Stein doubled, went to third on an infield hit by Bob Coluccio and scored on Orta's double. Brian Downing singled off third baseman Graig Nettles' glove into short left field, scoring Coluccio and Orta with the winning runs.

With one out in the second, Chris Chambliss doubled and went to third on Walt Williams' single to set the stage for Bonds' 23rd homer into the leftfield bullpen.

Wood then yielded just two singles the rest of the way. The loss was May's ninth against 11 victories.

BIG GREG LUZINSKI, of the Philadelphia Phillies via Prospect Heights, registered his 100th RBI, tops in the majors, Wednesday evening during a 4-1 victory over the Atlanta Braves.

DuQuoin ready for 50th running of Hambletonian

The fastest, classiest and best-mannered three-year-old trotters in the world are in their final preparations for one of harness racing's most prestigious titles of the century — the 50th Hambletonian.

To be staged as feature event of the Southern Illinois based DuQuoin State Fair on Saturday, Aug. 30, this year's Golden Hambletonian will boast freshness as well as tradition.

For the first time, the Hambletonian will be televised live nationally by CBS-TV (Channel 2 in Chicago) and its scheduled date marks the first time it has been held on a Saturday.

In a dramatic throwback to standards, however, pari-mutuel betting, recently legalized at Illinois fairs, will be part of the Hambletonian scene for the first year since 1956 when the world-famous classic was last held in the East.

Even the field of three-year-old trotters seems to be cooperating in order to make this year's Hambletonian the biggest day in the DuQuoin Fair's 53-year history.

Bonefish, who may become the fastest trotter in history, is a strong favorite to give driver-trainer Stanley Dancer his third Hambletonian victory.

The 48-year-old Hall of Famer from New Egypt, N.J., who won in 1968 with Nevele Pride and again in 1972 with Super Bowl, says Bonefish "could be a super-great trotter."

Owned by Dancer and his wife, Rachel, plus turkey breeder Mac Cuddy of Strathroy, Ontario, Bonefish was chosen "Two-Year-Old Trotter of the Year" last season after winning 10-of-16 starts and earning $90,204.

Just two weeks ago, it was announced that the Nevele Pride colt has been purchased by Castleton Farms for $1 million, but that he would continue under the Dancer-Cuddy colors for the remainder of this season.

As a three-year-old, Bonefish has won four-of-five starts, banked $16,572, beaten all of his top challengers and his times of 1:59.3 and 2:00 are the fastest miles by a sophomore trotter this year.

Nevertheless, Bonefish will have fierce competition on Hambletonian Day and the fact that he's only had five starts causes some concern.

Songflor, trained by Delvin Miller, is a rapidly developing colt who should be a solid No. 2 choice in the mutuels. Songflor has captured two consecutive Grand Circuit stakes, earned $154,896 this season and finished a strong second behind Bonefish in the 10-horse Gold Cup final.

Surefire Hanover, Dancer's "other" Hambletonian candidate, has tailed off in recent weeks after $106,209 in early stakes money. Purchased for $150,000 during the off-season, the son of 1957 Hambletonian winner Hickory Smoke is the only three-year-old with a chance of sweeping the Triple Crown series.

Surefire, definitely second in Dancer's Hambletonian thoughts behind Bonefish, won the $200,000 Yonkers Trot in mid-July, first leg of the Triple Crown.

Billy Houghton, who captured his first Hambletonian last season with longshot Christopher T., has another darkhorse for 1975.

Glasgow, unraced at two years old because he was "too immature," appears back in form after suffering two splints in the past three weeks.

After a disappointing eighth place in the Yonkers Trot, Glasgow was second in the Dexter Cup, a head behind the winner, Songflor.

Fashion Blaze, trained by Jimmy Larente, seems to get up for the big races and could enter into the Hambletonian picture when a record purse of $226,000 is expected to be available.

The top filly threat appears to be Clarence Gaines' homebred Exclusive Way and is trained by John Simpson, Jr. Her first skirmish against the boys came in the $67,000 Gold Cup and the daughter of Florican and Hambletonian winner Kerry Way was most impressive.

10-speed proves best

by RICHARD BALLANTINE

What kind of bike for you?

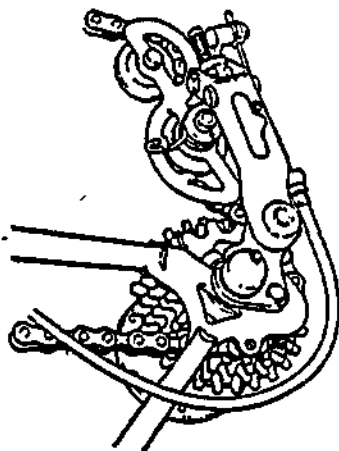

I hope your decision will be to get a 10-speed bicycle. They can be set up to suit nearly any rider, job or purpose, are dynamic, responsive and vibrant, the most comfortable and give the most speed for the least effort. They are also the easiest to service.

Initial cost may seem high, but experience has shown that most people who start with a balloon heavyweight or three-speed tourist model soon find themselves desiring (and acquiring) a racing bike. It takes no longer than the first time such a machine sweeps by them going up a hill.

Bicycle categories by function are traditionally three: a balloon bomber for really tough work like riding on beaches and fields, newspaper delivery, collisions, and absolutely no care; a three speed tourist model for utility use such as local errands, shopping, lots of stop-and-go riding, short trips, good durability, and minimal maintenance.

Bicycle categories by function are traditionally three: a balloon bomber for really tough work like riding on beaches and fields, newspaper delivery, collisions, and absolutely no care; a three speed tourist model for utility use such as local errands, shopping, lots of stop-and-go riding, short trips, good durability, and minimal maintenance.

Actually, a 10-speed can be set up for almost any purpose or job except beach riding. The only crucial difference is the method of operation for the gears; the three speed can be shifted to the correct gear at any time, the 1-speed must be shifted while the bicycle is in motion. It's easy once you get the knack, and the 10-speed's efficiency outweighs the disadvantage of initial unfamiliarity.

With the exception of the cheaper models, 10-speed bikes have the much better centerpull caliper brakes usually supplied with 3-speed bikes. Comfort is sometimes cited in favor of the 3-speed. The fact is that the 10-speed has a wider variety of riding positions, allows you to use more muscles to greater advantage, and is therefore much less tiring to ride than a 3-speed.

Expense is a consideration only if your absolute maximum is $25, which restricts you to a serviceable used 3-speed. If you have $35 to $45 you can buy a used bike that at least has 10 speeds, if nothing else.

There are special classes for first and second grade, 3-10th and adult classes for those 16 and over. If you don't know how to swim, now is the time to learn. And if you do know, then join a class to perfect your skills.

Swimmers progress from polliwog, tadpole, minnow, fish, flying fish, shark and porpoise which is the highest level. Aquatic safety and lifesaving classes are offered for the entire family.

For those who like water ballet, there are classes in synchronized swimming for youth and adults. Diving classes are offered for first graders through adult.

A new skin and scuba course will start Oct. 17 for those 15 and over, and junior skin diving is offered to those 10-15 years of age.

For those interested in competitive swimming, a special clinic and workout program will start Sept. 8, three times a week and will culminate in selection of both an A and B swim team.

A special masters program is open to adults who like competitive swimming and wish to compete in swim meets. Program meets on Tuesday and Thursday evenings.

All programs start the week of Sept. 8. Registration for members is this Monday and for non-members on Tuesday. Call the "Y" at 296-3378 for further information on these and other swim programs.

Buying a used home can be wise move—or expensive

by LEA TONKIN

Buying a used home can be a rewarding, but expensive, experience.

You can sidestep many potential problems in the purchase of an existing home if you take the time to compare housing values and learn a few basics about home-buying procedure. Whether it's a single-family house or condominium unit you have in mind, an understanding of your role can eliminate confusion and potential unnecessary costs.

Although a potential buyer can go it alone, a real estate agent is often contacted as a first step in the search for an existing home. Random house-hunting can be a waste of time and energy, said Edward J. Busse, president of Mount Prospect-based Annen and Busse, Realtors.

HOME BUYERS generally encounter a 45 to 60-day interval between the initial check of available homes and the day the deal is closed, Busse said. There have been instances of transferees who looked at homes and signed on the dotted line, all in one day. "But it may take time to find a home, close the deal and move in," Busse said.

Consider your family's basic needs when you make a list of the features that are a "must" in your ideal home, Busse advised. A real estate salesperson will ask a number of questions about your housing likes and dislikes, and your financial standing. The information you provide will indicate what type of housing and price range suits your needs.

The home financing arrangements are ultimately settled between buyer and lender. A broker can give an indication of approximate price range that is affordable, Busse said.

"YOU SHOULDN'T buy a house where the mortgage payment is more than a week's salary, although some institutions stretch beyond this," he said. "You can buy a glass of beer or go to a show now and then if you don't go to your absolute limit."

Once the salesperson has qualified the buyer, or determined how much house he can afford, the search for suitable homes can start. Buyers may look at listing sheets in the real estate office, then join the salesperson for a personal inspection of likely listings. Information about the number of rooms, in a house, square footage, price, lot size and other characteristics is included on a listing sheet.

"First-home buyers should be careful to look at a home over carefully," Busse said. A buyer may ask about warranty of plumbing and other systems in the house. The service can be purchased, or it may be offered by the seller.

"Some people look for the romance of an old house," said Robert Zaun, president of Homefinders, Realtors, Palatine. Zaun said buyers should expect a realty agent to disclose all the information that's available about home fix-up work that may be required. Buyers can ask about home heating, water and electric bills for the past couple of years, he said.

WHEN IT COMES to comparison of houses, the buyer's requirements for home size, location and other factors will be the determining factor. A buyer is generally expected to make a deposit when he decides to sign an "offer to purchase" agreement. The amount is up to 10 per cent of the selling price, Zaun said.

A buyer may want to consult an attorney before he signs on the dotted line, or he may add a clause into the contract that it is contingent on his attorney's approval within two days or another specified time period.

The mortgage contract should state that the agreement is contingent on the buyer's ability to obtain financing within a specified number of days.

If the buyer cannot get a mortgage loan, the contract should provide that the earnest money will be returned. A date of possession when the buyer can expect to move into the house, will be listed in the agreement.

THE SIGNED contract is presented to the seller. If the price, date of possession and other terms are satisfactory, the seller will sign the agreement. If the offer is rejected, further negotiations may be conducted.

Buyers can avoid disputes about a personal property if they check the contract for a complete list of all items such as drapes, carpeting and other items that are included in the sale, Zaun said.

A buyer may request that a warrant on electrical wiring, stove and other features in the house, Zaun said. Sellers often foot the bill for a $125 and higher service charge, he said.

Once the buyer obtains a mortgage loan commitment from a lender, plans for closing the deal can be made. A certified check is required at the closing to cover the down payment and settlement costs.

The lender, an attorney representing the seller and a representative of the buyer are present at the closing. The seller, buyer and his attorney and the real estate sales representative may be at the session.

THE BUYER may have shopped for a loan by comparing mortgage terms at various institutions or he may have been referred by the agent. A buyer may get the best terms by negotiating on his own, advises Benny Kass of the National Homebuyers and Homeowners Assn., Washington, D.C.

A list of all closing costs, or settlement fees must be presented to the buyer 12 days before the closing date under terms of the Real Estate Settlement Procedures Act (RESPA). It applies to the sale of new and existing homes.

The buyer brings a certified check for the required amount to the closing. The money is turned over to the seller in return for the deed. The lender should make sure the deed is recorded properly. The buyer gets the house keys and possession of the house on whatever date is specified.

A fee set aside in an escrow account will offer assurance to the buyer that he will gain possession of the house on the correct date, or the funds will be used to pay him compensation.

THE BUYER should make sure all utilities, publications, etc. are notified of his change of address. Some real estate brokers offer the service.

Linda Schmidt, a representative of the Better Business Bureau of Metropolitan Chicago, said home buyers should check real estate contracts with an attorney before they sign the agreement. "Read it carefully," she said. "It's the biggest purchase you make in your life."

Home prices up 52.7% since '70: survey

Inflation has hit the housing consumer in the pocket-book, according to a report by the Mortgage Bankers Assn. of America.

The association compared the cost of new and existing homes for the first quarter of 1975 and the first quarter of 1970.

The survey indicates the median price of new homes sold increased 52.7 per cent during the period. A $36,500 median sale price was recorded in the first quarter of 1975 compared to a $23,900 price tag in the comparable quarter of 1970.

During the same period, the median sale price for existing homes increased 49.2 per cent from $22,660 to $33,820.

A recent survey among members of the area MAP Multiple Listing Real Estate Service members shows the average existing home sale price is higher than $50,000. Home prices in the Northwest suburbs increased an average 7 per cent during 1974, the service said.

RIISING COSTS FOR housing are compared in a America. The chart compares prices in the first chart prepared by the Mortgage Bankers Assn. of quarter 1970 and the first quarter 1975.

Area leads U.S. in housing starts

Chicago and Detroit are the most active housing areas in the U.S., according to a second quarter survey by the F. W. Dodge Division of McGraw-Hill Information Systems Co.

The F. W. Dodge Co. survey shows recovery from the long and steep decline that set in two years ago. Construction of new housing units during the second quarter totaled 320,716 units, a 25 per cent decline from year-earlier figures.

The figure is a 12 per cent increase compared to first quarter 1975 results, however. Listed as leaders in the U.S. survey of housing producers, the Chicago area recorded 6,917 units and Detroit recorded 6,552 housing units.

"So far, the housing upturn has been confined largely to one-family units where improved mortgage availability has revived demand," said George A. Christie, vice president and chief economist of the Dodge Division.

Apartment construction is depressed because of a "formidable combination of cost factors: over the past year or two financing, building and operating expenses have outpaced the tenants' ability to absorb them through higher rental rates," Christie said.

"Because of the sluggishness in multi-family housing, the long-awaited housing recovery of 1975 failed to live up to the hope that it would trigger a general recovery in the rest of the economy by mid-year."

2 companies move to Crossroads

Two new companies have moved to the Crossroads of Commerce office complex in Rolling Meadows, and one existing tenant is expanding its current facilities, according to Barry H. Mogul, vice president of Kenroy, Inc., developers of Crossroads.

Coats and Clark Sales Corp., manufacturers of threads, zippers, tapes and trims is leasing space for use as a district sales office. This is in addition to their current facilities in Skokie. The firm has been in the area over 23 years.

As of October 1975, W.A. Taylor and Company, a division of Hiram Walker, will initiate a liquor sales office in Building One of Crossroads of Commerce. The company now has offices on Michigan Ave. Sheila Fisher, of Kenroy, handled lease negotiations for both companies. William G. Coas & Company, an Investment Banking Firm, one of the first tenants to move into the complex, has leased additional space, thus expanding their current facilities. Howard Berg, vice president in charge of leasing, handled the negotiations.

Number One Crossroads is the first building of a major complex being built in Rolling Meadows by Kenroy, Inc. The completed complex will house a hotel, restaurants, lounges, health club and two additional office buildings, all connected by an enclosed air conditioned pedestrian walkway.

Clean-up aid

Before painting, rub a thin coat of petroleum jelly on your hands. When you're ready to clean up, you'll find that grime and paint smears wash away quickly.

Homes will be simpler

They're going to build them like they used to.

"Houses, that is." So observes Jackson W. Goss, president and chief executive officer of Investors Mortgage Insurance Company, Boston, a leading organization in the private mortgage insurance industry. IMIC works with lenders, such as savings and loan associations, mutual savings banks and commercial banks, by insuring the top 20-25 percent of high-ratio conventional mortgage loans.

"Right after World War II, when the shelter shortage was at its greatest, the housing industry met the challenge by building simpler houses with less frills," Goss says.

The now-ending tight economic situation has brought about another dearth of adequate housing — and the problem will be solved much in the same way it was three decades ago, he believes.

"Similar to those potential home buyers in the late 40s, people today are seeking dwellings they can afford — and with equipment they can easily maintain," he reports.

Goss sets the market supplied with homes with fewer built-in appliances and conveniences — lower price tags will follow.

"Young couples, particularly, are now looking for less in the way of extras — more in the way of answering their present housing needs," he notes.

Goss predicts that these housing trends will emerge:

Built on a small, individual lot, the single-family home will have reduced but expandable living space. Homes will be built so that walls may be removed or rooms added on.

Fewer windows, lower ceilings and tighter construction will be featured. There will be no unused space, hence lower heating and cooling costs.

Look for fewer but bigger bedrooms. Most new home buyers prefer spacious ones as opposed to more numerically but lesser in size units.

Fewer amenities. Absence of wall-to-wall carpeting, walk-in closets, equipped utility rooms and recreational facilities. These items should depend on the tastes as well as the pocketbook of the potential owner.

Landscaping can be an expensive item when added to the cost of buying a home. It is not a must for now — it can be undertaken at a later date, as convenience and budget allow.

"The housing industry's return to simplicity may well be one of the answers to the present duo and cry that the price of a home is out of reach for most people," Goss concludes.

Mr. & Mrs. James Pike of Skokie, are the grand prize winners of a 15-day Hawaiian vacation.

The Pikes will enjoy two weeks of touring and relaxing in Honolulu and the outer islands of Kauai, Maui and Hawaii, with all expenses paid.

In addition to the grand prize trip to Hawaii, Northwest Federal awarded 10 prizes to junior high and high school entrants of a three-day all-expense paid trip to Washington, D.C. Fifty contest runner-up prizes were also awarded. Included among the winners were the following area residents: Miriam Lome, Arlington Heights; Susan Gerber, Hoffman Estates; Esther Kettleborough, Rolling Meadows; and Eleanor Breut and Jane Koepke of Palatine.

Prize winners were drawn on Saturday, July 19 from all the correct entries received in the 1925 Newsmaker Match-Up Sweepstakes.

The contest is one of many commemorative events held this year in celebration of the association's 50th anniversary year.

Paint children's swing set

If you're planning to paint the exterior of your house this summer, why not give a goat or two to your children's swing set, too?

Many families allow their "gym" or swing set to stay outdoors all winter long — simply because it's too large and bulky to store. Unfortunately, the weathering effects of wind, rain and snow will cause rusting and general deterioration of the metal parts such as swing seats, poles and sliding board trim.

In order to protect this recreational equipment from weather's abuse, the National Paint and Coatings Association suggests that you check it annually for rust and chipping paint. If the paint is still intact, and you merely want to brighten the color, sand the surface to dull any remaining gloss so that a fresh coat of paint will adhere better to the old one. If it's simply dusty and dirty, clean it with a sudsy solution of detergent and water, and rinse thoroughly.

If, however, your spot check reveals rusted portions, sand these well. Cracked and peeling paint? Scrape it away with a wire brush. Remove all dust and grease with a solvent-dampened rag.

Now, paint the entire surface with a quality exterior metal primer. When this coat dries, apply an exterior metal enamel. They come in a variety of bright, fun-inspiring colors, so you needn't be limited in your selection.

Size of average family shrinking

"The size of the average American family is shrinking.

"Interest in smaller homes and condominium units continues to rise."

So declares Marshall C. Dennison, president and chief executive officer of Associated Mortgage Companies, Inc., a Philadelphia-based national real estate financing and servicing organization.

In the five-year period between 1969 and 1974, the number of persons living in the average American household fell from three to two. In the same five-year span, the birth rate showed a decline of almost 10 percentage points.

"In housing terms," Dennison observes, "this trend means increasing popularity for the smaller, single-family dwellings and for multi-family apartment units. Condominiums, particularly, are reaping the benefits of these new demographics."

Recent figures attribute one third of all housing construction this year to new condominium structures.

"Changes in existing household types — a drop in median age plus more singles on the scene — has spurred condo growth into the suburbs and outlying city areas.

"In 1974, nine out of every 10 primary individuals — those listed as heads of households — were living alone or with persons not related to them. This group is an impressive market for apartment rentals and sales," Dennison notes.

Although approximately 60 per cent of U.S. household heads are in the young-to-moderate age group, a significant remaining quotient is in the 49-and-over class.

"For the older couple," he remarks, "and for the empty-nesters not yet ready for retirement, the dimensions of a compact private home are especially attractive.

"Along with privacy, desired space and specific economic advantages, the single-family dwelling also promises luxuries not always available elsewhere."

Redirection of the nation's population into greater numbers of small, separate units has placed unique pressure on the housing industry, he observes.

"We are in a decade whose over-all housing requirements may well be the highest in the country's history," Dennison concludes.

Elk Grove Village building leased

Bennett & Kahnweiler Associates has reported the leasing last spring of the one story 23,789 square foot building located at 160 Scott Street, Elk Grove Village to Continental Engineering. Continental Engineering is using the facility as a sales and distribution center servicing the automotive supply industry.

Vernon F. Schultz and James H. Dana of Bennett & Kahnweiler Associates represented both the lessor and lessee. Attorneys in the transaction were Robert Wright of Price, Cushman, Keck, Mahin & Cate for the lessee and Robert Stedman of Irell & Manella for the lessor.

Total consideration in the transaction was approximately $100,000.

Loan limit higher

Oakley Hunter, Chairman of the Board and President of the Federal National Mortgage Association, has announced that the loan limit for VA guaranteed mortgages on one-to-four-family homes eligible for FNMA purchase has been increased from $55,000 to $70,000 for the 48 contiguous states, and from $68,750 to $70,000 for Alaska and Hawaii. These changes went into effect July 25, 1975.

Hunter noted that FNMA approval of underwriting is now required for all single family VA mortgages over $55,000 and all two-to-four family VA loans, regardless of amount, before they are eligible for purchase by FNMA.

Bathroom remodeling pays dividends

by DOROTHEA BROOKS
United Press International

Of the $27.4 billion homeowners will spend on remodeling and modernization this year, almost 10 per cent will go into bathrooms.

That means approximately 700,000 new or facelifted bathrooms.

If yours is one of them, the tab will run anywhere from perhaps $500 or less on up to $5,000 or more, with an average remodeling costing about $2,800, according to Harold O. Staus, director of marketing research for Universal-Rundle Corp., New Castle, Pa., manufacturer of bathroom fixtures and related products.

Along with everything else, this cost has risen sharply — from an average of $1,500 in 1970, Staus said.

However, bathrooms, like kitchens, are among the most valuable of remodeling jobs — in terms of improved living and the fact it is one of the few remodeling projects that may add property value to an older home in excess of the actual cost.

Robert K. Wark, president of Village Plumbing Co., Houston, Tex., and former president of the National Association of Plumbing-Heating-Cooling Contractors, says, "It's not that difficult to replace an old bath fixture with a new one, but the more you vary the piping, the higher the cost will be." For example, he explained, it isn't necessarily costly to move the piping for a new bathtub or lavatory. What is costly is moving the drain for the water closet. So when you plan your remodeling, you can save a considerable amount of money if the position of the closet isn't changed.

The cost of fixtures generally is not a major consideration in bathroom remodeling.

Louis A. Marozzi, vice president of marketing for Universal-Rundle, says, for example, "The difference in cost between a budget faucet and a really good faucet is less than $15. The difference between an economy-model water closet and a deluxe model that automatically vents away bathroom odors is only about $50."

Don Ariano, president of Ravinia Plumbing Co., a remodeling firm serving Chicago's north shore, says most customers want better products, and are interested in the many new materials that have been developed primarily for the remodeling market.

Most remodeling, he said, consists of replacing old fixtures with new ones, adding vanities, storage units, new tile, lighting and decorative features. "We find a lot usually can be done without moving any of the existing piping," he said.

Materials in the bathroom have changed considerably in the past 10 years. Fiberglass tub and shower fixtures, for instance, now account for about 35 per cent of all remodeling installations. In 1968 they accounted for about three per cent.

The fiberglass units, light-weight and easy to install, were used initially for tubs and showers. In the past three years, fiberglass lavatories also have come into use and now even water closet tanks are being made of the plastic to reduce the amount of "sweating" that takes place during the hot summer months.

In addition to the ever-popular ceramic tile for baths, a variety of other water-resistant materials is used — plastic laminates, special coated wall papers and vinyl wall coverings, even wood paneling. For floors, the choice includes ceramic tile, one of the many resilient floor coverings or carpeting. Lighting has been updated and often is combined with ventilating and/or heating units. Storage can be provided from a wide variety of ready-made or built-in units. There is a wide choice of design and color in all areas.

Given the basics, and decorative imagination, the smallest bath can combine function and glamour. Even a tiny powder room tucked into an unused closet under the stairs will pay dividends.

Smoke detectors cut fire losses

"Every 45 seconds, someone dies in a home fire," warns O. L. Hogsett, University of Illinois Extension safety specialist.

Since 75 per cent of home fires occur between 9 p.m. and 6 a.m., an alarm is needed to alert or awaken occupants, Hogsett adds. And since most fire victims actually die from smoke and hot gases before heat or flames reach them, early detection is critical.

In addition to saving lives, smoke detectors can reduce property loss by making it possible to detect and extinguish fires early in their development, he says.

There are two kinds of fire-warning systems suitable for private homes — smoke and heat detectors. According to Hogsett, the ideal home fire-detection system should have the following characteristics: early warning; easy installation; reliable; self supervising; minimal maintenance; inexpensive to buy and install; not subject to false alarm; long lasting; and minimum alarm rating of 85 decibels at 10 feet.

Hogsett says smoke spreads faster than heat, so smoke detectors should give an earlier warning than heat detectors. Smoke detectors sense a fire seconds after ignition, even before there is an odor of smoke.

In contrast, heat detectors do not react until there is enough heat to activate the alarm — usually 135 degrees F. The difference in reaction time can create a disastrous delay of several minutes — a delay that can mean the difference between safe escape and death.

"In addition, heat detectors cost several hundred dollars, partially due to expensive installation that requires special electrical wiring. But smoke detectors are self-contained units that can run on batteries or be plugged into existing electrical systems," says Hogsett. "The total cost for the smoke detector averages about $50."

According to Hogsett, 2,000 lives could be saved annually by smoke detectors. The devices are economical and reliable, he adds. And a screwdriver and a few minutes are all the homeowner needs to install one.

The U. S. Consumer Product Safety Commission lists two types of effective smoke detectors on the market today:

Ion-Chamber detectors use a radioactive source to produce electrically charged molecules (ions) in the air. This sets up an electric current within the detector chamber. When combustion particles (smoke) enter the chamber, they attach to the ions and reduce the flow of electric current, thus setting off the alarm. In general, the ion-chamber detector senses flaming fires (such as drapes ignited by a wastebasket fire) quicker than it senses smoldering fires (such as an armchair ignited by a cigarette).

Photoelectric detectors contain a photoelectric bulb like the "electric eye" in many automatic doors — which emits a photoelectric beam of light. The beam sets up an electric current in the detector. When smoke obscures the light, the flow of electric current is reduced and the alarm sounds. Generally, the photoelectric detector senses smoldering fires quicker than flaming fires.

Several federal and state agencies have recognized the effectiveness of smoke detectors. The Federal Housing Administration and the Veterans Administration both require that all mobile homes covered by their programs have smoke detectors, Hogsett concludes.

Managing your family's money

Checkless 'pay' days expected for millions of senior citizens

by MERLE E. DOWD

No more paychecks! With 30 million monthly Social Security checks due for deposit through EFTS (Electronic Funds Transfer System), can paychecks lag far behind? EFTS is the opening wedge for more efficient handling of company funds — and for closer control of your own spending.

So far the plans are voluntary. But tests in Alabama proved that EFTS as a replacement for Social Security checks eliminated losses due to check theft and forgery. Oldersters no longer trudged to a bank to cash or deposit checks. Deposits were guaranteed available on time without worrying about mail delays.

Social Security recipients may elect the bank or savings and loan of their choice to receive the EFTS deposits. Or, they may elect to continue receiving checks the old way by mail. States west of the Mississippi (except Minnesota) went on the new system in August. The rest of the country will follow by year's end. The Social Security Administration estimates a savings of $3 million each year in postage alone. Further big savings result from the elimination of the 30 million checks written each month.

DIRECT PAYCHECK DEPOSIT (DPD) is following closely. DPD's benefits are cited as —

1. Money is instantly available on payday. You don't have to take your check to the bank, wait in line for cash, or deposit your check by mail and wait a day or two before you can write checks against the balance.

2. If you travel for business or personal reasons, you know the money automatically arrives in your checking account on payday.

3. You need not carry more than a minimum of cash.

4. There's no check to lose or be stolen.

Instead of a check your employer sends a statement detailing the deductions — the same information you now receive on the stub of your check. In Rochester, N.Y., 220 different companies already pay 38,000 employees in all 50 states through DPD. The number of companies in Rochester alone is growing by 30 a year — and the rate is picking up momentum.

DPD can help you tighten control over your spending. Here's how:

CASH LEAKAGE sinks more family spending plans among those I review than any other factor. When cash is withheld from a paycheck and the remainder deposited, the withheld cash is seldom accounted for. It dribbles away through a variety of big and little leaks. With the whole paycheck going into the bank through DPD, you've plugged the leak — at least temporarily.

My program for controlling spending calls for all income to be deposited in checking account. As you write checks for specific purposes, you know where the money goes. Tracking your spending is the first step in changing spending habits.

A tried-and-proved system for controlling spending has been to divide cash into envelopes marked, "Food," "Rent," "Transportation" and others. But handling large amounts of cash in envelopes today can be risky. A better system is to divide your checking account into sub-or mini-accounts.

Each of the mini-accounts represents cash formerly kept in envelopes. Instead of taking out cash for shopping, paying the rent or other spending, you write a check and deduct the amount from the mini-account balance. For bank account control, log all checks and deposits in a separate check register.

HOW ABOUT POCKET money? Mini-accounts labeled "his" and "hers" allocate dollars from each paycheck for casual spending. Or, if you are single, limit pocket money to an amount that fits in with other spending.

If you're troubled by cash leaks, try depositing your full paycheck and drawing separate checks for specific purposes. This system will work whether you deposit your whole check in the bank now, or whether your employer does the job for you through a Direct Paycheck Deposit plan.

For a copy of "Consumer Tips No. 12: Money-Stretching Tips for Traveling Vacations," send 25 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Managing Your Family's Money, in care of The Herald. (Released by The Register and Tribune Syndicate, 1975) -

One million mark reached

Joyce Richards of Quinlan and Tyson has sold $1 million in real estate for the second straight year.

A real estate sales representative in the firm's Schaumburg-Hoffman Estates area office, she went over the million mark in August, it was announced by Ken Koy, office sales manager.

Mrs. Richards joined Quinlan and Tyson last year after three years of experience selling northwest suburban real estate. She is a licensed real estate broker.

She and her husband, Gerald, have three sons. The family lives in Bartlett.

JERRY BOUSCHARD

There's a lot more to being a real estate agent than just having a supply of the necessary forms. It's true that many of these legalistic forms... notes, deeds, leases and contracts of all kinds... can be obtained in most stationery stores.

The skill of the professional real estate salesperson lies in knowing what forms are needed and which of alternate forms to use. A standard printed form is only the starting point. Someone has to know how to fill in the blanks, what can safely be omitted and what must be added. The new Real Estate Settlement and Procedures Act of 1974, has complicated the amount and types of forms even more so.

When you list your property with us, you can relax and let us worry about what forms should be used to get the job done properly.

The emotional satisfaction that home ownership brings is reason enough for many people to purchase a home. But tempering this with good, common sense and a realistic look into the financial aspects of owning a home offers a solid foundation for such a decision.

For those who refuse to be swayed by emotional appeal, there is an excellent reason that can be measured in terms of dollars: home ownership is a good investment.

"What about bonds?" one person may ask. "Wouldn't it make just as much economic sense to rent a home and invest my money in bonds?"

Let's find out. Take two families. Breadwinners of both families earn $25,000 annually and are in similar economic and tax situations. One family owns its home, the other rents. The homes are identical.

Each home costs $40,000, and real estate taxes on each are $2,000 annually. Both renter and homeowner pay $3,200 per year for their living quarters — the former in rent (including $2,000 in real estate taxes), the latter for interest payments, maintenance, repairs, and real estate taxes. Both families provide their own heat, hot water, electric utilities, etc.

The homeowner gets tax benefits from his interest and real estate tax payments. The renter, who pays these charges indirectly, gets no tax deductions from any of the money he pays in rent.

Years later, the picture is even brighter for the homeowner. His 25- or 30-year mortgage has been fully amortized. He now owns his $40,000 home free and clear. His mortgage is fully paid, so he gets no tax deductions for interest. He still pays real estate taxes and receives a federal income tax saving there.

The renter — who, let's say, now owns $40,000 in 8 per cent blue chip bonds — still indirectly pays the real estate tax bill as well as tax on the income his blue chips give him annually. Furthermore, rents usually go up as the cost of living increases, while the homeowner's principal and interest payments remain the same for the full term of his mortgage.

Once again, the homeowner has come out ahead of the renter in the tax picture . . . to say nothing of:

The feeling of security that comes from owning a home — and the knowledge that his home is a safeguard against inflation.

The volume was reported by Robert L. Nelson, president of Robert L. Nelson Real Estate Co. Jean Miller, sales manager of the Nelson real estate office, also reported that Nelson sales associate Jane Thecke and Don Johnson both participated in over $250,000 in real estate sales in July. Carmen Kerrigan addresses meeting Better service to a growing number of transferees moving from one city to another for business reasons was the prime focus of three days of attendance at the annual midyear meeting and national educational conference of RELO/ Inter-City Relocation Service held July 21-23 in New Orleans, reports Carmen Kerrigan of Robert W. Starck & Co., Realtors.

Kerrigan addressed the conference on the subject, "How RELO Can Increase Salesman's Income."

"With money generally readily available and optimistic forecasts for the economy, we find a general increase in corporate transfer activity in our local area, matching the national growth in transfers reported during executive sessions and educational seminars," stated Kerrigan. "RELO members assisted 16 per cent more families during June 1975, compared with June, 1974," reported Kerrigan. Over 400 leading real estate brokers and sales associates from this country and overseas attended the meeting.

Dvorak hits million mark

Congratulations and a bonus check are extended to Edwin J. Dvorak of Ritchie Realtors by owner Don Ritchie.

Edwin Dvorak

He upon Dvorak's surpassing the million dollar sales mark for 1975. He has recently been named vice president of the Wheeling real estate firm.

Dvorak has an extensive background in public relations work, having been at various times a publicity photographer, advertising copy writer and special interests author. His numerous articles have been published in national sporting magazines, trade journals, college literary periodicals and several newspaper Sunday supplements.

Bicycle awarded

Steve Cobb, an eighth grade student, was a recent winner of a Schwinn 10-speed Varsity Sports bicycle in Northwest Federal Savings, 904 Algonquin, Arlington Heights, year-long Hot Dots Safety design contest.

Steve's winning design had the words "Beware Look Out" on the back of his jacket made with Hot Dots.

Hot Dots are little circles of reflectorized material that help children to be seen and safe. They stick on clothing, books, bikes, almost any object. When lights hit them they shine brightly, alerting a motorist and giving him plenty of time to use caution.

Prepare for winter

A little care goes a long way in preparing your heating system for economical operation during the coming winter. The urging of the National Better Heating-Cooling Council to have your heating unit serviced before the cold weather snaps in, "is plain common sense," they say. While the weather is mild your serviceman can spend more time in tuning-up your boiler, cleaning the inside surfaces, and adjusting the flame for most economical heating.

Although a tune-up takes little time, it does require more than a lick and a promise. The knowledgeable mechanic can quickly adjust the operating controls, check out the safety controls and test the operating efficiency to make sure you're getting the most heat for your fuel dollar. But if you wait until he's besieged by hundreds of other requests for attention you will not get favored treatment when he finally does get there.

How much of the fuel dollar can be saved by proper attention depends on how much room there is for improvement. Cleaning inside the heating unit, for example, will always save some fuel, the amount depending on how much carbon has built up. A thorough cleaning might save up to 15 per cent of the annual fuel bill if the unit had been previously neglected.

Resetting and adjusting the operating controls will generally save very little in operating costs, unless the homeowner has been experimenting with his equipment and disturbed the set points on the controls. In such cases the professional adjustments will get the controls coordinated again, and they should be left that way.

Maybe we're not the "largest" BUT we are the FRIENDLIEST

Fix up your present home

Is that dream home you bought years back too small, too old — perhaps too familiar?

"If so, welcome to the club, for sooner or later it happens to just about everyone."

So comments Jackson W. Goss, president and chief executive officer of Investors Mortgage Insurance Company, Boston, a leading organization in the private mortgage insurance industry.

"Not so long ago, the solution was simple — sell it. With the purchase money, plus some savings, you could then buy another home containing all — or at least, almost all — of the features you desired," he recalls.

Higher interest rates, soaring prices and tight money all but eliminated this pattern in 1974 — and for at least the first half of 1975.

"The answer may be fixing up what you now own."

"If this is your plan, remember that although remodeling is ostensibly for your personal comfort and enjoyment — a make do procedure — it should also serve another purpose."

"Make certain each improvement actually adds dollar value to the home — when you eventually sell," Goss notes.

He offers some guidelines:

- Hire an architect to check out the soundness of your ideas regarding home improvement.
- Air-conditioning your existing home, a not exorbitantly expensive measure, can give you and your family a great deal of pleasure, while increasing property value.
- Instead of building on an additional room, try converting space. When you change interior space from one use to another, or bring a room up-to-date, the cost is less — and it gives your home an entirely new look.

• Recognize that some improvements actually help pay for themselves. Good insulation can reduce heating and cooling costs dramatically.

• If your eye is on recovery value, don't confuse improvements with maintenance jobs. Putting on a new roof or replacing the furnace won't add to resale value — they just bring the home up to the expected standards of the prospective buyer.

Home improvements do indeed pay off in most instances, he emphasizes.

"Remaining in the same neighborhood with its familiar surroundings, keeping the children in the same schools, and avoiding the expensive as well as traumatic experience of moving — the factors are big rewards in themselves," Goss concludes.

A new look

Dress up the living areas of your home by replacing the old-fashioned radiators with small, slim baseboard heaters. Old steam systems can be converted to modern hot-water heat, and it is not difficult to make changes in the piping to connect the trim baseboard units. Your extra bonus, says the National Better Heating-Cooling Council, may well be a more accurate, more comfortable control of temperature, and better economy of operation.

Home sweet home and the Bicentennial

by GAY PAULEY

A few degrees of Bicentennial fever are good for the ailing house. Just don't let the temperature get out of hand.

Interior designer Carl Taylor, discussing effects of the nation's 200th birthday celebration on home decorating, said that we "already see" some of the 18th century influences in furnishings and accessories. It shows in such things as reproductions, or hunts for originals, in the simple lines of colonial furniture, pewter and glassware, chinoiserie, and in fabrics hearkening to our forefathers' days.

But "asking what effect the Bicentennial will have is like asking what effect Colonial Williamsburg had," said Taylor.

"I FEAR WE will have a mass

Bicentennial fever, a lot of people will be taken, buying something they just won't want later. The better way is to add pieces that make sense.

"An old-fashioned tea table for instance. It can serve many purposes and gets away from the low coffee table, which I'm against anyway."

Or, add a secretary, a drop-leaf table, tray table or china cabinets of the period. China cabinets make good bookshelves.

If you can find an original of the period, you're in genuine luck. But there will be plenty of good reproductions.

Taylor, 45, a native of Appomattox, Va., is director of interior design for Drexel Heritage Furnishings, based in Morgantown, N.C. He came to the job three years ago by way of a degree in fine arts from William and Mary College, Williamsburg, Va., the Parsons School of Design, N.Y., scholarships to study antiques and architecture in Europe, interior design and antiques buyer with W & J Sloane, furnishings retailers, and an editor with a decorating magazine.

HE CAUTIONED against going overboard in any one direction "unless the interest truly is there. Tastes change. I've seen my own and those around me change just in the time I've worked in Morgantown."

Status symbols also have changed, he said. There still will be those to whom status means a big car or a fabulous fur. But for more and more, the home ranks as the new show and tell sign of success, not as a sprawling palatial digs but a reflection of the new regard for utility, identity and taste.

The home now makes a personal statement. You see it in the increased interest in collecting, in the plethora of people attending auctions and combing flea markets.

THE DESIGNER sees much of the traditional returning, but doubts if it will be one sweeping movement. "I think we're going to find the traditional and contemporary neck and neck, a combination of the two," he said.

Asked for some of the specifics of "status" today, Taylor offered:

- Eclectic, exploratory settings that ignore the rules and express the inhabitants' likes and dislikes.
- The interest in collecting, finding something real that blends with what's already in the house. "Not to make it a museum," he said, "to gather something of interest."

"If you're not interested in collecting," he said, "why not just forget it. Collecting usually starts with something handed down or as a gift anyway. An heirloom quilt, a leather chair..."

• Personal indulgences that provide a rewarding luxury or utility, such as an elegant canopy bed, a custom-made backgammon table, decorative handpainted such as silk-screened pillows, baskets, a stenciled floor.

• Well-organized space. The way in which space is used reveals how the inhabitants feel about their home. Hallways that are merely passageways aren't using the resources. But Taylor is pro-dining room, although some home owners decry the wasted space in these days when eating can be anywhere from the family room to the backyard.

"You can use it for other purposes," he said, "But for me there is nothing greater than a space where eight or 10 people sit and enjoy food and conversation for a few hours."

• Plants everywhere. "Plants do a lot for a house," said Taylor. "The other day I brought home two carloads of potted plants. I was watering the plants before I left the nursery."

"The salesgirl said, 'Well, thank goodness, you're someone who cares more about the plants than about your car.'"

Nation's birthday puts new emphasis on four poster bed

The celebration of the country's Bicentennial is putting new emphasis on a furniture design from our history, the four poster bed.

Today's reproductions of this part of our American heritage come in a wide range of variations. Many of them are built of the hardwoods that are also a part of our heritage — oak, maple, cherry, mahogany, pecan, ash among others.

For those who will be using their homes to express pride in their American heritage, the choice in four posters ranges from a very contemporary look to the traditional.

ONE CONTEMPORARY model is hand-crafted of giant alder logs from the forests of Oregon. Stripped of its bark, sanded and hand-waxed for a back-to-nature look, this bed is built in a dowel-like construction that uses no nails or glue but is pinned with steel. It uses no stain or finish either, other than waxing.

Another contemporary version comes in ash, an American hardwood that's been made into furniture since this land was first settled. Its posts are squared and the headboard rises straight and tall right up to the tester above. There are no ornate carvings or graceful curves; the grain pattern gives the bed its only decoration. It has the strength and simplicity associated with early American crafts and the simple lines so popular in contemporary design.

Oak is the wood used in another four poster that has a more English flavor with high headboard connected to tester overhead.

For the purist steeped in tradition there are reproductions in cherry, maple or mahogany that borrow their design from the original 18th century models. In the traditional model the four poster will have gracefully turned slender posts that rise to delicate finials on top, a simply shaped headboard or perhaps a stately broken pediment. Brass ornamentation on the lower portion of the posts is another feature favored by those looking for authentic detail.

The canopy may be the most charming feature of the traditional four poster for some. Many of today's reproductions are available with or without the canopy so you may do your own. Originally the canopy as well as the side curtains provided both privacy and warmth. They can do the same today.

ANOTHER FOUR poster style popular for its rugged manliness is of more massive proportions with spirally curved posts. Called rope turnings, these add a feeling of stability and security. This model comes in sturdy oak, one of America's most prolific hardwoods, used in furniture in this country throughout its history and still in plentiful supply.

Years ago, four poster beds were built high off the ground and occasionally came equipped with little stools to help you climb into them. In those days the height was needed to keep the slumberer safe from cold drafts along the floor.

Today's models are scaled for today's living, closer to the ground for easy access. It's nearly impossible to find a single bed with posts, but many are available in large sizes, from standard double to queen and king size.

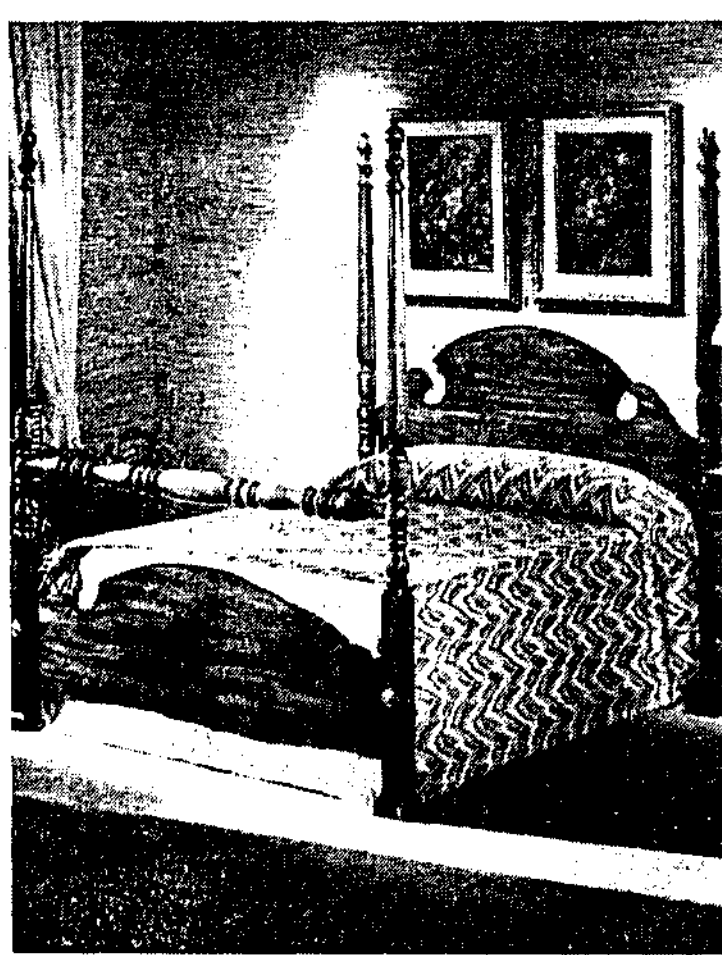

(Further information about the hardwood beds pictured may be obtained by writing Hardwood Institute, Suite 1422, 551 Fifth Ave., N.Y. 10017.)

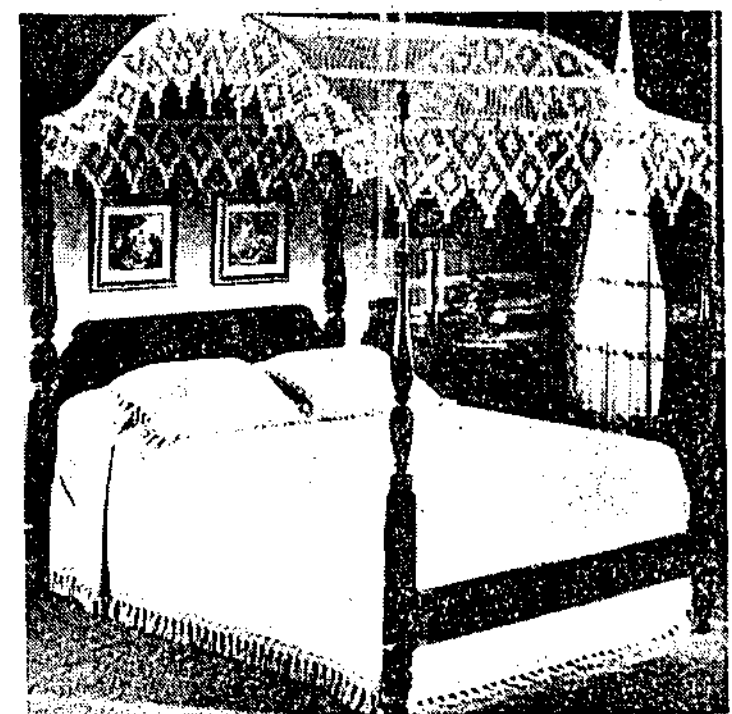

TESTER RESTING on sturdy rope very rustic look. Oak is one of turnings gives oak four poster a most prolific hardwoods.

SOLID POSTS of cherry and gently curved headboard are reminiscent of traditional American design of the 18th century.

BICENTENNIAL influence is reflected in this delicate four poster in cherry with graceful posts and gently curving canopy.

A woman's voice can make or break her Clothes may make the man, but her speaking voice can make or break a woman, says veteran voice consultant Dorothy Uris.

"A woman can be very intelligent and have interesting thoughts to contribute, but if she speaks so softly she can't be heard, or talks in an unbecoming 'little girl voice,' or she hasn't organized her thoughts, people will assume she has nothing to say and tune her out," Mrs. Uris admonishes.

Today, as more women move into places where their voices should be heard, effective communication is required more than ever before. Unfortunately, Mrs. Uris notes, "women don't hear themselves as others do."

IN HER NEW book, "A Woman's Voice," this speech therapist advises women to use a small cassette tape recorder for an accurate playback of how they sound to others. The good speaking voice, she says, is one that has no vocal problems such as nasality, a lisp, speech defects or other handicaps.

By hearing herself and becoming aware of her problems, a woman can work toward overcoming them. A good speaking voice, Mrs. Uris says whether in business, professional or political affairs, will help a woman keep pace with her aspirations or accomplishments.

"Speak plainly, with pleasing voice modulation, attractive rhythm, and useful words," she urges. "Model your speech after one you have heard and admired — but don't imitate." If you are making a speech, devote time beforehand to organize your thoughts. If you know what you are going to say, you can give more concentration to saying it properly.

CONSTANT practice and consistency are also required, she insists. "I had a marvelous teacher who told me not to have a Sunday speech and a Monday speech, and to listen to myself when speaking in private or in public and be consistent."

Age is no deterrent to good speech, Mrs. Uris points out. "Many older women have vigorous voices because they keep in good health. The voice is usually younger than the person," she says, "but a good voice is not a gift, it's an achievement."

Author Dorothy Uris was formerly professional actress Dorothy Tree. She learned to speak up and be heard through her years of training in the theater. She also appeared in some 30

Hollywood movies (you may remember her as the spy in "Confessions of a Nazi Spy"), but she decided that "waiting for agents to call" was not for her.

UPON RETURNING to New York, Mrs. Uris started a second career as a speech teacher and therapist. She has taught, coached and rehearsed hundreds of people whose lives demand improved speech. In addition to conducting individual lessons, she is on the faculties of Mannes College and the Manhattan College of Music in New York City.

Among her many students have been such political figures as the late Sen. Robert Kennedy and Cong. Bella Abzug. She has also taught actors and singers for several opera companies, including the Metropolitan, how to sing in English.

"A Woman's Voice" (Stein and Day Publishers, $8.95) is a handbook for women — on the job, in volunteer work, campaigning, or just in private life — who want to increase competence and confidence in their speaking ability. Mrs. Uris sees it as a tool to help women in their new roles in the community.

Yeast no good after expiration date

Dear Dorothy: I have several packets of dry yeast, all dated from March 1974 to September 1974. First, can I still use them? Second, if so, must I double the amount called for in the recipe due to strength loss? — Mrs. Agnes Durnez.

You can't use the yeast no matter what once you've run beyond a rational expiration date. I've checked with the best-known yeast-making firm and those dates mean what they say, give a few days' leeway. Beyond that, it's a toss-away item. Those who buy this kind of product need to check the dates and store as instructed — in the refrigerator.

Dear Dorothy: Sticky sooty leaves keep falling on our car from a tree with branches stretching over the driveway. What's the cause and what do we do to prevent it? — Mrs. J. W. Krieger.

It's too late to do anything about it now. It all began with sucking insects in the tree — Aphids, leafhoppers and so forth. They secrete a sticky material and the sooty coating is a fungus that grows on the sticky stuff. What was needed was a malathion spray in early spring.

Water purity questioned

Scientists have found that water which sits in household pipes overnight can sometimes pick up potentially hazardous amounts of trace metals like lead and cadmium.

Dr. William Strain, a biochemist at Case Western Reserve University who recently reported these findings, advised flushing the taps each morning by letting the water run a minute or two before using.

Dr. Strain's report on household water joins a string of other studies which have raised questions concerning the quality of U.S. drinking water. These doubts have contributed to a boom in sales of bottled water, which zoomed from $67 million annually to $150 million in the past five years.

CONSUMERS are paying from 50 to

by Monica Wilch Perin

75 cents a gallon for bottled water, compared to about 1 cent for 50 gallons of tap water, on the assumption that they will avoid any impurities.

However, the Food and Drug Administration found in a survey of 50 water bottlers that 21 of them used public water supplies — the same as your tap water. Unfortunately, there are no regulations requiring bottlers to indicate on their labels the source of their water.

Moreover, the FDA survey disclosed lapses in quality control of bottled water as well as inadequate plant sanitation, facilities, employee practices and containers, some of which were serious enough to make the bottled water unfit for consumption.

A home reception for 100

After their two o'clock wedding July 12 in St. Thomas of Villanova Catholic Church, Palatine, Wendy Anne Mayfield and Michael Wayne Stephens greeted 100 guests at a reception in the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas A. Mayfield.

The Mayfield family lives in Palatine, and the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Stephens, are residents of Cincinnati, Ohio.

Wendy and Michael both work in the area, she for Alpha Technical Services, Mount Prospect, and he for the White Hen in Palatine. They are making their home in Schaumburg.

BOTH ATTENDED Palatine High School. Wendy is a '74 graduate and Michael a '70.

Pam Sorel of Palatine was maid of honor for the couple's double ring ceremony, and bridesmaids were Susan Dewey, Wendy's sister, and Melanio Ellefson, her cousin from Washington Island, Wis.

Robert Stephens of Cincinnati was his brother's best man, with Robert Korston, Palatine, and Mark Morgan, Mount Prospect, as groomsmen.

AIR BAGS: The Department of Transportation still hasn't decided whether to require air bags in automobiles a safety device in crashes.

Studies by insurance companies, which are lobbying for air bags, have indicated that they can be extremely effective in preventing injuries, especially in high-speed crashes.

Unlike seatbelts, they are a "passive restraint": They do not require any action on the part of auto passengers, but deploy automatically upon impact of an accident.

Consumers interested in obtaining air bags will be interested to know they are currently optional equipment on new Oldsmobiles, Buicks and Cadillacs, and may be obtained for other cars, new or old, from Control Laser Corp., 1800 Southwest 7th Ave., Pompano Beach, Fla. 33060, for about $75. The device can be attached to the steering wheel.

Elizabeth Arden
VISIBLE DIFFERENCE
REFINING MOISTURE-CREME COMPLEX

THE DAWNING OF SKIN

Elizabeth Arden announces Day One in a whole new dimension in skin care. A texturizing cream and moisturizer in one! A discovery so effective, it actually penetrates up to 20 cell-layers deep. You'll see a brighter, finer-textured, more polished skin within 14 to 21 days.

The difference is: This invisible cream goes far beyond merely moisturizing. It refines skin texture and gives it luminous clarity.

The difference is: Instead of being just surface "dew", Visible Difference infiltrates layer after layer. A development that took two years to perfect, it actually plumps up your skin from the inside.

The difference is: Clinical tests prove that oily and "combination" skins can show a dramatic improvement in freshness and texture, as well as skin that's dry.

Robert J. Garvins receive guests in garden setting

honor and her sisters, Patricia Ann Mauer and Esther Katherine Richardson, both of Buffalo Grove, as bridesmaids. The three wore yellow gingham dresses and natural straw hats banded with blue ribbons and flowers. They carried baskets of yellow carnations and baby's breath with white daisies.

THE BRIDE wore a white organza gown with a cape neckline and flounced hemline, both outlined in lace. With it she wore a white straw hat and carried yellow roses interspersed with white daisies and baby's breath.

The bridegroom, son of the John Robert Garvins of Marcus, Iowa, was attended by Leslie Eiters, Mount Prospect, as best man. Groomsmen were Dan Oehlendorf of Marcus and Clark Rainboth of Cherokee, Iowa. The couple's brothers, Thomas Garvin, Streamwood, and Rick Mauer, Sumter, S.C., ushered.

Growing houseplants takes savvy

House plants have enjoyed a surge of popularity for the past two years, as witnessed by the mushrooming of many, small potted plant shops.

Unfortunately, many people have gone into houseplants with more money than savvy.

I sold a beautiful, large false aralia to one budding house plant lover who came back the next day with the plant so utterly altered, it was hard to tell it was the same plant. She had left the plant in the trunk of her car while she went to work and there it sat all day in the heat with no ventilation. Needless to say, the aralia is on the critical list.

Another woman had a keepsake African violet repotted professionally, then figured that would do it forever, and didn't water it again for three weeks. The violet now must be junked.

A THIRD WOMAN revealed in relating her $40 failures, including a specimen spider plant in a 16-inch hanging pot, accidentally left sitting in water for two weeks. I lent her a tool which removes water from the soil by capillary action, but I really don't hold much success for the vigor of plants subjected to wet feet and accompanying rotted roots.

People new to the cultivation of houseplants should start out with 79-cent plants, not botanical treasures.

Start out with a few easy-to-grow plants like philodendron, piggy-back, velvet plant, Chinese evergreen, peperomia, pothos rubber plant, hoyo, cissus inch plant, dumb cane.

Graduate to plants of medium difficulty; ivy, ferns begonias, maranta, azalea, croton, baby tears exacum, African violet.

Then as successes come, go on to calathea, episcia, bouvardia, jasmine, orchids, and the most exotic plants.

SEVERAL KEY guidelines to follow: Grow most plants cool, give them light, create moisture in the air (mist or humidity), loosen the topsoil and water sensibly. Invest in good houseplant food like Jungle Growth, C-Food, Schultz' Instant or Green Fingers and use it carefully. A decent house plant book with care requirements for a wide variety of plants is a

by Mary B. Good

must. Some come in paperback, like Elvin McDonald's books.

House plant people tend to fall into two categories: those who tend to water frequently and those who water sparingly. Find out in which class you rightly belong by calculating your rate of success with various plants. If you can grow ivies, ferns, bromeliads, crotons, aralias, easily, you are a frequent waterer.

Other plants like cactus, shefflera, Chinese evergreen palms, African violets, pothos, mother-in-law-tongue, hens and chicks like life on the drier side.

IT TAKES ABOUT two years of growing an assortment of houseplants to become adept at the hobby. After initial successes, serious beginners may want to progress to try starting new plants from cuttings or divisions, try making their own potting soil mixtures, and diagnosing their own plant ills.

And if you're thinking of bringing plants indoors which have been summering outside, August is the month to start. Never wait until fall sets off the hardening impulse in plants. Fuschias, geraniums, impatiens, tuberous and wax begonias are prime subjects for bringing indoors.

Above all, remember that if you don't have time to devote to minimum maintenance of house plants (50 plants takes an hour of your time a day) and you have no provisions for their care when you vacation, better you should buy plastic plants!

Interferes with heat

Furniture directly in front of a radiator or heating vent keeps warm air from circulating freely and providing maximum heating for the fuel being used.

THE SPIRIT OF '76

The Bicentennial is here and it's time to celebrate! What better way than with rum, the spirit of '76, and a hearty old-fashioned dinner, such as our forefathers might have enjoyed.

Rum was an important staple of everyday life in the 17th and 18th centuries. Americans used rum in trade. We bartered rum for fur from the Indians and the skins were swapped for beads and fabric from London. Rum was present at weddings, operations and funerals.

Rum is just as popular today, not only as a beverage, in punches and cocktails, but as a basic cooking ingredient — what would Christmas be like without a holiday rum cake?

With the coming year filled with celebrations of the 200th birthday of our great country, why not invite friends and family in for your own special Bicentennial Party? Keep the food simple and hearty, just like our forefathers did. For a nice old-fashioned touch, use pewter serving pieces and cast iron pots.

Fried chicken can be the main course, served up with Boston baked beans and a lettuce salad. A hearty brown bread and an old-fashioned apple mince pie round out the menu. For the beverage, have your guests serve themselves a variation of the Cranberry Rum Shrub, another old favorite, and then sit back and celebrate America!

Beer Batter Chicken

- 3 pound broiler-fryer, cut up
- 2 cups flour, divided
- Oil or shortening
- 2 teaspoons baking powder
- 1 1/2 teaspoons salt
- 1 teaspoon paprika
- 1/2 teaspoon pepper
- 2 eggs
- 3/4 cup beer
- 1 tablespoon melted butter

Rinse and dry chicken pieces, roll in 1/2 cup flour. Heat oil in heavy deep skillet; oil should be at least 2 inches deep. Mix remaining 1 1/2 cups flour with baking powder and seasonings. Beat eggs with beer and melted butter. Add flour mixture gradually, beating until very smooth. Coat chicken pieces with batter, turning over to cover evenly. Fry a few pieces at a time, turning several times, until golden, crisp and tender — about 20 minutes. Makes 4 servings.

Apple Mince Pie

- 5 cups thinly sliced tart apples
- 1 1/2 cups prepared mincemeat
- 1 cup packed brown sugar
- 3 tablespoons flour
- 1/4 teaspoon salt

- 1/4 teaspoon nutmeg
- Pastry for 2-crust pie
- 2 tablespoons butter
- 2 tablespoons gold rum

Combine apples and mincemeat. Mix sugar, flour, salt and nutmeg. Combine with apple-mince mixture. Line a 9-inch pie pan with pastry. Fill with apple mixture, dot with butter and sprinkle with rum. Roll out top crust and adjust on pie filling. Crimp edges and cut slits in crust for steam to escape. Bake in a hot oven, 400 degrees, for 10 minutes. Lower heat to moderate, 350 degrees, continue baking for about 40-45 minutes. Serve warm with sharp cheddar cheese.

Anadama Bread

- 1/2 cup white or yellow stone-ground cornmeal
- 2 cups boiling water
- 3 tablespoons butter or lard
- 1/2 cup molasses
- 2 teaspoons salt
- 1 package active dry yeast
- 4-5 cups all-purpose flour
- 1 egg

Stir the cornmeal into the boiling water over low heat. Use a wooden spoon to mix, stirring until very smooth and thickened. Stir in the butter or lard, molasses and salt. Cool mixture until lukewarm. Add the yeast dissolved in 1/4 cup warm water. Beat in 2 cups of flour and the egg. Add the remaining flour, 1 cup at a time, to make a smooth dough. Turn the dough out onto a floured board, knead several minutes. Shape dough into a ball and place in a buttered bowl. Cover with kitchen towel wrung out in hot water. Let rise until doubled in bulk, about 2 hours. Punch dough down, turn out on floured board; knead lightly and shape into 2 loaves. Place loaves in greased loaf pans (7x5x3) and allow to rise again for 1 hour. Then bake in a preheated moderate oven, 375 degrees, until golden brown, about 45-50 minutes. Brush with butter and cool on rack. Makes 2 loaves.

Cranberry Rum Shrub

- 1 quart cranberry juice
- 1/4 cup sugar (optional, to taste)
- 1 pint ginger ale

- 10-12 oz. gold rum
- Lime and lemon slices

Stir cranberry juice and sugar together until dissolved. Add remaining ingredients and serve over ice.

The cholesterol culprit

by BARBARA LADD

Previously, patients with diagnosed heart disease or high blood cholesterol levels were advised to watch their diets. But with the influx of evidence piling up on the role of cholesterol and heart disease, many doctors and nutritionists recommend the entire population — and especially males — become concerned with their diets.

"I usually advise mothers of male children to serve their sons skim milk and low amounts of ice cream, butter and eggs," said Dr. John L. Switzer, a Wheeling cardiologist.

And Mary Foy, a nutrition intern at Northwest Community Hospital, said that if children are brought up with low cholesterol foods, they won't even miss the pies and cakes later in life.

BUT WHY ALL the concern about feeding children and healthy adults high amounts of cholesterol?

To begin with, cardiovascular disease will kill a million Americans this year — more than 50 per cent of all deaths. The great killer is the atherosclerosis (hardening of the arteries) and the culprit behind most heart attacks.

The beginnings of atherosclerosis, (one of several blood vessel diseases called arteriosclerosis), are still mysterious. When children go off mother's milk and onto cow's milk, they develop "fatty streaks" — long, yellowish markings — on the inner linings of their arteries.

FATTY STREAKS in early life are not important and usually disappear. But there is evidence that in some people fatty substances like cholesterol are deposited in the fatty streaks, and in later life can produce damage to the arteries.

This process of arterial damage is slow, probably taking 20 to 40 years on the average. Most Americans have moderately severe atherosclerosis by the time they reach 50.

Dr. Switzer said that for many years, hardening of the arteries was thought to accompany only old age. Then, in the Korean War, came a stunning discovery: A team of doctors performing autopsies on young soldiers killed in battle found that nearly 80 per cent of them (Mostly in their late teens and early twenties) had appreciable coronary atherosclerosis.

Now the medical field generally recommends that people in their twenties on up should take serious measures against heart disease. While there are many factors, diet is becoming more convincingly important.

Miss Foy, the nutritionist, said cholesterol is a white, odorless, tasteless, fatty alcohol found principally in eggs, meats (especially organ meats), butter, shellfish and practically all animal-derived foods. But only 20 to 40 per cent of the blood cholesterol level is from the diet.

Cholesterol is also manufactured in the body, primarily by the liver, and is essential for life.

Miss Foy said cholesterol is used by the body, for example, to make hormones like estrogen and bile acids which play an important part in digestion. It is also important early in life for brain development and manufacturing vitamin D.

TWO SUBSTANCES in the diet largely control the circulating blood cholesterol level. One is dietary cholesterol and the other is dietary fats.

Saturated fats, the kind usually solid at room temperature, make serum (blood) cholesterol rise. Foods such as butter, cheese, beef, pork, lamb and chocolate are high in saturated fats.

Unsaturated fats tend to make serum cholesterol go down and are usually liquid at room temperature. The best unsaturated oils are corn, cottonseed, safflower, sesame seed, soybean and sunflower seed oils.

Miss Foy said that labels reading "vegetable oils" are not considered safe for use on low cholesterol diets because often coconut oil, cocoa butter and palm oil are used and these three are high in saturated fats.

"The best thing is for consumers to read the labels," she said. "Manufacturers are always trying to trick the consumer."

As an example, she referred to Promise margarine — once touted to be the best commercial margarine for low cholesterol diets. She said that after the margarine became accepted by the public, the company switched to another type of oil — a cheaper and less preferable oil from the standpoint of nutritionists.

"Once the product gets established, the manufacturer switches ingredients and doesn't tell the consumer," she said.

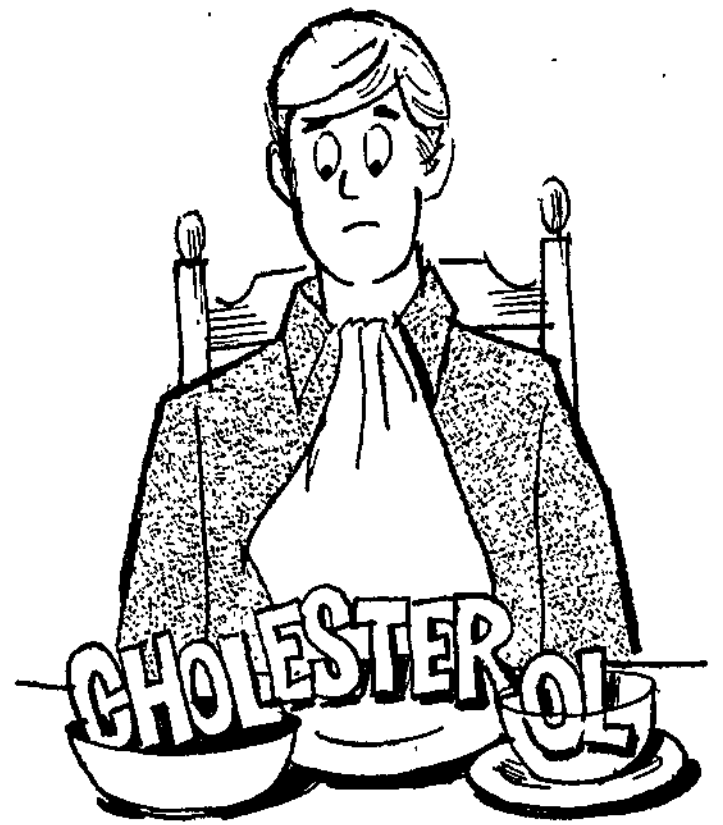

Miss Foy said that about 200 to 300 milligrams of cholesterol are recommended for adults each day. And only one egg contains about 250 milligrams.

"YOU HAVE TO shop wisely to pick up the low cholesterol foods," she pointed out.

However, special foods low in cholesterol can cost the consumer quite a few pennies more than regular foods. Special margarines can be up to a dime higher in price and the cholesterol-free equivalent to one dozen eggs is about 30 cents higher.

Yet the price is worth it if it reduces the chance of heart disease, said Miss Foy. "You just can't predict now whether you will have heart disease later on in your life," she said.

But Dr. Switzer, a supporter of the low cholesterol diets, said, "Don't think we have one answer with the heart problems. Many people with high cholesterol are perfectly healthy, many with low cholesterol have heart disease. There are a lot of variables and cholesterol is just one of them."

For a fat-controlled diet

The American Heart Association has several suggestions for people who want to control the amount and type of fat in the diet.

- Use fish, chicken, turkey and veal in most of your meat meals for the week; use moderate-sized portions of beef, lamb, pork and ham less frequently.

- Choose lean cuts of meat, trim visible fat, and discard the fat that cooks out of the meat.

- Avoid deep fat frying; use cooking methods that help to remove fat — baking, broiling, broiling, roasting and stewing.

- Restrict your use of fatty "luncheon" and "variety" meats like sausages and salami.

- Instead of butter and other cooking fats that are solid or completely hydrogenated, use liquid vegetable oils and margarines from oils like corn, cottonseed, safflower, sesame seed, soybean and sunflower seed.

- Instead of whole milk and cheeses made from whole milk and cream, use skimmed milk and skimmed milk cheeses. Eat ice milk or sherbet instead of ice cream.

Praises to steak Oscar

When we learned that Atlanta Magazine's "Diner's Choice" poll of the Georgia metropolis rated The Sandpiper at the top, it became a must for dining. Incidentally, The Midnight Sun about which we wrote recently, was a close second.

A principal reason for excellence of

by Charles Flynn

The Sandpiper is its management. Far West Services, presided over by John Reuben McIntosh, operates this restaurant as well as some other famed spots which we have visited, like Reuben's in Hollywood, Isadoro's in Phoenix, the Moonraker on Long Island and the Reuben E. Lee in San Diego.

The McIntosh ownership has three primary objectives, good food, comfortable patrons and service which makes dining enjoyable. We chose steak Oscar for our main course from a menu which included specialties such as New Orleans bouillabaisse, prime rib and shrimp Mediterranean. Ordinarily veal is used on the Oscar dish, but the Sandpiper chef does it with cutlets of beef tenderloin or eye of the rib. Cut 6 serving size pieces of beef and trim them evenly. Rub meat with salt and white pepper on both sides. Melt 2 tablespoons butter in a large skillet and saute the beef 3 to 5 minutes on each side until golden brown. Time will depend on thickness of cutlets. Transfer to a heated platter and place 4 tips of cooked asparagus on each. Keep warm.

Make Sauce Bernaise as follows: Allow 1/2 cup butter to come to room temperature. In the top of a double boiler combine 3 sprigs each of tarragon and chervil and 2 shallots, all finely chopped (little green onions may be substituted), with 1/4 cup of tarragon vinegar and 1/4 cup white wine. Cook mixture over boiling water until it resembles a thick paste. Let it cool slightly.

Return pan over hot but not boiling water now and add 3 egg yolks and 1 tablespoon water. Stir briskly with wire whisk until light and fluffy. Add one third of the butter and whisk constantly until sauce thickens slightly. Repeat twice more adding remaining butter in 2 parts, whisking briskly and constantly. Makes 1 cup sauce.

When sauce is ready, cover each beef cutlet with 1 tablespoon finely chopped crabmeat. Pour over the Sauce Bernaise generously and serve at once.

Greek food with an Irish touch

by LOIS SEILER

Of Irish descent, Rosanne Daros, Arlington Heights, married into a Greek family and loves it. She enjoys eating Greek food and has become accomplished in its preparation. Her husband Jack's parents taught her many recipes, and she learned to prepare one of her favorites, Dolmathes, from his grandmother.

Dolmathes are grape vine leaves stuffed with a mixture of ground beef and rice seasoned with onion, mint leaves and garlic. Jars of vine leaves can be purchased at Dominick's or Columbus Food Mart in Des Plaines.

For dessert, Rosanne recommends Karithopeta, an appealing Athens Nut Cake. Easy to prepare, the batter is made with Bisquick.

According to Rosanne, it is even better if allowed to set a day before serving. Karithopeta will keep for a week in the refrigerator, and is cut in diamond shapes to serve. The cake makes a big hit with the Daros' children, Christine, 13, and John, 12.

While Rosanne enjoys cooking Greek food most of all because it is so different and tastes so good, she also favors a savory seafood recipe.

Shrimp de Jonghe can be served as an entree, but Rosanne prefers it for appetizers. Baked for 10 to 15 minutes, the shrimp is served hot and speared with toothpicks. Rich and delicious, it is an elegant appetizer for a steak dinner.

DOLMATHES

- 1 jar grape vine leaves
- 1 1/2 pounds ground beef
- 1 cup rice, washed and uncooked
- 1 large onion, chopped
- 1/2 cup extra-quality olive oil
- 1 1/2 tablespoons mint leaves, chopped
- 1 egg
- 1 clove garlic, chopped
- Salt and pepper.

Simmer grape vine leaves for 30 minutes. Combine remaining ingredients in a large bowl and mix thoroughly.

Rinse and drain vine leaves. Line them up on a board, removing any long stems from leaves. If leaves are small, use two at a time. Place a tablespoon of meat filling on the center of each leaf, with the shiny side on the outside. Fold like an envelope

GRAPE VINE leaves are stuffed with a ground beef and rice mixture by Rosanne Daros, Arlington

KARITHOPETA

(Athens Nut Cake)

- 2 cups Bisquick
- 1 cup sugar
- 1 cup chopped walnuts
- 1 1/2 teaspoons baking powder
- 1/2 teaspoon baking soda
- 1/8 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 teaspoon ground cloves
- 1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
- 1 cup vegetable oil
- 1 cup milk
- 4 eggs, unbeaten

Place all ingredients in a large bowl and blend well with electric mixer. Pour into an ungreased 9 by 13-inch pan; batter will be similar to a waffle batter. Bake 45 minutes at 350 degrees or until cake loosens from sides of pan. If Teflon or Pyrex pan is used,

A frozen fact

If the flavor, texture and color of your home frozen foods are not as good as their commercial counterparts, consider this: appliances used by manufacturers freeze faster and at lower temperatures, sealing in freshness and nutritive value more effectively.

Dog-gone diets

Even the family dog has had to adjust his eating habits to the new realities of higher prices, says Robert F. Dietrich, director of research for a supermarket industry magazine.

Writing in the July issue of 'Progressive Grocer,' Dietrich said tonnage of canned dog food has dipped for the past six audited 12-week periods, while dry dog food sales have gained.

Still, pet foods remain the largest dry grocery department in supermarkets, a reflection of America's phenomenal acquisition of dogs and cats. About 37 million families, an estimated 57 per cent of all United States households, own one or more of the nation's 60 million dogs and cats.

Shoppers are spending 300 to 400 per cent more for pet food than for baby food, the magazine added. (UPI) bake at 325 degrees for 35 minutes.

As soon as cake is put into oven, prepare the following syrup for topping:

- 2 cups water
- 2 cups sugar
- 1 teaspoon lemon juice
- 6 whole cloves

Combine ingredients and allow to simmer until cake is done. About 15 minutes after cake is removed from oven, pour syrup over it. Allow to set from 12 to 24 hours, if possible. Cut in diamond shapes to serve.

SHRIMP de JONGHE

- 3 cloves garlic
- 1 teaspoon chopped parsley
- 1 teaspoon chopped chervil
- 1 teaspoon chopped shallots
- 1 teaspoon chopped tarragon
- Pinch of nutmeg
- Pinch of mace
- Pinch of ground black pepper
- 1/2 pound butter, at room temperature
- 2/3 cup fine bread crumbs
- 1/2 cup dry sherry
- 2 pounds shrimp
- 1/2 can onion soup

Crush garlic with fork or mortar and gradually work it and other herbs and spices into butter. Then work in crumbs and sherry.

Cook fresh or frozen shrimp in boiling salted water for three minutes. Drain.

Arrange layers of shrimp in square baking dish and pour onion soup over shrimp. Spread herb-crumbs mixture on top. Bake at 400 degrees for 10 to 15 minutes. If deeper color is desired, place under hot broiler for two minutes. Serve hot with plastic toothpicks. Serves 6 to 8 as appetizers. Will serve 4 for an entree.

Who spends more?

Homeowners, with an average family size of three, spend $26.25 per week on food for in-house consumption and about $9 eating out.

Renters, with the same average family size, spend $18.25 per week on food for the home and $7.50 for eating out.

The figures were obtained from a recent study by a Chicago-based company.

In a pickle?

Reasons behind the recipes

The next time you plan a corned beef on rye sandwich menu, surprise your family with a crisp homemade dill pickle on the side.

Pickling is one of the oldest methods of food preservation, and summer fruit and vegetable crops are at their peak for pickling.

Although a wide variety of fruits and vegetables are suitable for pickling, pickles can be divided into two groups — brined pickles and fresh-pack pickles.

Brined or fermented pickles are made from vegetables, most often cucumbers, and are immersed in a brine solution and allowed to cure several days to several weeks before canning.

Fresh pack pickles are canned in a spicy vinegar solution. Sometimes a brine soaking period is used, but it is very short, only several hours or overnight.

While pickling is not difficult, proper techniques and ingredients are necessary to ensure a good product.

The crispness and flavor, whether tart or sweet, of a good pickle are related to the ingredients and method of handling. The cucumber variety used, the correct balance of vinegar, salt, sugar and water in the pickling solution, as well as the recipe directions and equipment used are all important for successful results.

Cucumbers should be young and of a variety that has been developed for pickling, such as Spartan Dawn or SMR. Eating-types of cucumbers are generally not suitable for making pickles.

Pickles should be in the pickling solution within 24 hours after picking, or a hollow or soft pickle may result.

Salt adds both flavor and crispness to pickles. Either pure granulated pickling salt or iodized table salt can be used. Pickling salt is preferred, however, as table salt, even if iodized, contains an anti-caking ingredient which makes the brine cloudy. Do not use iodized salt because it will darken the pickles.

Vinegar provides tartness and acts as a preservative. Either high-grade white or cider vinegar may be used, but the acid content of both needs to be four to six per cent. Acidity is very important for the preservation process because a cucumber is a low acid vegetable.

Sugar balances the vinegar's tartness. Either granulated white sugar or packed brown sugar may be used. White sugar is often preferred for light colored pickles and brown sugar for darker pickle varieties.

Water dissolves the salt and provides the liquid for the brine. Soft water is preferred because minerals found in hard water settle to the bottom of the jar after processing.

Water may be softened by boiling for 15 minutes. Allow water to stand for 24 hours, remove surface scum, and add one tablespoon vinegar per gallon before using.

Spices are the distinctive flavoring in pickles. Fresh herbs and spices should always be used because spices deteriorate and quickly lose strength once opened.

Utensils, are important, too, and those of stoneware, glass or stainless steel are best. Copper, brass, chipped enamelware, and galvanized or iron utensils should not be used since these metals react with acids and salt to form poisonous substances.

Processing in a boiling water bath, the final step in successful pickling, destroys any spoilage organisms present and ensures keeping quality.

Here are two pickle recipes from The Better Homes and Gardens Home Canning Cookbook.

KOSHER DILL PICKLES
2½ pounds 4-inch cucumbers (about 25)
Fresh dill heads

Garlic cloves
Hot red peppers
1 cup pickling salt
4 cups cider vinegar

Thoroughly wash cucumbers. Pack cucumbers in hot quart jars, leaving ½-inch headspace. To each quart add 2 heads fresh dill, 1 clove garlic, and 1 hot pepper. In medium saucepan combine pickling salt, cider vinegar, and 3 quarts water. Bring the mixture to boiling.

Pour boiling hot pickling liquid over cucumbers, leaving ½-inch headspace. Adjust lids. Process in boiling water bath (quarts) 20 minutes. Makes about 5 quarts.

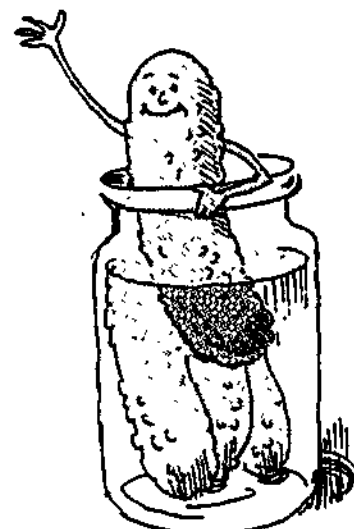

SWEET PICKLES
9½ pounds of 3 to 4-inch cucumbers (about 150)
1 cup pickling salt
12 cups sugar
8 cups cider vinegar
1 cup prepared horseradish
16 inches stick cinnamon
1½ tsp. celery seed

Wash cucumbers; cover with hot brine made from pickling salt and 2 quarts boiling water. Cool; cover with plate or lid with weight atop to keep cucumbers in brine. Let stand 7 days.

Drain. Cover cucumbers with hot water; let stand 24 hours. Drain. Again cover with hot water; let stand 24 hours. Drain; split cucumbers in half. Combine sugar, cider vinegar, horseradish, cinnamon, and celery seed. Bring mixture to boiling. Pour boiling syrup over cucumbers. Drain syrup from the cucumbers each morning for 4 days; reheat the syrup and pour over cucumbers. Let the cucumbers cool in the syrup before covering.

When you're ready to process, remove stick cinnamon and bring the cucumbers and syrup to boiling. Pack into hot jars, leaving ½-inch headspace. Cover the cucumbers with boiling hot syrup, leaving ½-inch headspace. Adjust lids. Process in boiling water bath (pints) 5 minutes. Makes 13 pints.

Back to lunchbox season

Wash out lunch boxes regularly with a solution of baking soda and water to clean and deodorize them.

Clean and deodorize vacuum bottles from school lunch boxes and bags by shaking them with a baking soda solution containing above five teaspoons of soda for a pint bottle.

Know what you're getting when you buy ready-to-eat sandwich fillings for school lunch carriers. By law, ham and cheese spread must contain at least 25 per cent ham on a cooked basis. Bacon and tomato spread must contain at least 20 per cent cooked bacon.

Cooked, drained mixed vegetables in oil and vinegar dressing make a good portable salad for school lunches. Don't substitute mayonnaise or other dressings containing egg unless the salad will be packed in a vacuum bottle or carried in an insulated box or bag.

Two area homes sponsor resident bake-off

JUST OUT of the oven is Mary Horton's entry for the bake-off between a Palatine and Wheeling Home. All baking was done in the Homes.

A champagne toast was an added surprise for the winners of a bake-off held between Addolorata Villa Home for Aged Women, Wheeling and St. Joseph's Home for the Elderly, Palatine, Aug. 12.

The bake-off was only a part of a combination get-together between the two homes, held at Addolorata Villa, which included a social hour, luncheon, bake-off judging, dessert and champagne.

Eight ladies from Addolorata and four from St. Joseph's baked their entries in their own homes. Judging was done at Addolorata by Margaret Delaney, a dietician with Catholic Charities. Five winners were chosen with first prize going to Clara Clark of St. Joseph's for her chocolate torte.

"The whole idea was to get residents of the two homes together to socialize and have a good time," said

Ilene Schmitt, an activity staff member at Addolorata.

The bake-off, the first of its kind, was labeled a tremendous success. "All who attended thought it was a great idea and had lots of fun," Schmitt said.

New twist to German chocolate cake

Thoughts of old-fashioned German Chocolate Cake conjure up visions of a soft and luscious coconut-pecan filling sandwiched between mild chocolate cake layers.

A new twist on this old favorite is a Sweet Chocolate Sponge Roll. The flavor combination is the same, but the form is different.

While the same sweet cooking chocolate is used in the cake, method and ingredients give a sponge-type cake, easy to roll around the traditional filling of flaked coconut, chopped pecans, egg yolks, vanilla, sugar, butter, and evaporated milk.

SWEET CHOCOLATE SPONGE ROLL

- 1 package (4 oz.) sweet cooking chocolate
- ¼ cup water
- 2 tablespoons butter or margarine
- ¼ teaspoon baking soda
- ¾ cup sifted cake flour
- ¾ teaspoon double-acting baking powder
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 3 eggs (at room temperature)
- 1/3 cup granulated sugar
- Confectioners sugar
- Coconut-Pecan Filling

Combine chocolate, water, and butter in saucepan; stir over low heat until mixture is well blended and smooth. Remove from heat and stir in soda. Cool. (Do not allow chocolate mixture to become too thick or set.)

Sift flour with baking powder and salt. Beat eggs in large bowl at high speed of electric mixer or with rotary beater, adding granulated sugar gradually and beating until mixture becomes fluffy, thick, and light colored. Sift flour mixture over egg mixture and carefully fold in until blended. Then gradually fold in cooled chocolate mixture. Do not overmix. (Batter should be smooth and fluffy.) Pour into 15 by 10-inch jelly roll pan, which has been greased on bottom and sides, then lined on bottom with wax paper and greased again. Bake at 350 degrees for 18 to 20 minutes.

Turn cake out onto cloth, which has been sprinkled lightly with confectioners sugar. Quickly remove paper and trim off crisp edges of cake. Starting with short side, loosely roll up cake, rolling cloth up in cake. Place on rack with open edge down and cool about 1 hour. When cool, unroll, spread with filling, and roll up again, leaving end of cake underneath. Sprinkle with additional confectioners sugar. Makes 8 to 10 servings.

Nixon talks of Watergate

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Former President Richard Nixon, breaking his year-long silence on Watergate, said in a court document Wednesday that he — not Congress — would decide whether to make public his secret Watergate tapes.

In a 171-page deposition filed in U. S. District Court, Nixon also denied under oath that his remarks in a critical White House tape show that he ordered the Watergate coverup.

Nixon's sworn testimony was taken at San Clemente July 25 by a battery of lawyers involved in his suit to gain custody of White House tapes and documents. Several times Nixon refused to answer questions directly related to Watergate, taking the advice of his lawyers who said the matters were not relevant to the suit.

AS FOR PUBLIC disclosure of the tapes and documents, in government custody pending outcome of the suit, Nixon told the lawyers:

"I shall determine . . . not the Congress, what can appropriately be made public. The President should have a right to make a determination as to whether or not and how and when there should be a disclosure."

Nixon said he intended to make the material public, but only after a review "which can only be undertaken by me and members of my family."

"Do you expect it to be longer than five years?" one lawyer asked.

"I can't tell you until I see how big the task is," Nixon replied.

In his only comment bearing directly on his role in the Watergate scandal, Nixon said he never ordered the Watergate coverup in a March 23, 1973, meeting with John W. Dean III, his counsel.

At one point during that meeting,

Hearing refused on Wolf job loss

The Des Plaines Fire and Police Commission has determined it does not have the authority to hold a hearing on a request from David Wolf to determine why he was dropped from the city payroll last month.

Wolf Wednesday said the commission refused to hold the hearing. Wolf had served as deputy fire chief until mid-June, when he says he was relieved of duty pending the filing of disciplinary charges. However, Fire Chief Donald Corey said Wolf resigned from the department at that time.

Wolf Wednesday said he would take the city to court unless he could find another means to discuss the reason he was taken off the payroll.

HE SAID HE would meet with his attorney, Frank E. O'Reilly, today to determine a course of action since the commission refused a hearing.

A 23-year veteran of the fire department, Wolf said he did not resign from the department and added he wants to go back to work.

Wolf repeated Wednesday he did not send a letter of resignation to the city.

COREY HAS stated City Corporation Counsel Robert DiLeonardi has ruled a letter sent by Wolf to Corey is a letter of resignation and the city has accepted the resignation.

Although Corey and Wolf have had some personal disagreements, Corey has declined to elaborate on the matter. City hall sources have reported Corey was planning to file misconduct charges against Wolf at the time the controversial letter was written. Corey has refused to discuss the charges, and Wolf has indicated he does not know on what grounds Corey could charge him.

"Somehow, somewhere, this has to be resolved. No one has the right to stop a man's pay," Wolf said. As deputy fire chief, Wolf was paid about $22,000 per year.

Chamber asks market pricing ordinance delay

The chairman of the Des Plaines Chamber of Commerce's retail committee has asked the city to delay action on an ordinance which would require supermarkets to price all products, even if a computerized checkout system is used.

In a letter to Mayor Herbert H. Behr and the city council, Louis Capozzoli, requested the city to defer action on the ordinance so the chamber can "fully study the proposed ordinance."

After several discussions with residents and supermarket officials, the city council voted to require all products to be priced, even if the supermarket implements the computer pricing system.

The system involves the use of an electronic scanning device to read a standardized coded marking on each product. The coded system cannot be interpreted by shoppers.

Capozzoli told city officials the merchants want to determine if the dual pricing system might cost the merchants more and in the long run drive up prices.

"We want to be sure if this is adopted, that it will be beneficial to the citizens of Des Plaines, who are consumers and our customers, and not prove to be restrictive in nature," he said.

Final action on the ordinance is not scheduled until next month.

Robbers get $40, hit station worker

Two men, one armed with a pipe, robbed and struck a Des Plaines service station attendant late Wednesday, escaping with $40.

The attendant, William B. Panknin, 16, of 4822 N. Main St., Chicago, was released after treatment at Holy Family Hospital, Des Plaines for minor head injuries.

The robbers struck at the Clark Service Station, Rand and River roads, shortly after 10 p.m.

Reports were incomplete, but one robber was described as being about 6 feet tall, weighing 180 pounds, with brown hair and a large, red nose.

He was reported to have worn a white T-shirt with an automobile emblem on it. The other was said to be about 5 feet 7, 135 pounds, with brown hair, and he was wearing a jacket, blue jeans and black and white shoes.

City to share cost of Howard Street restoration

Des Plaines officials have agreed to share the cost of restoring property along the 1600 block of Howard Street, which residents charged was not replaced properly following storm sewer work last year.

The city council this week agreed to pay 50 per cent of the cost of restoring parkways, trees, curbs, sidewalks and driveways, but will continue to withhold the final $3,000 payment to the George Kennedy Construction Co., Antioch, to pay for the remainder of the work. City crews will do most of the work.

The city council last month refused to make the final payment to the firm for the $189,000 storm sewer installation project after residents on the south side of Howard Street complained the property had not been restored to its original condition.

THE COUNCIL agreed to share the cost after reviewing slides of the area taken before and after the storm sewer work was done. Several officials said they felt an impasse had been reached between the contractor and the city and sharing the cost was the only way to resolve the matter.

Kennedy told the city council he thinks the residents are "unreasonable" and it is unfair for the city to withhold final payment. He said there were some "small defects," adding he believes the area is in better condition now than before the work started.

"I'm not running away from my obligations," Kennedy said. "I feel I have done everything in my power."

Ald. Carmen Sarlo, 6th, who brought the problem to the attention of the city council, said, however, he believes the property along the street was left in "shoddy condition."

"I FEEL THERE is work to be done," he said. "If it was me, I'd be more vehement than these people."

Sarlo read several letters of protest from residents of the street. Most of the complaints pertained to driveways, sidewalks and lawns that had settled.

Kennedy said the work contract did not call for compacting the soil and settlement could not be avoided.

Several city officials said the city should share the cost because the city engineering department accepted the contractor's work. City Engineer Robert Bowen said he feels many of the residents' complaints are not justified.

In a letter to the city several weeks ago, Kennedy said his firm had no intention of doing further work and said if the city did not release the final payment, the matter would be turned over to the firm's attorney for collection.

$50 office machine stolen from school

Burglars stole a $50 adding machine from Westbrook School, 103 S. Busse Rd., Mount Prospect police said Wednesday.

Police said they believe "brute force" was used to open the school's north door. Nothing else was reported stolen.

Best form of government? None, Deer Park decides

Town seeks vote of dissolution after 18 years

by JOE SWICKARD

"Governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed, that whenever any form of government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the right of the people to alter or abolish it . . ."

So said Thomas Jefferson and so say some residents of Deer Park as they petition to abolish their tiny village almost 200 years after the nation's founding principle was spelled out.

Deer Park hardly seems a town with insurmountable problems. Its borders are marked with signs set in bean fields and its residents live in two subdivisions or on scattered farm sites.

There is no business district, nor even a village for the town, incorporated in 1957. There are just the nice homes set in rolling, wooded fields.

THE SIGNS SAY there are 500 people in Deer Park, but the 1970 census said there are 832 residents of the community north of the Lake-Cook county line.

Under state law, the village can be disbanded through a referendum if 51 per cent of persons voting in the last election so petition. In Deer Park, that means only 53 valid signatures are required to force a vote on dissolution and residents of the community are gathering the names.

What's so wrong in Deer Park that the residents would want to disband the 18-year-old corporation?

"Nothing really. There aren't many problems here. It's just the way the decisions are being made," said Roberta Schmitt, one of those petitioning to end the village.

"The signers want to be heard. It's a matter of communication," said trustee Alice Grogan.

After 18 years, "The village has served its purpose," said Carl Johnson, one of the original trustees in 1957 and self-described "anchor man of the village."

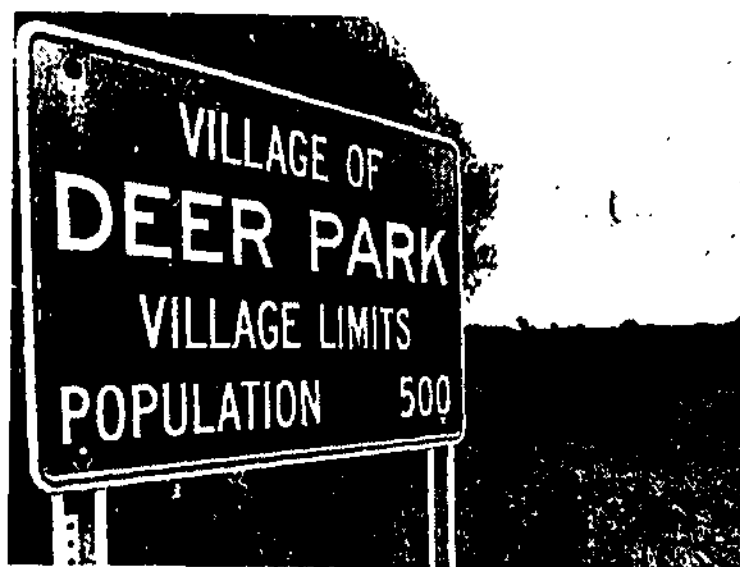

THE ISSUES are not complex. The village board, under the leadership of President Charles Brown, recently

Salt Creek flood project brings beauty to area

by JERRY THOMAS

The muted rumble of the massive dirt mover as it cuts lake basins in the Busse Woods Forest Preserve is sweet music to Jim Takahashi's ears.

Takahashi, construction engineer with the Illinois Division of Water Resources, heads the Busse Woods Reservoir site excavation project, part of the Salt Creek Watershed flood control plan.

"I don't really see the machinery or churning up landscape; in my mind's eye it is transformed into the serene, lake-dotted landscape that will soon be here," said Takahashi.

He has supervised the excavation project since the first dirt was dug out of the main pool in late 1973.

TAKAHASHI AND resident engineer William Doeringsfeld gauge the weather by the amount of cubic yards of dirt it will allow them to move that day. They both hate rain.

The massive dirt moving project involves excavating more than one million cubic feet of dirt. This is just part of the damming and improvements that eventually will create a 539-acre lake and connecting waterways and smaller basins.

The Division of Water Resources is responsible for the reservoir work it expects to tame Salt Creek, and alleviate flooding in the area.

The Busse Woods project is in its final phase of construction, with more than two thirds of the excavation completed and only minor shaping still to come.

Although Takahashi's job is to create a system of waterways and a reservoir to curb flooding, he also has an opportunity to create a natural recreation area by working closely with the Cook County Forest Preserve District.

THE FOREST PRESERVE owns the land and is planning to develop it as a recreation area to attract an estimated 3-million people each year.

Although the watershed project covers about 32,000 acres, the Busse Woods area is approximately 3,600 acres.

City to finish Kingsbury streets

Des Plaines officials have decided to finish the streets in the Kingsbury subdivision and to seek reimbursement from the builder.

Several aldermen this week said the completion of Kenilworth Court and Warrington Road are long overdue and action needs to be taken. Several officials indicated they will seek legal action against Poess Builders, the developer, unless the city is reimbursed for the work.

More than 100 residents have petitioned the city for assistance in getting the streets completed.

In addition to the street improvements, there are building code violations in 10 to 12 houses in the subdivision, city officials said.

BUILDING COMM. William Baldacini has refused for more than a year to issue a building permit for the final house in the development in an attempt to force the builder to complete the streets and correct the code violations.

Ald. Charles Bolek, 3rd, said this week, however, Baldacini's action apparently is not sufficient to force the contractor to do the work and suggested the city act.

"We've been spinning our wheels, and I think we should take some positive action," he said.

City officials said the city has had problems getting the work done, because Alliance Federal Savings and Loan Assn. of Chicago allowed the de-

Neighbors feel it's worthwhile

Although rumbling trucks, summer dust and heavy traffic give them problems, Elk Grove Village residents in the vicinity of the Busse Woods recreation area under construction still feel the project eventually will be worth the inconveniences.

"More likely as not it will be worth the inconveniences."

"More likely as not it will be a positive thing for the whole village," said Lowell Bergstedt, 695 Ruskin Dr. "It will be an advantage to be nearby. We're kind of looking forward to it."

Bergstedt said he does not ski and probably would not use most of the winter facilities, but he "knew a lot of people who do."

One possible disadvantage of having the recreation center as close as it will be, Bergstedt said, was the problem of more traffic in the Cosman Lake area.

"As long as the project doesn't affect adversely the traffic through the area, it will be fine," he said. "This is an unusual area, and a large amount of people already drive through to look at the homes."

WILLIAM ANDERSON, 630 Ruskin Dr., said he was in favor of the project. He said he had no complaints, even though his home borders the project.

Anderson said the one thing he was concerned about was the building of a separate access road to the recreation site. He said construction of the road was of "critical importance" to his acceptance of the project.

Because the project will not be finished for several years, Anderson said the full impact of it would be felt gradually by its neighbors. He said this was an advantage, allowing residents to "grow with it."

"The area is going to be different because nothing like this exists around here at all," Anderson said. "But it offers my children another opportunity to fill in their backgrounds rather than go elsewhere in the state or even Wisconsin for comparable facilities."

TED KOBAL, 640 Ruskin Dr., said

he thought the idea of the recreation center was "terrific," not only for himself and his neighbors, but for the community as well.

"If they keep the lake stocked (with fish) and keep out the motorboats, it will be great," Kobal said of the planned lake. "The area needs some place where you can take your son and daughter fishing on a casual basis."

Kobal said his concern was in keeping the area patrolled so the new section would not face the drug and loitering problems encountered in other sections of the preserve. He said he also favored construction of an access road for police and fire vehicles only, so there could be effective evacuation in case of an emergency.

Ken Dippold, 635 Ruskin Dr., said he and his neighbors have had problems with dust from the site, although the workers have been "watering it down pretty well." He said he did not foresee any major problems at this time, but hoped the watershed project would do other people some good.

"How far and how good it is once it is finished we will have to see," he said. "But if it helps all those people down Salt Creek from having problems, it will be worth it."

Volunteers sought for YMCA activities

The Northwest Suburban YMCA needs volunteer workers to help in a variety of jobs at the Y's facility at 300 E. Northwest Hwy., Des Plaines.

The organization is looking for people to help on committees and with bulk mailings and to work in the snack bar, locker room, nursery and in various classes.

Persons interested in learning more about volunteer activities with the Y can call 296-3376 for information.

Teachers may not honor pact

by JUDY JOBBITT

East Maine Dist. 63 Board of Education has agreed to let teachers return to work this fall under the terms of last year's contract until the 1975-76 contract is completed, but teachers in the district may not accept this arrangement.

In approving the extension of last year's contract Tuesday, the board added a no-strike clause and deleted sections requiring mediation in case of a negotiations impasse and binding arbitration for grievance procedures.

The board or the East Maine Education Assn., which represents teachers, could cancel the agreement by giving five days notice. The agreement would expire when this year's contract is completed or on Sept. 30, whichever comes first.

"WE TOLD THEM we could not go along with this," said Barbara Korb, LMEA president. "I doubt our decision will change. We feel without mediation, negotiations could go on forever."

She said teachers also are upset because the extension removed some grievance procedures. The board retained the steps that deal with the board's review of a grievance case but removed the procedure requiring binding arbitration if an agreement could not be reached.

She said the teachers' union will decide whether it will accept the terms of the extension at a special meeting of the negotiations team. The union had requested the extension, she said, but it wanted the extension to include all sections from last year's contract.

Old city hall 'worth $83,500'

The third major segment of the Des Plaines Historical Society's campaign to retain the old city hall as a museum indicates the structure has a market value of about $83,500.

The appraisal was prepared by Murillo/Meyer and Associates of Elk Grove Village for the Historical Society. The appraisers also estimated replacement cost at $374,000 and $398,000.

The society retained a museum consultant and an attorney to study the structure and prepare a proposal to turn the building over to the society.

Although the society and the Des Plaines Bicentennial Commission have asked the building be used as a museum and community center, some city officials believe the structure should be razed to make room for additional parking for the new Civic Center and police department complex, which is adjacent to the old city hall building.

SOME ALDERMEN have noted renovation would cost between $100,000 and $300,000 to meet city codes.

Richard Welch, the society's museum director, said the appraisal has been sent to the city council for further study. Aldermen have delayed final action on the building's fate. Plans recently were approved for the city to go ahead with construction of a multiple-level parking garage to serve the Civic Center.

The appraisers reported the best use for the property would be as a site for an office building. They arrived at the $83,500 market value of the property after deducting depreciation costs from the estimated replacement cost of the structure.

The society currently is located in a home at 777 Lee St., which is owned by the First Federal Savings and Loan Assn. of Des Plaines. The institution has indicated it plans to use that property for expansion in the next several years.

New Douglas golf course ready in fall

The County Forest Preserve's newest golf course in the Paul Douglas Forest Preserve may be ready for partial play by late fall.

The 200-acre, championship course under construction in the preserve at Roselle and Central Roads, Hoffman Estates, had been expected to open this summer, but poor weather during the past two years of construction has delayed completion.

Frank Stein, forest preserve district supervisor of special activities, Tuesday said 9 holes of the 18-hole course may be ready by late fall. "We would have been ready this summer, but the rain really set us back," he said.

Although golf play will not begin for several months, Stein said the course's driving range has been opened. The range's 40 tees can be used from 9 a.m. to 10 p.m. daily for a cost of $1.25 for a bucket of balls.

THE $2 MILLION public course will be the eighth run by the forest preserve district and the first serving the northwestern county limits. The district's other golf facilities include six, 18-hole courses and two, 9-hole courses.

The Paul Douglas course will be open to the public on a first come, first serve basis, Stein said. No golfing times will be reserved to ensure the course's availability to any who wish to play, he said.

"We don't want to have tournaments because we want it for the public," he said. But Stein added a golf league or charity tournaments on weekdays may be allowed once operation of the course gets underway.

Construction on the course began in 1973.

The course will provide three tee positions, regulation, women's and championship tees. A pro shop and restaurant in addition to the driving range will make up the course complex.

Stein said the course's restaurant facility may open for limited business within a week. The pro shop has yet to be completed.

FEES FOR GOLFING will be $5 for 18 holes. Stein said, but senior citizens and youths from 12 to 17 may play for $2.50 if they apply for special passes from the forest preserve district.

The course is bounded by Central, Elia, Algonquin and Roselle roads in the 1,700-acre Paul Douglas preserve.

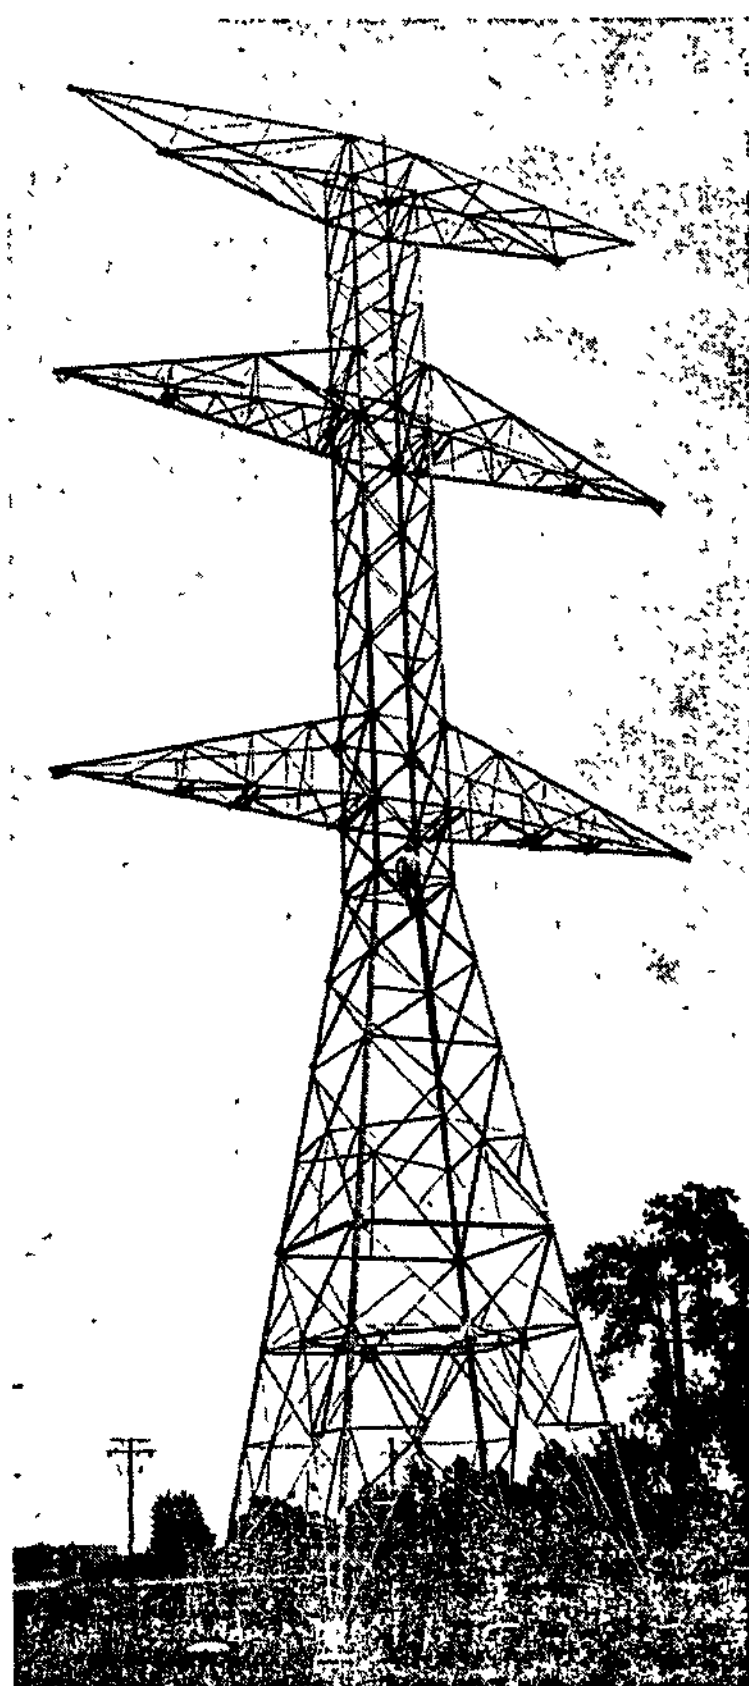

Forest preserve district plans also call for the formation of a 228-acre recreational lake in the Paul Douglas preserve, but work on the lake is not expected for several years.

voted to pave some interior roads, contract for police service with Barrington and started a study for sewers.

The decisions split the town into two camps: the older areas versus the two newer subdivisions. Although the first petition fell three names short of forcing a referendum to dissolve the village on their first attempt, they vow to petition until they get the 51 per cent from the last election that is needed to call for the question.

Mrs. Schmitt, a 20-year resident of the area, said the actions of the board are high-handed.

She and other petitioners would rather that it not come to a vote, but they think they have no other way to get the board's ear, Mrs. Schmitt said.

The "improvements" voted by the board are unwanted and unnecessary, she said. Unimproved roads discourage drag racers; the Lake County Sheriff provides adequate protection and improved sewers would just encourage more development of the rural area, she said.

Johnson, the original board member, said the village "served its purpose" and is no longer needed. He said Deer Park was incorporated to block a developer's plans for incorporating on his own with higher density.

HIS NEEDS ARE met by county services for police, road repair and snow plowing, said Johnson. He said he is sorry that others do not get that service. "But there's nothing I can do about it."

Trustee Grogan said some could have gotten the impression that the board is arrogant from the board's effort to strike a balance between an efficient meeting and one that gives everyone a chance to be heard.

"It's difficult to run an efficient meeting. People feel they aren't getting a chance to be heard. We can't turn the meeting over to the public and they feel put down," Mrs. Grogan said.

Part of the problem, Mrs. Grogan said, is that the people are not talking with trustees outside the formal board setting.

"The trustees will try to do anything the people want — if they just let us know," she said.

EVEN THOUGH almost half the people voting in the last election want to abolish the village, Mrs. Grogan said "I feel this is a good thing. It's important to know what the people are thinking. We never like to see extremes, but we'll see what we can do."

Village Pres. Brown is not so sure the petition is such a good idea. "It bothers me no end. This has been a labor of love. It hurts — really hurts," Brown said.

Like Mrs. Grogan, Brown said part of the problem is that unhappy residents haven't conveyed their wishes to the board in the past. Brown said the petitioners have assumed a "begrudging attitude," when village funds were spent on services for others.

"There is a definite communication problem here. Unfortunately, they don't tell me what they're unhappy about. And of that, I accuse them very harshly," he said.

Brown said citizen apathy is almost staggering at times. When the petition was first put forward, he said there were only four citizens at the meeting.

"I asked them what was wrong and they didn't say boo," he said. "What am I supposed to do if they won't tell me what's wrong?"

HE SAID HE IS convinced the referendum, should it be held, will be defeated by a 3 to 1 margin. But he is still upset, and sounds wounded, by its proposal.

"I would expect some input about their problems, but this hasn't been the case at all," he said.

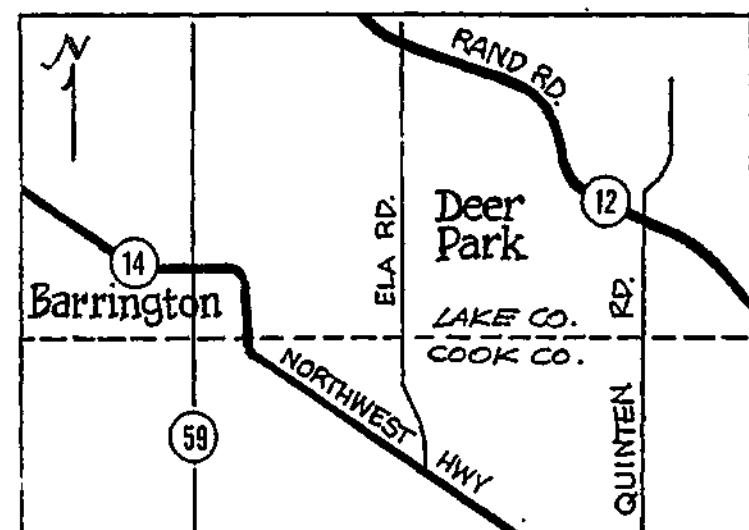

Brown said if the referendum is successful, residents would find it hard to reincorporate as protection from large developers or losing area to neighboring towns.

"Their problems are mine, too. I have no personal ax to grind in this. But if the timbers start breaking away, the village will sink," he said.

For good or ill, the revolutionary idea of the citizens' absolute power over their government still is struggling in Deer Park.

Deer Park is marked by large homes set on large, rolling wooded lots.

Nixon talks of Watergate

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Former President Richard Nixon, breaking his year-long silence on Watergate, said in a court document Wednesday that he — not Congress — would decide whether to make public his secret Watergate tapes.

In a 171-page deposition filed in U. S. District Court, Nixon also denied under oath that his remarks in a critical White House tape show that he ordered the Watergate coverup.

Nixon's sworn testimony was taken at San Clemente July 25 by a battery of lawyers involved in his suit to gain custody of White House tapes and documents. Several times Nixon refused to answer questions directly related to Watergate, taking the advice of his lawyers who said the matters were not relevant to the suit.

AS FOR PUBLIC disclosure of the tapes and documents, in government custody pending outcome of the suit, Nixon told the lawyers:

"I shall determine . . . not the Congress, what can appropriately be made public. The President should have a right to make a determination as to whether or not and how and when there should be a disclosure."

Nixon said he intended to make the material public, but only after a review "which can only be undertaken by me and members of my family."

"Do you expect it to be longer than five years?" one lawyer asked.

"I can't tell you until I see how big the task is," Nixon replied.

In his only comment bearing directly on his role in the Watergate scandal, Nixon said he never ordered the Watergate coverup in a March 23, 1973, meeting with John W. Dean III, his counsel.

At one point during that meeting,

Law firm studying matter

Village may face car crusher suit

Wheeling may be faced with another lawsuit as a result of the village board's refusal this week to grant building permits for a proposed automobile crushing plant.

Burt Diamond, president of Diamond Scrap Yards Inc., Waukegan, said Wednesday his attorneys are reviewing the matter to determine if legal action to overturn the board's ruling is in order.

Diamond said he did not want to comment on the matter, but added he has retained the Chicago law firm of Jenner and Block, Irving H. Goldberg, the attorney assigned to the case said Wednesday he has not reviewed the matter yet.

"I haven't seen anything yet, and there's a lot of work to be done before any decision is made," Goldberg said. He added he has not yet met with Diamond and must review board proceedings before he can determine if a lawsuit should be filed.

THE PROPOSAL was turned down by the board Monday in a unanimous decision, ending months of controversy which began last November when plans for the car crusher were first presented to the village.

The crusher was proposed for a 2.3-acre site at Wheeling Road and W. Pine Street, which was zoned for heavy industry. Diamond had a contract to purchase the site from a Wheeling Trust and Savings Bank trust benefitting former zoning board member Roman Domus and his brother Lambert.

Group seeks books for Sept. 21 sale

Books are being sought as donations for the Prospect Heights Improvement Ass'n's book sale Sept. 21 during the Oktoberfest.

Nancy Olds said persons can either bring the books to her house, 910 W. Wildwood Ave., Prospect Heights, or call her for information or pickup at 537-8014. She said books of all types are needed.

"The book sale was one of the most successful Oktoberfest events last year," Mrs. Olds said.

The Oktoberfest will be on the St. Alphonsus Church and School grounds 411 N. Wheeling Rd., this year.

The sale was contingent on the board's approval of building permits for the project.

Residents bordering the area to the west voiced strong objections to the proposal, because they said the crusher would create an excessive amount of noise and ground vibrations in the area. More than 740 of the residents signed a petition opposing the plans and presented it to the board.

The village's environmental advisory commission approved the plans in a 3 to 2 vote, with the two dissenting members and the commission chairman issuing a report to the board urging rejection of the plans.

THE REPORT, signed by commissioners James Green, Robert Kingsbury and William Rogers, said noise readings taken at the Waukegan plant indicated potential problems for the abutting residential area.

They said ground vibrations were above the perceptible level, diesel fumes would be perceptible in the residential area and truck traffic along Pine Street could damage the road.

The board followed up on the commission's action by voting to eliminate auto dismantling operations as allowable uses in the heavy industry category.

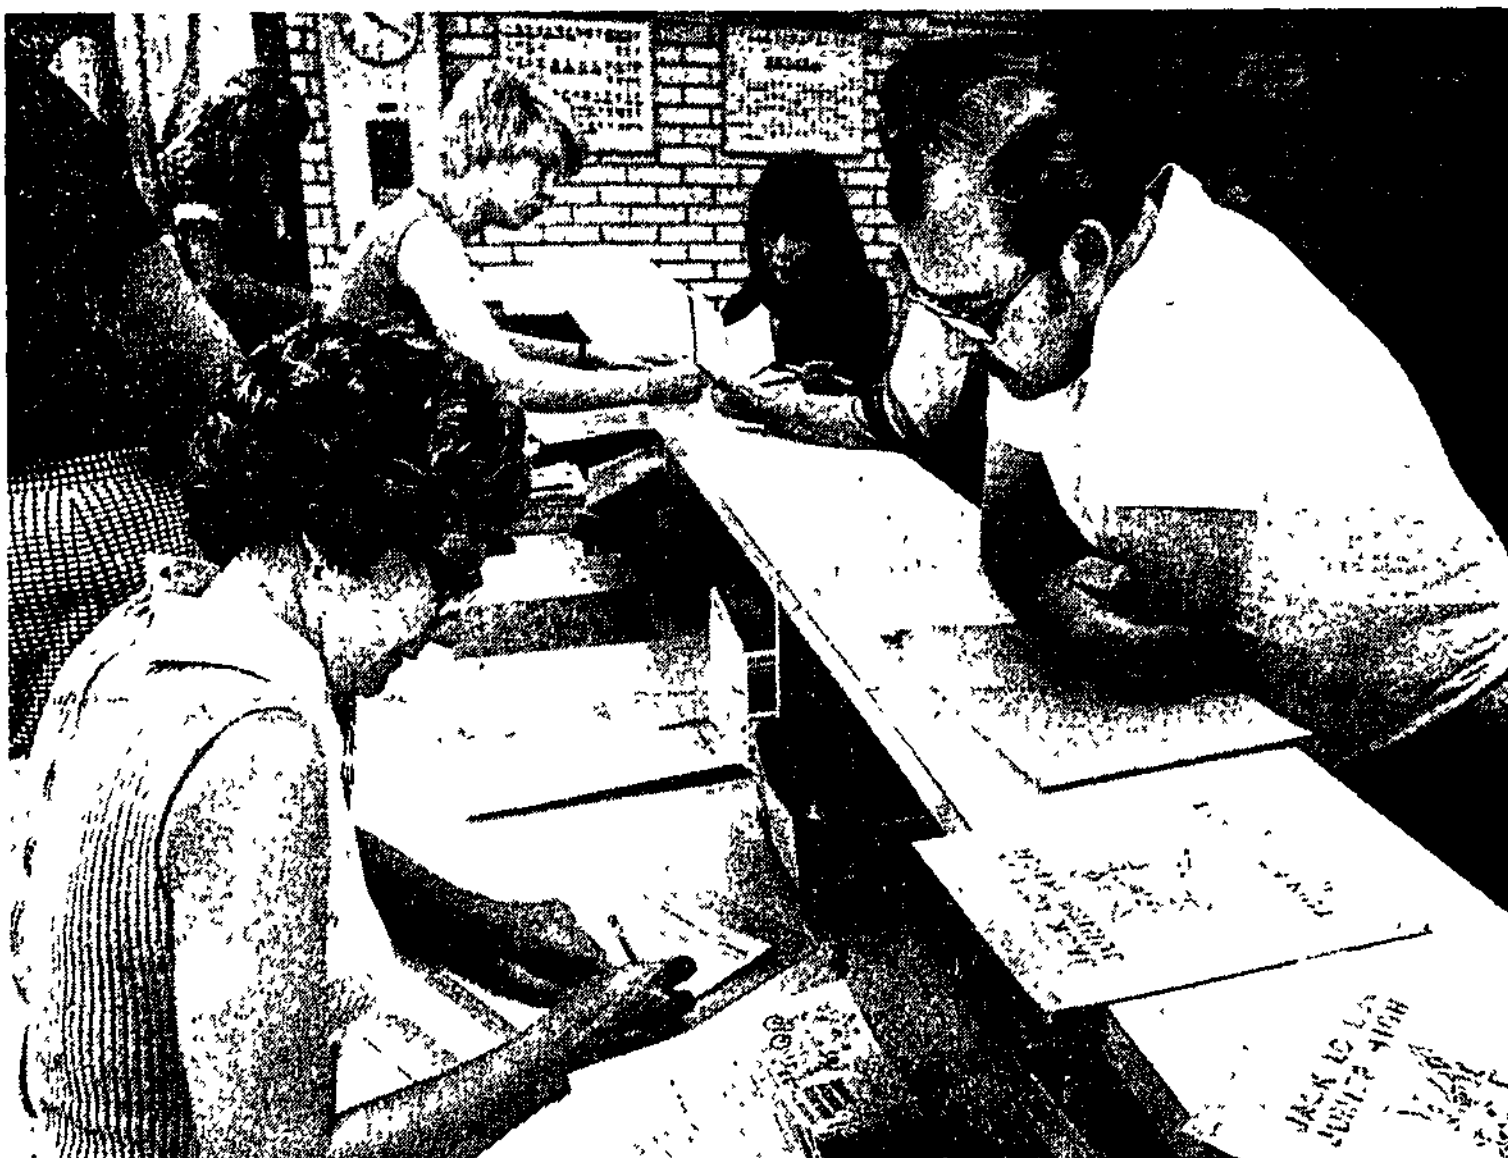

Elimination of the use from the category left the fate of the crusher doubtful. Village Atty. John Burke, in an opinion to the board, said the village was not obligated to grant Diamond a special use permit, because the company had not completed purchase of the property and had not spent an excessive amount of money based on a reliance of the former zoning.

The board based its decision this week to reject the project on Burke's opinion. Diamond officials, however, contend the zoning change should not have affected their project, because the crusher plans were presented before the zoning change was proposed.

Diamond said Wednesday that the board's action did not surprise him, because he felt "one or two of the board members made it a personal thing against me."

He said that based on recent meetings with the board, the final outcome was a "foregone conclusion."

Goldberg indicated it will be several weeks before a decision is made on whether to file suit against the village.

SCHOOL SIGNUP time is here again in Wheeling-Buffalo Grove Dist. 21. London and Cooper junior high schools already have begun registering pupils, but all district elementary schools and Holmes Junior High School will register pupils today and Friday.

Strong Street building to start

Construction of six-unit apartments along W. Strong Street will begin within a week, developer Victor Smigel said Wednesday.

The developer, who won approval to build as a result of a court consent decree ending a legal battle between Smigel and the Village of Wheeling, said the first units should be ready for occupancy Nov. 1.

Smigel said construction will begin as soon as the building department completes its review of blue prints for the project and approves the issuance of building permits.

THE CONSENT DECREE calls for one-and two-bedroom apartments to be built on 38 lots on W. Strong Street. Three-bedroom townhouses will be built on four lots and single-family houses will be built on two lots.

The decree also calls for storm water retention to be provided on two or three lots.

Smigel said he has not purchased any additional lots and has not decided if he will. The decree gives Smigel until Sept. 30 to purchase additional lots, which are available in the area. It is believed as many as 50 additional lots may be available for purchase.

The consent decree, negotiated between attorneys for Smigel and Village Atty. John Burke, brought an end to lawsuits filed by both the developer and the village. Smigel's suit sought court permission to build apartments on all 47 lots plus $500,000 in damages.

THE VILLAGE'S countersuit sought an injunction against Smigel to prohibit further construction on the lots in light of the village's action declaring the multi-family zoning on the property expired.

The board agreed to the consent decree upon the advice of Burke, who felt the court would uphold Smigel's right to build apartments on all the lots. If the matter was settled in court, the village's ordinance requiring developers to build within two years of receiving zoning approval might be challenged, Burke said.

Residents in the area, who fought their own legal battle with Smigel to stop construction plans, were disappointed bitterly by the board's action and have indicated they might try to pursue the matter. The residents said no decision on what can be done has been made.

Smigel said he hopes to have the entire building project completed within two years.

Best form of government? None, Deer Park decides

Town seeks vote of dissolution after 18 years

by JOE SWICKARD

"Governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed, that whenever any form of government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the right of the people to alter or abolish it."

So said Thomas Jefferson and so say some residents of Deer Park as they petition to abolish their tiny village almost 200 years after the nation's founding principle was spelled out.

Deer Park hardly seems a town with insurmountable problems. Its borders are marked with signs set in bean fields and its residents live in two subdivisions or on scattered farm sites.

There is no business district, nor even a village for the town, incorporated in 1957. There are just the nice homes set in rolling, wooded fields.

THE SIGNS SAY there are 500 people in Deer Park, but the 1970 census said there are 832 residents of the community north of the Lake-Cook county line.

Under state law, the village can be disbanded through a referendum if 51 per cent of persons voting in the last election so petition. In Deer Park, that means only 53 valid signatures are required to force a vote on dissolution and residents of the community are gathering the names.

What's so wrong in Deer Park that the residents would want to disband the 18-year-old corporation?

"Nothing really. There aren't many problems here. It's just the way the decisions are being made," said Roberta Schmitt, one of those petitioning to end the village.

"The signers want to be heard. It's a matter of communication," said trustee Alice Grogan.

After 18 years, "The village has served its purpose," said Carl Johnson, one of the original trustees in 1957 and self-described "anchor man of the village."

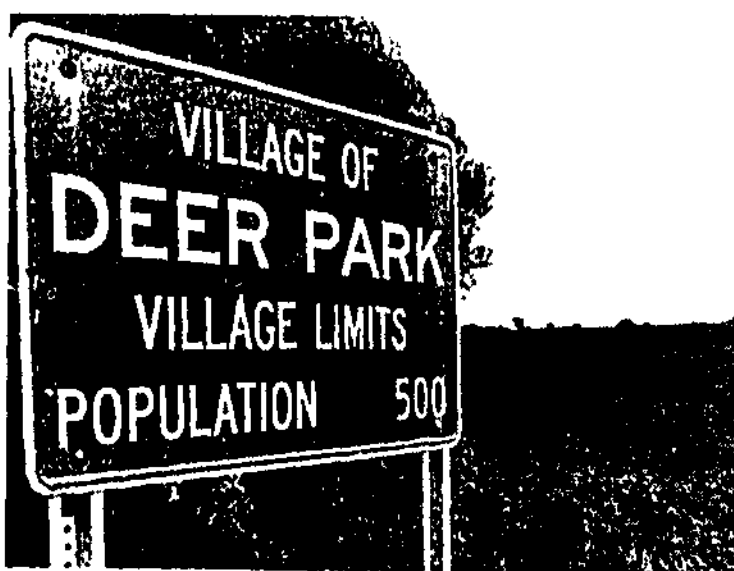

THE ISSUES are not complex. The village board, under the leadership of President Charles Brown, recently

Salt Creek flood project brings beauty to area

by JERRY THOMAS

The muted rumble of the massive dirt mover as it cuts lake basins in the Busse Woods Forest Preserve is sweet music to Jim Takahashi's ears.

Takahashi, construction engineer with the Illinois Division of Water Resources, heads the Busse Woods Reservoir site excavation project, part of the Salt Creek Watershed flood control plan.

"I don't really see the machinery or chewed up landscape; in my mind's eye it is transformed into the serene, lake-dotted landscape that will soon be here," said Takahashi.

He has supervised the excavation project since the first dirt was dug out of the main pool in late 1973.

TAKAHASHI AND resident engineer William Doeringsfeld gauge the weather by the amount of cubic yards of dirt it will allow them to move that day. They both hate rain.

The massive dirt moving project involves excavating more than one million cubic feet of dirt. This is just part of the damming and improvements that eventually will create a 589-acre lake and connecting waterways and smaller basins.

The Division of Water Resources is responsible for the reservoir work it expects to tame Salt Creek, and alleviate flooding in the area.

The Busse Woods project is in its final phase of construction, with more than two thirds of the excavation completed and only minor shaping still to come.

Although Takahashi's job is to create a system of waterways and a reservoir to curb flooding, he also has an opportunity to create a natural recreation area by working closely with the Cook County Forest Preserve District.

THE FOREST PRESERVE owns the land and is planning to develop it as a recreation area to attract an estimated 3-million people each year.

Although the watershed project covers about 32,000 acres, the Busse Woods area is approximately 3,600 acres.

Takahashi said that with luck and dry weather, the remaining 850,000 cubic yards of dirt to be excavated will be moved by December.

Two of the three dams are built, and the main dam at the southeast border of the project near Arlington Heights and Cosman roads in Elk Grove Township should be constructed by late 1978.

Although some surface water has partially filled the main lake and pools, flooding will not be complete until the main dam is constructed.

APPROXIMATELY $9 million went into the site excavation flood control portion of the project. The total project is expected to cost $33 million.

State studies show Salt Creek caused an estimated $10 million in flood damage on suburban communities, including Elk Grove Village, Schaumburg, Rolling Meadows and Palatine, during 1972.

"The years of temporary mess that includes dust and construction noise is worth the final benefit — the end of flooding for people who live along the Salt Creek Basin," said Takahashi.

A tour of the construction area gives a hint of its recreation potential.

Although the Busse Woods area is surrounded by Schaumburg, Elk Grove Village and Palatine, the land has been contoured so its users can enjoy open vistas of water dotted landscape, without a background of houses or roads. A ski hill and hiking and nature trails also are planned.

FOREST PRESERVE Forester John Froehlich, who has also been concerned with the project since its beginning, works closely with the Division of Waterways engineers and acts as liaison between the district and the department.

Froehlich is impatient. He said the area already is a haven for waterfowl and small animals, despite the heavy construction.

"Before long, perhaps as soon as next year, I expect to see families enjoying the paths and fishermen along the shoreline," he said.

Neighbors feel it's worthwhile

Although rumbling trucks, summer dust and heavy traffic give them problems, Elk Grove Village residents in the vicinity of the Busse Woods recreation area under construction still feel the project eventually will be worth the inconveniences.

"More likely as not it will be worth the inconveniences."

"More likely as not it will be a positive thing for the whole village," said Lowell Bergstedt, 695 Ruskin Dr. "It will be an advantage to be nearby. We're kind of looking forward to it."

Bergstedt said he does not ski and probably would not use most of the winter facilities, but he "knew a lot of people who do."

One possible disadvantage of having the recreation center as close as it will be, Bergstedt said, was the problem of more traffic in the Cosman Lake area.

"As long as the project doesn't affect adversely the traffic through the area, it will be fine," he said. "This is an unusual area, and a large amount of people already drive through to look at the homes."

WILLIAM ANDERSON, 630 Ruskin Dr., said he was in favor of the project. He said he had no complaints, even though his home borders the project.

Anderson said the one thing he was concerned about was the building of a separate access road to the recreation site. He said construction of the road was of "critical importance" to his acceptance of the project.

Because the project will not be finished for several years, Anderson said the full impact of it would be felt gradually by its neighbors. He said this was an advantage, allowing residents to "grow with it."

"The area is going to be different because nothing like this exists around here at all," Anderson said. "But it offers my children another opportunity to fill in their backgrounds rather than go elsewhere in the state or even Wisconsin for comparable facilities."

he thought the idea of the recreation center was "terrific," not only for himself and his neighbors, but for the community as well.

"If they keep the lake stocked (with fish) and keep out the motorboats, it will be great," Kobal said of the planned lake. "The area needs some place where you can take your son and daughter fishing on a casual basis."

Kobal said his concern was in keeping the area patrolled so the new section would not face the drug and loitering problems encountered in other sections of the preserve. He said he also favored construction of an access road for police and fire vehicles only, so there could be effective evacuation in case of an emergency.

Ken Dippold, 635 Ruskin Dr., said he and his neighbors have had problems with dust from the site, although the workers have been "watering it down pretty well." He said he did not foresee any major problems at this time, but hoped the watershed project would do other people some good.

"How far and how good it is once it is finished we will have to see," he said. "But if it helps all those people down Salt Creek from having problems, it will be worth it."

Swan Lake names Dist. 21 in suit for building OK

The developers of the Swan Lake apartments have named Wheeling-Elk Grove Dist. 21 in a suit also filed against the Village of Wheeling last week.

Swan Lake's developers are asking the court to overturn the village board's rejection of the proposed 540-unit apartment complex and require the village to issue building permits. Located on 40 acres east of Wheeling Road and south of Palatine Road in Dist. 21, the complex was to have included more than 20 acres for park and school use.

Dist. 21 was named in the suit because the developers said the schools have relinquished an 8-acre school site and instead have agreed to take $20 per unit for future school site purchase.

"They're saying we agreed to waive our site designation and take money. To our knowledge, we didn't," said Dist. 21 Supt. Kenneth Gill.

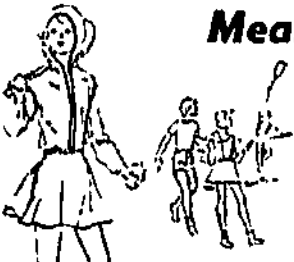

Gill said Dist. 21 officials do not wish to block the Swan Lake development but are concerned about the possible need for a school there in the future.

"If Stevenson School is filled in years to come, we'd need a new school in that area," Gill said. Several other vacant properties lie between Stevenson School, 1375 S. Wolf Rd., and the Swan Lake site, which could be developed residentially in years to come, Gill said.

Dist. 21 officials will meet with attorneys for Swan Lake developer Ralph Stoetzel sometime next week, Gill said.

2,000 sign petitions on home rule

More than 2,000 Arlington Heights residents have signed petitions calling for a vote on home-rule powers, but they (the petitions) will not be used unless the village board decides to finance the proposed Chicago Bears Stadium without a referendum.

Mrs. Mickey Hartley, 104 E. Hawthorne St., an organizer of the petition drive, said Wednesday her group has collected 77 petition sheets and "I'm sure there will be many more coming in."

Mrs. Hartley said the village board's decision to hold a referendum on the stadium has had little effect on the number of people signing the petitions.

"I DIDN'T HAVE any problem at all getting signatures. I had people sign it who were for the stadium as well as people who were against it. They all agreed there should be a referendum," she said.

The petition drive was organized by Katherine Muller, 418 S. Lincoln Ln., and is being coordinated by Joan Hammerstone. Mrs. Hammerstone said the petitions would not be used unless the board gives approval of the stadium without voter approval.

Mrs. Hartley said her group was surprised that Village Pres. James Ryan called for a referendum on the stadium because his "first reaction was not at all favorable."

"I'm glad he decided to go along with the suggestions to hold the referendum. We just hope it will be worded in a way that the residents definitely have a choice," she said.

MRS. HARTLEY said her group would file the petitions if the referendum does not give residents a "definite yes or no vote" on the stadium question.

The petitioners needed to collect signatures totalling 10 per cent of the number of voters participating in the last election, or about 1,200, before a repeal vote could be called.

Ryan called for a binding referendum on village financing of the stadium at a press conference last week. He said a vote could be scheduled in October or early November after final facts and figures on the stadium project are available to village officials and the public.

The village board voted Monday night to guarantee a public referendum on the football stadium proposal if trustees should ever determine the project is financially feasible or desirable.

HERMAN THE HERMIT Clown entertained youngsters last night at Cooper Junior High School with magic tricks, puppets and musical instruments. The benefit show resulted in $454 to be donated to Bobby's fund.

A children's neighborhood carnival at 1062 Harvard Ln. raised $20 for Bobby. Youngsters who conducted the benefit are Kim Moffett, Lance Evans, Laurie Moffett, Kim Olson, Tracy Mattingly, Jeff Mattingly and Don Moffett.

A car wash and flea market sale Aug. 9 by the Buffalo Grove Police Cadets netted $378.78 for Bobby. The congregation of Kingswood United Methodist Church, 401 W. Dundee Rd., recently raised approximately $150 in a mass collection.

The first fund-raiser was conducted at Baskin-Robbins 31 Flavors in the Buffalo Grove Mall. That event resulted in more than $185.

Nixon talks of Watergate

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Former President Richard Nixon, breaking his year-long silence on Watergate, said in a court document Wednesday that he — not Congress — would decide whether to make public his secret Watergate tapes.

In a 171-page deposition filed in U.S. District Court, Nixon also denied under oath that his remarks in a critical White House tape show that he ordered the Watergate coverup.

Nixon's sworn testimony was taken at San Clemente July 23 by a battery of lawyers involved in his suit to gain custody of White House tapes and documents. Several times Nixon refused to answer questions directly related to Watergate, taking the advice of his lawyers who said the matters were not relevant to the suit.

AS FOR PUBLIC disclosure of the tapes and documents, in government custody pending outcome of the suit, Nixon told the lawyers:

"I shall determine . . . not the Congress, what can appropriately be made public. The President should have a right to make a determination as to whether or not and how and when there should be a disclosure."

Nixon said he intended to make the material public, but only after a review "which can only be undertaken by me and members of my family."

"Do you expect it to be longer than five years?" one lawyer asked.

"I can't tell you until I see how big the task is," Nixon replied.

In his only comment bearing directly on his role in the Watergate scandal, Nixon said he never ordered the Watergate coverup in a March 23, 1973, meeting with John W. Dean III, his counsel.

3rd planning phase OKd

Buffalo Grove Plan Commission members voted Wednesday night to recommend approval of the next planning phase of a feasibility study on the proposed town center.

The village board now has the option of either continuing the study or terminating further development plans.

The proposed town center is visualized by consultants as a "focal point" of the community to unify residents and to instill a town atmosphere. The center will not be planned as a shopping center, but as a facility that will provide a variety of uses.

Consultant firms hired by the village, Economies Research Associates, Troup and Olson and Alan M. Voorhees, have completed the first two parts of the four-stage feasibility study. The development of the town center is planned for an 80-acre site north of Lake-Cook Road between Ill.

Rte. 83 and Buffalo Grove Road.

THE FIRST PHASE of the study reported the site was suitable for location of the center, and the second phase of the study included three ways in which the center could be developed to projected needs by 1985.

Total cost of the first two phases is $13,500.

The three parts of the second phase of the study differed only in their proportions of six land uses — retail, office, public, housing, recreation and open space.

Plan A calls for a greater proportion of recreational and open space uses; plan C calls for higher density of more office space; plan B is a compromise of plans A and C.

The Plan Commission members will recommend the village require the consultants pursue plan B, but according to desires expressed by Buffalo Grove residents and property owners of the 80-acre site.

Residents recently were surveyed by the village about the town center. They said they favored open space and recreational facilities for the center as well as shopping facilities.

PROPERTY OWNERS said they were willing to move ahead with the plans for the center, although no official commitments have been made. Some property owners said they did not like being stalled by the village from developing their land.

Commission member Rodney Jacobs objected to moving on to the third planning stage, because further planning would eliminate the flexibility wanted by property owners.

The next phase would include more details in areas such as architectural styling and utility plans. Jacobs said the village should not spend additional money on plans that already may be sufficient for the development.

Total cost of the study is estimated at $24,500.

Howard Kelster, another commission member, said property owners may need more specific planning in order to develop their properties. He added the third phase may not be as detailed as Jacobs believes.

Arlington man
in car wash

A 25-year-old man was electrocuted Wednesday when he touched an electric-brush housing at the Northwest Auto Wash, 900 W. Euclid Ave., Arlington Heights.

William R. Calvert, 309 N. Drury Ln., Arlington Heights, an employee of the car wash, was pronounced dead at 4:15 p.m., about an hour after the mishap.

Police said Calvert, along with other employees, was painting an interior wall about 2:50 p.m., when he reached back and touched the metal covering for a set of rotating brushes.

He was jolted by an electric shock and collapsed. Police said the brushes had not been working properly, but did not know the specific malfunction.

Arlington Heights paramedics attempted to revive Calvert and rushed him to Northwest Community Hospital.

Best form of government? None, Deer Park decides

Town seeks vote of dissolution after 18 years

by JOE SWICKARD

"Governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed, that whenever any form of government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the right of the people to alter or abolish it . . ."

So said Thomas Jefferson and so say some residents of Deer Park as they petition to abolish their tiny village almost 200 years after the nation's founding principle was spelled out.

Deer Park hardly seems a town with insurmountable problems. Its borders are marked with signs set in bean fields and its residents live in two subdivisions or on scattered farm sites.

There is no business district, nor even a village for the town, incorporated in 1957. There are just the nice homes set in rolling, wooded fields.

THE SIGNS SAY there are 500 people in Deer Park, but the 1970 census said there are 832 residents of the community north of the Lake-Cook county line.

Under state law, the village can be disbanded through a referendum if 51 per cent of persons voting in the last election so petition. In Deer Park, that means only 53 valid signatures are required to force a vote on dissolution and residents of the community are gathering the names.

What's so wrong in Deer Park that the residents would want to disband the 18-year-old corporation?

"Nothing really. There aren't many problems here. It's just the way the decisions are being made," said Roberta Schmitt, one of those petitioning to end the village.

"The signers want to be heard. It's a matter of communication," said trustee Alice Grogan.

After 18 years, "The village has served its purpose," said Carl Johnson, one of the original trustees in 1957 and self-described "anchor man of the village."

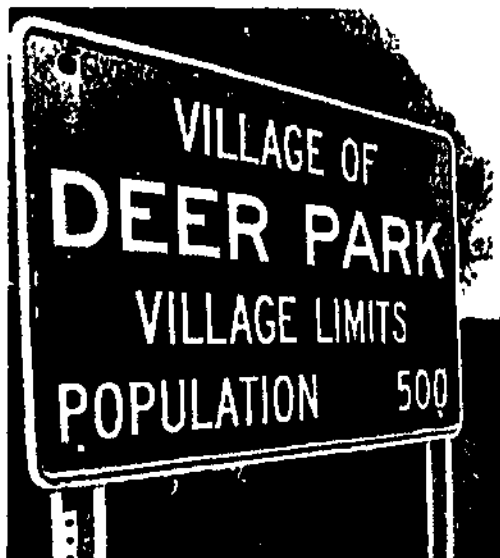

THE ISSUES are not complex. The village board, under the leadership of President Charles Brown, recently

2,000 in Arlington Heights sign home-rule petition

More than 2,000 Arlington Heights residents have signed petitions calling for a vote on home-rule powers, but they (the petitions) will not be used unless the village board decides to finance the proposed Chicago Bears Stadium without a referendum.

Mrs. Mickey Hartley, 104 E. Hawthorne St., an organizer of the petition drive, said Wednesday her group has collected 77 petition sheets and "I'm sure there will be many more coming in."

Mrs. Hartley said the village board's decision to hold a referendum on the stadium has had little effect on the number of people signing the petitions.

"I DIDN'T HAVE any problem at all getting signatures. I had people sign it who were for the stadium as well as people who were against it. They all agreed there should be a referendum," she said.

The petition drive was organized by Katherine Muller, 418 S. Lincoln Ln., and is being coordinated by Joan Hammerstone. Mrs. Hammerstone said the petitions would not be used unless the board gives approval of the stadium without voter approval.

Mrs. Hartley said her group was surprised that Village Pres. James Ryan called for a referendum on the stadium because his "first reaction was not at all favorable."

"I'm glad he decided to go along with the suggestions to hold the referendum. We just hope it will be worded in a way that the residents definitely have a choice," she said.

MRS. HARTLEY said her group would file the petitions if the referendum does not give residents a "definite yes or no vote" on the stadium question.

The petitioners needed to collect signatures totalling 10 per cent of the number of voters participating in the last election, or about 1,200, before a repeal vote could be called.

Ryan called for a binding referendum on village financing of the stadium at a press conference last week. He said a vote could be scheduled in October or early November after final facts and figures on the stadium project are available to village officials and the public.

The village board voted Monday night to guarantee a public referendum on the football stadium proposal if trustees should ever determine the project is financially feasible or desirable.

For handicapped, bed-ridden

'Push-button' ambulance service slated

by TOM VON MALDER

Handicapped and bed-ridden Mount Prospect residents will be able, to summon a fire department ambulance at the push of a button under a new program.

The fire department has approved the use of mobile transmitters which, when activated, will trigger an automatic telephone message requesting an ambulance. The fire department will respond immediately after receiving the call for help, said firefighter Lonnie Jackson.

Jackson, who along with Chief Lawrence A. Palritz and Lt. Donald Barra helped set up the program, said "the system will not tie up the fire department phones as other alarm systems do. The recorded message will stop as soon as the call has been answered, freeing the phone lines for other emergency calls."

THE FIRST of the devices, manufactured by Qonaar Security Systems Inc. of Elk Grove Village, will be put into use Friday. The first recipient will be Connie Peters, 32, of 214 S. George St., who is a victim of multiple sclerosis.

Jackson said it was Mrs. Peters' husband, Ronald, who first interested the fire department in the automatic message program.

"Mrs. Peters has fallen from her wheelchair several times, having to wait eight hours until her husband got home on one occasion," Jackson said. "He couldn't afford to hire a nurse to stay with his wife while he worked and happened to mention his problem at a Lions Club meeting."

Barra, who also is a Lion, brought Peters' problem back to the department, where the solution eventually was found.

THE LIONS CLUB Tuesday volunteered to pay for the first "beeper" device and will donate it for Mrs. Peters' use. In the future, the Lions will maintain ownership of the unit and reassign it when necessary to other persons who need the device but cannot afford it, Jackson said.

"We have over 100 bed-ridden people in our files," said Jackson, referring to fire department emergency files which tell where handicapped and bed-ridden persons are located, so they can be looked for in case of fire or other emergencies.

Jackson said the fire department hopes all of these persons eventually will be equipped with the signaling device, which would operate only at their homes.

The devices normally cost $630, but an arrangement has been made with Mount Prospect residents for $400 each, Jackson said. Persons who are interested should call the fire department at 392-6000.

Nixon talks of Watergate

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Former President Richard Nixon, breaking his year-long silence on Watergate, said in a court document Wednesday that he — not Congress — would decide whether to make public his secret Watergate tapes.

In a 171-page deposition filed in U.S. District Court, Nixon also denied under oath that his remarks in a critical White House tape show that he ordered the Watergate coverup.

Nixon's sworn testimony was taken at San Clemente July 25 by a battery of lawyers involved in his suit to gain custody of White House tapes and documents. Several times Nixon refused to answer questions directly related to Watergate, taking the advice of his lawyers who said the matters were not relevant to the suit.

AS FOR PUBLIC disclosure of the tapes and documents, in government custody pending outcome of the suit, Nixon told the lawyers:

"I shall determine . . . not the Congress, what can appropriately be made public. The President should have a right to make a determination as to whether or not and how and when there should be a disclosure."

Nixon said he intended to make the material public, but only after a review "which can only be undertaken by me and members of my family."

"Do you expect it to be longer than five years?" one lawyer asked.

"I can't tell you until I see how big the task is," Nixon replied.

In his only comment bearing directly on his role in the Watergate scandal, Nixon said he never ordered the Watergate coverup in a March 23, 1973, meeting with John W. Dean III, his counsel.

by JERRY THOMAS

The muted rumble of the massive dirt mover as it cuts lake basins in the Busse Woods Forest Preserve is sweet music to Jim Takahashi's ears.

Takahashi, construction engineer with the Illinois Division of Water Resources, heads the Busse Woods Reservoir site excavation project, part of the Salt Creek Watershed flood control plan.

"I don't really see the machinery or chow up landscape; in my mind's eye it is transformed into the serene, lake-dotted landscape that will soon be here," said Takahashi.

He has supervised the excavation project since the first dirt was dug out of the main pool in late 1973.

TAKAHASHI AND resident engineer William Doeringsfeld gauge the weather by the amount of cubic yards of dirt it will allow them to move that day. They both hate rain.

The massive dirt moving project involves excavating more than one million cubic feet of dirt. This is just part of the damming and improvements that eventually will create a 589-acre lake and connecting waterways and smaller basins.

The Division of Water Resources is responsible for the reservoir work it expects to tame Salt Creek, and alleviate flooding in the area.

The Busse Woods project is in its final phase of construction, with more than two thirds of the excavation completed and only minor shaping still to come.

Although Takahashi's job is to create a system of waterways and a reservoir to curb flooding, he also has an opportunity to create a natural recreation area by working closely with the Cook County Forest Preserve District.

THE FOREST PRESERVE owns the land and is planning to develop it as a recreation area to attract an estimated 3-million people each year.

Although the watershed project covers about 32,000 acres, the Busse Woods area is approximately 3,600 acres.

Takahashi said that with luck and dry weather, the remaining 850,000 cubic yards of dirt to be excavated will be moved by December.

Two of the three dams are built, and the main dam at the southeast border of the project near Arlington Heights and Cosman roads in Elk (Continued on Page 5)

Recreation area neighbors feel it's worthwhile

Although rumbling trucks, summer dust and heavy traffic give them problems, Elk Grove Village residents in the vicinity of the Busse Woods recreation area under construction still feel the project eventually will be worth the inconveniences.

"More likely as not it will be worth the inconveniences."

"More likely as not it will be a positive thing for the whole village," said Lowell Bergstedt, 695 Ruskin Dr. "It will be an advantage to be nearby. We're kind of looking forward to it."

Bergstedt said he does not ski and probably would not use most of the winter facilities, but he "knew a lot of people who do."

One possible disadvantage of having the recreation center as close as it will be, Bergstedt said, was the problem of more traffic in the Cosman Lake area.

"As long as the project doesn't affect adversely the traffic through the area, it will be fine," he said. "This is an unusual area, and a large amount of people already drive through to look at the homes."

WILLIAM ANDERSON, 630 Ruskin Dr., said he was in favor of the project. He said he had no complaints, even though his home borders the project.

Anderson said the one thing he was concerned about was the building of a separate access road to the recreation site. He said construction of the road was of "critical importance" to his acceptance of the project.

Because the project will not be finished for several years, Anderson said the full impact of it would be felt gradually by its neighbors. He said this was an advantage, allowing residents to "grow with it."

"The area is going to be different because nothing like this exists around here at all," Anderson said. "But it offers my children another opportunity to fill in their backgrounds"

GATEWAY TO A normal life. An old farmhouse at 309 Landmeier Rd., Elk Grove Village, houses the Elk Grove-Schaumburg Townships Mental Health Day Treatment Center, which helps discharged mental patients adapt to the transition to everyday life.

by DAVE GALANTI

An old farmhouse at 309 Landmeier Rd. in Elk Grove Village may look insignificant compared with most of the surrounding community, but for 15 people from Elk Grove, Schaumburg, Palatine and Wheeling townships, it represents the gateway to a normal life.

The farmhouse is the home of the Elk Grove-Schaumburg Townships Mental Health Day Treatment Center, which serves people 14 and older who have either been discharged from full-time psychiatric hospitals and need support during their period of transition to the outside world or those who can use the center as an alternative to full-time hospitalization.

Operating the center are staff members Doris Lefley and Glen Hartshorn, both advocates of the Milieu system of therapy. Milieu therapy advocates placing individuals in a realistic environment to observe their reactions. Members of the group cook their own lunch, keep house, do repair chores, work in the garden and plan their own recreational activities.

HARTSHORN SAID he views the center as a place where clients can learn to live together "so that they might not make the same mistakes again." He said the staff tries to help the clients break out of old patterns that brought on their problems in the first place.

"I see it as a living organism," he continued. "It changes from day to day, depending on how we are feeling."

"The center gives people a chance to form their own relationships instead of just going to a therapist and listening to his views about the outside," Mrs. Lefley added.

The center, which opened in June, operates six hours a day Monday through Friday. Even though patients must provide their own transportation, Mrs. Lefley said it does not prohibit the majority from attending every day. There is no strict attendance requirement, but the clients are asked to notify the center if they cannot be there.

"IT'S NOT VERY useful for them to drop in without notifying us," Mrs. Lefley said. "We try to keep things like a job situation. And if you have an employer, you notify him if you have to go to the doctor or somewhere else."

An important role of the center, Hartshorn said, is helping clients to make their own decisions and to finish projects they have started. Hartshorn said one of the problems faced by clients right out of hospitals is they often find it difficult to remain on a job.

"It is important that the clients form a concept of what they want to be," he said. "I have to work hard to not get forced into making decisions. I am not in the business of providing advice."

Mrs. Lefley said the staff tries to keep the clients looking towards full participation in the outside world at all times. She said leaving the center and employment were topics which came up often in group sessions.

THE DECISION to leave the group is made by agreement of both the staff and the client. Work is considered a "positive value" by the group, and two of the center's clients already have left to work full-time.

"People are constantly coming and going," Hartshorn said. "There are a lot of hellos and goodbys. But this happens outside, and it is something the clients have to deal with."

Families of clients are included in the program through weekly combined sessions. It is this way, Hartshorn said, the group can "dispel any fantasies" about the group and its problems. He added the family is a basic unit of society, and it is important they understand each other if the clients are to make it on the outside.

Patients pay for the program according to a sliding scale. The rest of the bill is paid for by the Elk Grove-Schaumburg Townships Mental Health Center, Elk Grove and Schaumburg townships and the state. Referrals are made through the local mental health center and Northwest Mental Health Center.

Best form of government? None, Deer Park decides

by JOE SWICKARD

"Governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed, that whenever any form of government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the right of the people to alter or abolish it . . ."

So said Thomas Jefferson and so say some residents of Deer Park as they petition to abolish their tiny village almost 200 years after the nation's founding principle was spelled out.

Deer Park hardly seems a town with insurmountable problems. Its borders are marked with signs set in bean fields and its residents live in two subdivisions or on scattered farm sites.

There is no business district, nor even a village for the town, incorporated in 1957. There are just the nice homes set in rolling, wooded fields.

THE SIGNS SAY there are 500 people in Deer Park, but the 1970 census said there are 832 residents of the community north of the Lake-Cook county line.

Under state law, the village can be disbanded through a referendum if 51 per cent of persons voting in the last election so petition. In Deer Park, that means only 53 valid signatures are required to force a vote on dissolution and residents of the community are gathering the names.

What's so wrong in Deer Park that the residents would want to disband the 18-year-old corporation?

"Nothing really. There aren't many problems here. It's just the way the decisions are being made," said Roberta Schmitt, one of those petitioning to end the village.

"The signers want to be heard. It's a matter of communication," said trustee Alice Grogan.

After 18 years, "The village has served its purpose," said Carl Johnson, one of the original trustees in 1957 and self-described "anchor man of the village."

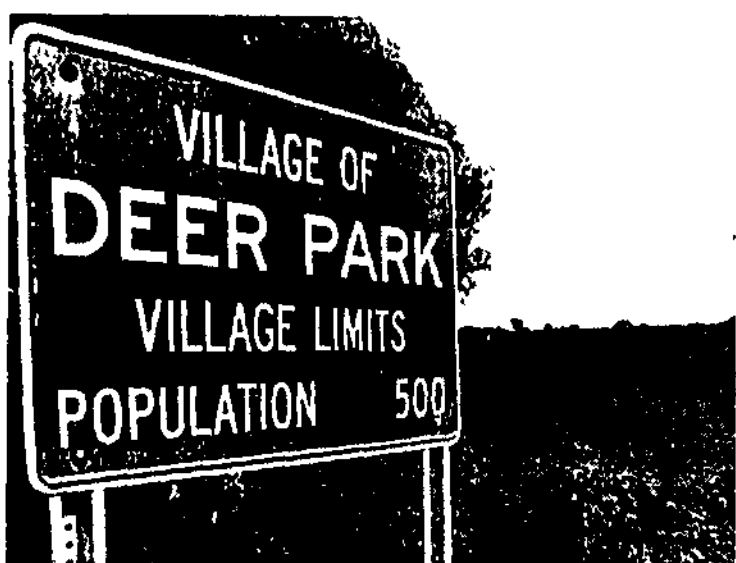

THE ISSUES are not complex. The village board, under the leadership of President Charles Brown, recently

2,000 sign home-rule petition

More than 2,000 Arlington Heights residents have signed petitions calling for a vote on home-rule powers, but they (the petitions) will not be used unless the village board decides to finance the proposed Chicago Bears Stadium without a referendum.

Mrs. Mickey Hartley, 104 E. Hawthorne St., an organizer of the petition drive, said Wednesday her group has collected 77 petition sheets and "I'm sure there will be many more coming in."

Mrs. Hartley said the village board's decision to hold a referendum on the stadium has had little effect on the number of people signing the petitions.

"I DIDN'T HAVE any problem at all getting signatures. I had people sign it who were for the stadium as well as people who were against it. They all agreed there should be a referendum," she said.

The petition drive was organized by Katherine Muller, 418 S. Lincoln Ln., and is being coordinated by Joan Hammerstone. Mrs. Hammerstone said the petitions would not be used unless the board gives approval of the stadium without voter approval.

Mrs. Hartley said her group was surprised that Village Pres. James Ryan called for a referendum on the stadium because his "first reaction was not at all favorable."

"I'm glad he decided to go along with the suggestions to hold the referendum. We just hope it will be worded in a way that the residents definitely have a choice," she said.

MRS. HARTLEY said her group would file the petitions if the referendum does not give residents a "definite yes or no vote" on the stadium question.

The petitioners needed to collect signatures totalling 10 per cent of the number of voters participating in the last election, or about 1,200, before a repeal vote could be called.

Ryan called for a binding referendum on village financing of the stadium at a press conference last week. He said a vote could be scheduled in October or early November after final facts and figures on the stadium project are available to village officials and the public.

The village board voted Monday night to guarantee a public referendum on the football stadium proposal if trustees should ever determine the project is financially feasible or desirable.

Village health survey under way

Volunteer callers Wednesday began polling their neighbors in Elk Grove Village as part of a village-wide comprehensive health survey.

The survey, being coordinated by the village health department was undertaken to determine the community's health needs and concerns.

Nancy Yiannias, health coordinator, said the board of health expects to poll 750 households by late fall.

"WE PLAN TO use the compiled results to help establish a 1978 health plan for the community," she said.

Residents who have questions about the survey may contact Mrs. Yiannias at 439-3900.

The survey is being conducted entirely by telephone, with most of the volunteers contacting persons in their own block or neighborhood.

There are three sections to the questionnaire:

• The first deals with how residents locate a doctor or dentist and where they seek medical care.

It also asks what makes people postpone going to a doctor.

It also asks general information about the occupation, education level and income of the family and how long the family has lived in the community.

• The second section of the survey, which is expected to begin in September, deals with the type of testing or screening programs residents would use.

• The final phase deals with environmental questions and what school health programs are available to families and if they use them.

St. Matthew's first picnic Aug. 31

The first annual picnic of the new St. Matthew's Catholic parish will be held Aug. 31 on the grounds of St. Peter Lutheran Church, 208 E. Schaumburg Rd.

The new parish, which serves the eastern area of Schaumburg and western portions of Elk Grove Village, will soon begin construction of a church on property near Plum Grove and Schaumburg roads. Meanwhile, services are being conducted at Melrose Community Center.

The Rev. Edward Hughes is pastor.

Worker electrocuted at car wash

A 25-year-old man was electrocuted Wednesday when he touched an electric-brush housing at the Northwest Auto Wash, 900 W. Euclid Ave., Arlington Heights.

William R. Calvert, 309 N. Drury Ln., Arlington Heights, an employee of the car wash, was pronounced dead at 4:15 p.m., about an hour after the mishap.

Police said Calvert, along with other employees, was painting an interior wall about 2:50 p.m., when he reached back and touched the metal covering for a set of rotating brushes.

He was jolted by an electric shock and collapsed. Police said the brushes had not been working properly, but did not know the specific malfunction.

Arlington Heights paramedics attempted to revive Calvert and rushed him to Northwest Community Hospital.

Elk Grove band tops at Lakefront fest

The Elk Grove High School marching band took the first place trophy in the band competition Saturday in Chicago's King Neptune parade.

The parade was the opening event of the 16th annual Lakefront Festival.

The marching band, jazz band and concert band also performed Aug. 14 at the Wisconsin State Fair. The trip was the result of an invitation to Elk Grove as an honored out-of-state band. The fair was in West Allis, a Milwaukee suburb.

Grove Township should be constructed by late 1976.

Although some surface water has partially filled the main lake and pools, flooding will not be complete until the main dam is constructed.

APPROXIMATELY $9 million went into the site excavation flood control portion of the project. The total project is expected to cost $33 million.

State studies show Salt Creek caused an estimated $10 million in flood damage on suburban communities, including Elk Grove Village, Schaumburg, Rolling Meadows and Palatine, during 1972.

"The years of temporary mess that includes dust and construction noise is worth the final benefit — the end of flooding for people who live along the Salt Creek Basin," said Takahashi.

A tour of the construction area gives a hint of its recreation potential.

Although the Busse Woods area is surrounded by Schaumburg, Elk Grove Village and Palatine, the land has been contoured so its users can enjoy open vistas of water dotted landscape, without a background of houses or roads. A ski hill and hiking and nature trails also are planned.

FOREST PRESERVE Forester John Froehlich, who has also been concerned with the project since its beginning, works closely with the Division of Waterways engineers and acts as liaison between the district and the department.

Froehlich is impatient.

He said the area already is a haven for waterfowl and small animals, despite the heavy construction.

"Before long, perhaps as soon as next year, I expect to see families enjoying the paths and fishermen along the shoreline," he said.

rather than go elsewhere in the state or even Wisconsin for comparable facilities."

TED KOBAL, 640 Ruskin Dr., said he thought the idea of the recreation center was "terrific," not only for himself and his neighbors, but for the community as well.

"If they keep the lake stocked (with fish) and keep out the motorboats, it will be great," Kobal said of the planned lake. "The area needs some place where you can take your son and daughter fishing on a casual basis."

Kobal said his concern was in keeping the area patrolled so the new section would not face the drug and loitering problems encountered in other sections of the preserve. He said he also favored construction of an access road for police and fire vehicles only, so there could be effective evacuation in case of an emergency.

3 youths arrested in home burglary try

Three Des Plaines youths were arrested by police Tuesday after allegedly attempting to burglarize a home at 722 Greenview Ave., Des Plaines.

The youths, Raymond Hermanson, 17, of 1071 Walter Ave.; Michael Lehnert, 20, of 540 Orchard Ct. and Kenneth Kueker, 18, of 535 Orchard Ct., were charged with attempted burglary. They are scheduled to appear in the Des Plaines branch of Circuit Court Sept. 11.

Police said the three were arrested near the home shortly after the attempted burglary. The youths were in two cars at the time of their arrests and a pry tool was found in one of the cars, police said.

Two of the youths allegedly attempted to break into the house, police said, while the other served as a lookout. The youths broke a window in the southeast corner of the building, but fled before gaining entry, police said.

Bus service decision postponed

Members of Elk Grove Village's transportation committee have postponed a decision on whether to continue the village's subsidized community bus service.

Trustees Nanci Vanderweel, chairman of the committee; Edward Kenna and George Spees this week reviewed the program's operational reports. The three decided to postpone a recommendation to the village board until the full board decides how it will cope with an anticipated financial problem.

Board members were told the village needs at least $1 million more to avoid a budget deficit.

Mrs. Vanderweel said the committee was reluctant to make a recommendation or contract renewal until it knows where the village stood financially.

The Davidsmeyer Bus Co., which contracts with the village to provide in-town and commuter service, has not raised its operating rates.

Mrs. Vanderweel said the service is subsidized with federal revenue-sharing funds.

Nixon talks of Watergate

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Former President Richard Nixon, breaking his year-long silence on Watergate, said in a court document Wednesday that he — not Congress — would decide whether to make public his secret Watergate tapes.

In a 171-page deposition filed in U. S. District Court, Nixon also denied under oath that his remarks in a critical White House tape show that he ordered the Watergate coverup.

Nixon's sworn testimony was taken at San Clemente July 25 by a battery of lawyers involved in his suit to gain custody of White House tapes and documents. Several times Nixon refused to answer questions directly related to Watergate, taking the advice of his lawyers who said the matters were not relevant to the suit.

AS FOR PUBLIC disclosure of the tapes and documents, in government custody pending outcome of the suit, Nixon told the lawyers:

"I shall determine . . . not the Congress, what can appropriately be made public. The President should have a right to make a determination as to whether or not and how and when there should be a disclosure."

Nixon said he intended to make the material public, but only after a review "which can only be undertaken by me and members of my family."

"Do you expect it to be longer than five years?" one lawyer asked.

"I can't tell you until I see how big the task is," Nixon replied.

In his only comment bearing directly on his role in the Watergate scandal, Nixon said he never ordered the Watergate coverup in a March 23, 1973, meeting with John W. Dean III, his counsel.

At one point during that meeting,

IRS opinion sought

5% utility tax deduction out?

Hoffman Estates residents may not be able to deduct the village's 5 per cent utility tax from their 1975 federal income tax.

Questions have arisen about the deductibility of the new tax, and village officials have requested the Internal Revenue Service to send a written ruling on the matter.

Finance Director Keith Wendland said the IRS ruling is expected shortly, but IRS officials contacted Wednesday have indicated the tax is not a deductible item.

A spokesman for Chicago IRS, district director Charles F. Miriani, said the tax is not deductible "if the rate differs from that of the general sales tax in your area."

IN ARLINGTON Heights where a 5 per cent local utility tax also is imposed, an interpretation from Billy M. Hargett, chief of the individual income tax division, indicates the tax cannot be claimed, because it does not equal the municipal 1 per cent share of the state 5 per cent sales tax.

Hoffman Estates officials had said when the tax was imposed Jan. 1 that IRS spokesmen told them the levy would be deductible, because it is a temporary tax set to expire Dec. 31, 1976.

But now that interpretation has been questioned, particularly in light of the ruling in Arlington Heights.

"We've heard both answers," Asst. Village Mgr. John Dixon said Wednesday.

day. "We called once and they said it was deductible because it equaled the sales tax. We called another time and they said it was not deductible because it didn't equal the sales tax," Dixon said.

A tax consultant contacted Wednesday said the village tax is not deductible. Ronald Hollinger, area manager for H & R Block Inc., said the tax cannot be itemized because the tax is similar to a village assessment.

He said the only deductible utility tax would be one imposed by the state against a utility company and that tax would be deductible as a type of sales tax.

ILLINOIS BELL Telephone area manager Joe Baroska Wednesday also said the company's legal consultants say the tax is not deductible, because it is a tax against the utility companies, not customers.

The state allows the companies to pass on the tax to customers.

The utility tax was imposed to raise money for a $350,000 debt in the village fire department. Village officials opted for the utility tax instead of a property tax hike, because there is a year delay between the time property taxes are collected and the time they are sent to municipalities.

Property taxes are deductible on federal income tax.

The village had estimated the utility tax would cost most homeowners between $20 and $50 yearly.

Village trustees have pledged to eliminate the tax as soon as enough money for the fire department debt is raised, possibly this year.

WENDLAND SAID the tax has netted $221,000 to date, but he added a decision on the term of the tax will rest with the village board.

The utility tax is one revenue source which the village currently is examining in a study of next year's financial needs.

The study is being made for preparation of the 1975 tax levy ordinance which must be passed by Sept. 9.

Wendland said he is "preparing conservative" figures and is not counting on utility tax revenue as a money source in preliminary calculations for 1976.

"I'm sure the board is not going to change its policy of taking the tax off as soon as possible," he added.

RON NEVONHOVEN worked Thursday, spreading black dirt at Schaumburg's new police and courts building site, part of preparing the area as a fairgrounds for the village's 5th annual Labor Day Septemberfest, sponsored by the Jaycees and other civic organizations.

GOP picnic Sunday at Deer Grove site

The Republican Organization of Schaumburg Township will hold its annual picnic Saturday at Deer Grove Forest Preserve, Grove 5, Quentin Road north of Dundee Road, Palatine.

Sides of beef will be roasted, and the menu will include hot dogs, corn on the cob, beer, pop and ice cream.

Games and prizes will be featured for children, with softball and volleyball games planned for adults, said Peter Von Sothen, picnic chairman.

Tickets, at $10 per family, may be purchased from Republican precinct captains or workers or at ROOST headquarters, 839 W. Higgins Rd., Schaumburg, 884-0738.

'Spirit of 76' theme

Parade highlights Septemberfest

Traditional floats, clowns and marching bands will mingle with Bicentennial groups in Schaumburg's annual Labor Day Septemberfest.

Scheduled to step off at 1 p.m. from Syracuse Lane and Springinguth Road, the parade, carrying a "Spirit of 76" theme, will include the Fourth Pennsylvania Artillery, the Chicago Light Artillery Battalion A and the 12th South Carolina Volunteers.

Other units marching in the Sept. 1 parade are the 40 and 8 Clowns, Schaumburg Rotary Rascals, Vagabond Clowns, the Jolly Jokers, Crazy Cops and Schaumburg Jaycee Clowns and Shriners.

The parade will travel north on Springinguth Road, turning east on Weathersfield Way to Braintree Drive, then north, across Schaumburg

Road, to the fairgrounds at the site of the village's new $1.5 million police and courts building.

A NUMBER OF CIVIC and social organizations will operate food booths, rides games and other amusements with entertainment continuing throughout the day.

Conant High School Jazz Band will perform at 3 p.m., Schaumburg Players will present "Cabaret" at 4 p.m., and Neltgen's Note Shop will offer organ music at 5 p.m.

Sheffield Park's Kazoo Band will make its second annual appearance at the community festival.

The day-long celebration will end with a dusk fireworks display at Campanelli Lake, on Schaumburg Road east of the fairgrounds.

Best form of government? None, Deer Park decides

Town seeks vote of dissolution after 18 years

by JOE SWICKARD

"Governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed, that whenever any form of government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the right of the people to alter or abolish it . . ."

So said Thomas Jefferson and so say some residents of Deer Park as they petition to abolish their tiny village almost 200 years after the nation's founding principle was spelled out.

Deer Park hardly seems a town with insurmountable problems. Its borders are marked with signs set in bean fields and its residents live in two subdivisions or on scattered farm sites.

There is no business district, nor even a village for the town, incorporated in 1957. There are just the nice homes set in rolling, wooded fields.

THE SIGNS SAY there are 500 people in Deer Park, but the 1970 census said there are 832 residents of the community north of the Lake-Cook county line.

Under state law, the village can be disbanded through a referendum if 51 per cent of persons voting in the last election so petition. In Deer Park, that means only 53 valid signatures are required to force a vote on dissolution and residents of the community are gathering the names.

What's so wrong in Deer Park that the residents would want to disband the 18-year-old corporation?

"Nothing really. There aren't many problems here. It's just the way the decisions are being made," said Roberta Schmitt, one of those petitioning to end the village.

"The signers want to be heard. It's a matter of communication," said trustee Alice Grogan.

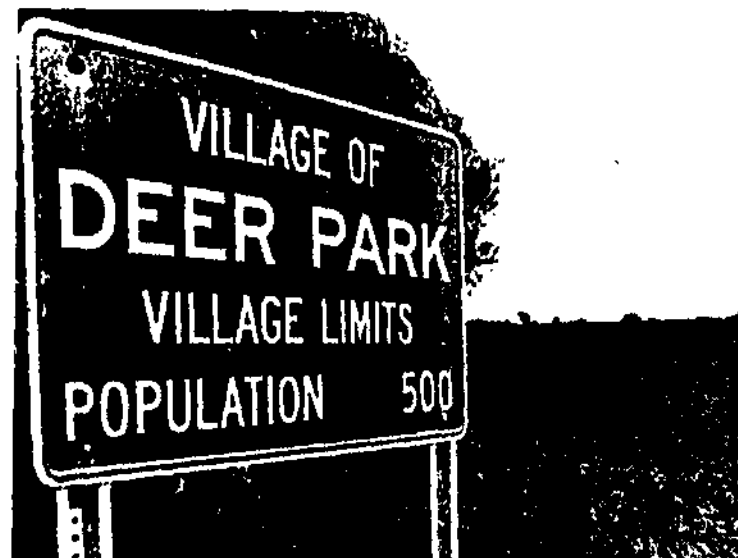

After 18 years, "The village has served its purpose," said Carl Johnson, one of the original trustees in 1957 and self-described "anchor man of the village."

THE ISSUES are not complex. The village board, under the leadership of President Charles Brown, recently Newer residents rely on the village of Deer Park for services provided to some by Lake County.

Deer Park seeks dissolution vote after 18 years as town

voted to pave some interior roads, contract for police service with Barrington and started a study for sewers.

The decisions split the town into two camps: the older areas versus the two newer subdivisions. Although the first petition fell three names short of forcing a referendum to dissolve the village on their first attempt, they vow to petition until they get the 51 percent from the last election that is needed to call for the question.

Mrs. Schmitt, a 20-year resident of the area, said the actions of the board are high-handed.

She and other petitioners would rather that it not come to a vote, but they think they have no other way to get the board's ear, Mrs. Schmitt said.

The "improvements" voted by the board are unwanted and unnecessary, she said. Unimproved roads discourage drag racers; the Lake County Sheriff provides adequate protection and improved sewers would just encourage more development of the rural area, she said.

Johnson, the original board member, said the village "served its purpose" and is no longer needed. He said Deer Park was incorporated to block a developer's plans for incorporating on his own with higher density.

HIS NEEDS ARE met by county services for police, road repair and snow plowing, said Johnson. He said he is sorry that others do not get that service. "But there's nothing I can do about it."

Trustee Grogan said some could have gotten the impression that the board is arrogant from the board's effort to strike a balance between an efficient meeting and one that gives everyone a chance to be heard.

"It's difficult to run an efficient meeting. People feel they aren't getting a chance to be heard. We can't turn the meeting over to the public and they feel put down," Mrs. Grogan said.

Part of the problem, Mrs. Grogan said, is that the people are not talking with trustees outside the formal board setting.

"The trustees will try to do anything the people want — if they let us know," she said.

EVEN THOUGH almost half the people voting in the last election want to abolish the village, Mrs. Grogan said "I feel this is a good thing. It's important to know what the people are thinking. We never like to see extremes, but we'll see what we can do."

Village Pres. Brown is not so sure the petition is such a good idea. "It bothers me no end. This has been a labor of love. It hurts — really hurts," Brown said.

Like Mrs. Grogan, Brown said part of the problem is that unhappy residents haven't conveyed their wishes to the board in the past. Brown said the petitioners have assumed a "begrudging attitude," when village funds were spent on services for others.

"There is a definite communication problem here. Unfortunately, they don't tell me what they're unhappy about. And of that, I accuse them very harshly," he said.

Brown said citizen apathy is almost staggering at times. When the petition was first put forward, he said there were only four citizens at the meeting.

"I asked them what was wrong and they didn't say boo," he said. "What am I supposed to do if they won't tell me what's wrong?"

HE SAID HE IS convinced the referendum, should it be held, will be defeated by a 3 to 1 margin. But he is still upset, and sounds wounded, by its proposal.

"I would expect some input about their problems, but this hasn't been the case at all," he said.

Brown said if the referendum is successful, residents would find it hard to reincorporate as protection from large developers or losing area to neighboring towns.

"Their problems are mine, too. I have no personal axe to grind in this. But if the timbers start breaking away, the village will sink," he said.

For good or ill, the revolutionary idea of the citizens' absolute power over their government still is struggling in Deer Park.

2-acre cafe site may be disannexed

Two acres near Higgins Road and Spring Mill Drive planned for a restaurant may be disconnected from the Village of Schaumburg and annexed to Hoffman Estates.

Hoffman Estates trustees indicated they would accept the proposal by landowners Pasquale Maurici and Salvatore Blondo if Schaumburg agrees to the disconnection.

The owners are seeking the disconnection because water and sewer lines are closer in Hoffman Estates than in Schaumburg.

Police car sale set

The village board has agreed to sell seven used police squad cars to Frank J. Catuso for $4,000. Catuso, who works for a private security company, submitted the bid for the vehicles which will be replaced this year. Catuso also purchased four squad cars last year.

Four other individual bids were submitted, but they totaled less than $2,000.

Zoner's resignation OK'd

The resignation of Don Valerio from the zoning board of appeals was accepted by the board. Valerio cited increasing job responsibilities as the reason for his resignation.

Hossack to attend show

Public Works Director John Hossack was authorized to attend a national public works Congress and Equipment Show in New Orleans, La., next month. Hossack will be allowed $480 for the conference Sept. 20-25.

Valuation below estimate

The village's total assessed valuation rose by only about $1 million in 1974, county officials have reported to the village. Finance Director Keith Wendland said the village's total assessed valuation is $109.3 million, about $3 million less than anticipated.

Hoffman Estates to hire 5 firefighters

The Hoffman Estates Village Board has authorized the addition of five firefighters to the village fire department.

The new personnel were authorized in the current 1975-76 budget and will bring to 26 the number of full-time firefighters employed by the department.

Fifteen firefighters have been added to the department since Dec. 30 when the village assumed fire protection duties from the Hoffman Estates Fire Protection District.

"This is one of the pledges that if we didn't make it out loud, we made it to ourselves," Village Pres. Virginia M. Hayter said of the manpower increase.

IN A RELATED MATTER, the purchase of a third fire department ambulance was approved Monday. The action will provide an ambulance at each of the village's three fire stations.

The vehicle will be purchased for $23,439 from S & L Ambulance Co., which submitted the lowest of three bids. The board appropriated another $2,383 for a radio for the vehicle.

A federal grant totaling $18,075 will help fund the ambulance cost. The village's $7,747 share will come from a $250,000 donation from Allister Construction Co., builders of the Westbury residential development between Freeman and Palatine roads.

The donation was to pay for constructing and equipping the Freeman Boulevard fire station, which opened last month to serve the area north of the Northwest Tollway.

Second game room approved in Hoffman Estates

Another electronic game room will open soon in Hoffman Estates, following approval of the amusement center by the village board.

The game room, a 1,000-square-foot facility, will be at 2314 W. Higgins Rd. in the Barrington Square shopping center. It will be the second local amusement facility operated by village residents Lefroy and Donald Moore.

The other, which opened in the spring, is in the Hoffman Plaza shopping center.

Approval came after the zoning board of appeals recommended acceptance of the project.

Before approving the game room, several conditions were set, including that no alcoholic beverages be allowed in the facility, that a bicycle rack be provided by the shopping center and that if anyone is convicted of gambling at the facility, a public hearing will be held at the owner's expense to decide if the game room should remain open.

HOURS OF OPERATION outlined by the zoning board will be 11 a.m. to 11 p.m. Sunday through Thursday and 11 a.m. to 1 a.m. Friday and Saturday.

Before the board vote was taken, Police Chief John O'Connell said no incidents have been reported at the Moores' first game room, and several trustees said they have viewed the operation and praised it.

However, trustees questioned the Moores' plans to structure the new facility toward preschoolers.

The brothers said they will include games for preschoolers whom mothers may wish to leave at the amusement center while shopping.

The facility will open within three weeks, the Moores told officials.

Nixon talks of Watergate

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Former President Richard Nixon, breaking his year-long silence on Watergate, said in a court document Wednesday that he — not Congress — would decide whether to make public his secret Watergate tapes.

In a 171-page deposition filed in U.S. District Court, Nixon also denied under oath that his remarks in a critical White House tape show that he ordered the Watergate coverup.

Nixon's sworn testimony was taken at San Clemente July 25 by a battery of lawyers involved in his suit to gain custody of White House tapes and documents. Several times Nixon refused to answer questions directly related to Watergate, taking the advice of his lawyers who said the matters were not relevant to the suit.

AS FOR PUBLIC disclosure of the tapes and documents, in government custody pending outcome of the suit, Nixon told the lawyers:

"I shall determine . . . not the Congress, what can appropriately be made public. The President should have a right to make a determination as to whether or not and how and when there should be a disclosure."

Nixon said he intended to make the material public, but only after a review "which can only be undertaken by me and members of my family."

"Do you expect it to be longer than five years?" one lawyer asked.

"I can't tell you until I see how big the task is," Nixon replied.

In his only comment bearing directly on his role in the Watergate scandal, Nixon said he never ordered the Watergate coverup in a March 23, 1973, meeting with John W. Dean III, his counsel.

At one point during that meeting,

Teacher pact talks resume

Teachers and board members in Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 have resumed contract negotiations but don't expect to reach an agreement before school starts Aug. 29.

The two sides met for two hours Wednesday, exchanged counter proposals and set their next meeting date for Aug. 28. Both sides characterized Wednesday's talks as positive.

"We're satisfied that we can go ahead," said Richard Zweiback, Dist. 15's professional board negotiator. "There is a better feeling of give and take."

"The indication today is that we're no longer at an impasse," said Sandra Johnson, president of the teachers' union.

CONTRACT TALKS broke down a month ago when board members refused to discuss any issues but salary in the year-old contract. At the time, teachers were concerned about the inclusion of maternity leave provisions in the new contract and the removal of existing strike prohibitions from the current document.

Teachers claimed a victory on the maternity leave question after a school board decision last week. Although the board previously had granted traditional maternity leaves to pregnant teachers upon request, it unofficially changed this policy early this year to comply with U.S. Supreme Court strictures against discriminatory leaves for women. Last week, the board agreed to review each leave-of-absence request separately in the future, but it granted traditional maternity leaves to those teachers who had sought them after the unofficial policy change.

Board members apparently won the round on keeping the teachers "no-strike" clause in the existing contract. That clause prohibits teachers from striking should a contract not be signed before school starts.

"We felt satisfied that teachers recognize the fact that we'd have to keep the no-strike clause in the contract to reach agreement," Zweiback said. "Our main concern is that they (the teachers) not misunderstand our position. Everything is tentative until a final agreement is signed," Zweiback said.

Union negotiators met with their building representatives Aug. 12 and organized crisis committees, Mrs. Johnson said. "But if things continue to go along at this positive pace, they won't be used," she said.

Blood plan review set for tonight

The Rolling Meadows blood assurance committee tonight is scheduled to review the community blood plan offered through Michael Reese Hospital, Chicago.

The committee has been looking at several blood programs and is to make a recommendation to the city council in the near future on which one, if any, should be adopted.

Organizations that already have outlined their programs for the committee include: North Suburban Blood Center; Rush Presbyterian-St. Luke's Hospital, Chicago; the American Red Cross; and Blood Services.

The programs are all basically similar, providing free blood replacement for all city residents if 4 per cent of the population donates each year.

ALTHOUGH MANY residents participate in local blood programs sponsored by businesses and churches, Rolling Meadows is one of the few Northwest suburbs that does not have a communitywide blood replacement plan.

Kenneth Johnson, president of the city's board of health, has expressed fears that not enough residents would support a community program to make one successful.

The city council agreed in June, however, to at least study the programs that are available and set up the blood assurance committee to gather information.

Arlington Hts. rejects auto service center plan

by JOE SWICKARD

A proposal for an automotive service center by Rolling Meadows Mayor Roland J. Meyer and developer Lee Romano was turned down by Arlington Heights officials.

Meyer and Romano presented plans for a muffler shop, a car wash and a tire, battery and car accessories store on Golf Road near Goehbert Road in Arlington Heights.

Members of the subcommittee said the plans represented a use too intensive for the area and conflicted with nearby houses.

Despite the lack of approval for the auto center, Meyer and Romano said they would appear before the plat and subdivision subcommittee at its next meeting, August 26, with plans for other property in the area.

Two sites mentioned were at Arlington Heights and Golf roads and a 20-acre site west of Arlington Heights Road between the tollway and Algonquin Road.

Meyer indicated the first parcel would be the site of a shopping center with a major food store and drug store.

A temporary use as a golf driving range was suggested for the land between the tollway and Algonquin Road.

ROMANO IS a land developer with extensive holdings along Golf Road and developer of the proposed Outer Planets, a residential and commercial project in Schaumburg.

Litter pickup service offered to merchants

Rolling Meadows merchants who need help coping with litter around their businesses will be able to get it through a new service offered by the recycling, ecology and beautification committee.

The committee will put merchants in touch with community organizations willing to sweep parking lots and pick up refuse as a fund-raising project. The service is provided free.

"Some merchants have told us they really don't need a full-time man, but just someone to sweep the parking lot and do periodic cleaning," said Evelyn Drummond, REB committee chairman. "For club groups, this can be an ideal way to make some money."

Organizations and merchants may register with the service by filling out applications at City Hall.

Best form of government? None, Deer Park decides

Town seeks vote of dissolution after 18 years

by JOE SWICKARD

"Governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed, that whenever any form of government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the right of the people to alter or abolish it . . ."

So said Thomas Jefferson and so say some residents of Deer Park as they petition to abolish their tiny village almost 200 years after the nation's founding principle was spelled out.

Deer Park hardly seems a town with insurmountable problems. Its borders are marked with signs set in beanfields and its residents live in two subdivisions or on scattered farm sites.

There is no business district, nor even a village for the town, incorporated in 1937. There are just the nice homes set in rolling, wooded fields.

THE SIGNS SAY there are 500 people in Deer Park, but the 1970 census said there are 832 residents of the community north of the Lake-Cook county line.

Under state law, the village can be disbanded through a referendum if 51 per cent of persons voting in the last election so petition. In Deer Park, that means only 53 valid signatures are required to force a vote on dissolution and residents of the community are gathering the names.

What's so wrong in Deer Park that the residents would want to disband the 18-year-old corporation?

"Nothing really. There aren't many problems here. It's just the way the decisions are being made," said Roberta Schmitt, one of those petitioning to end the village.

"The signers want to be heard. It's a matter of communication," said trustee Alice Grogan.

After 18 years, "The village has served its purpose," said Carl Johnson, one of the original trustees in 1937 and self-described "anchor man of the village."

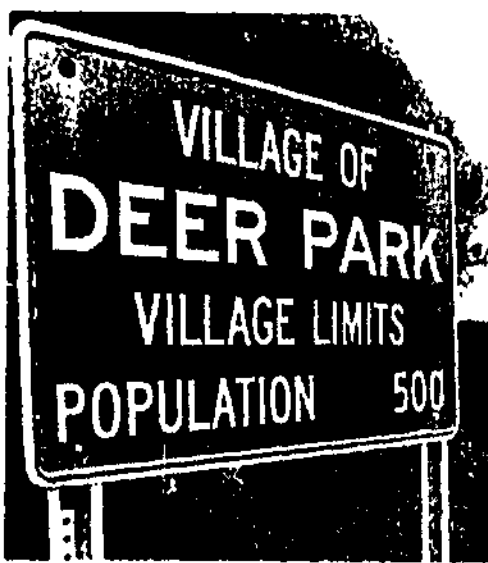

THE ISSUES are not complex. The village board, under the leadership of President Charles Brown, recently

Flood control gives beauty, recreation

by JERRY THOMAS

The muted rumble of the massive dirt mover as it cuts lake basins in the Busse Woods Forest Preserve is sweet music to Jim Takahashi's ears.

Takahashi, construction engineer with the Illinois Division of Water Resources, heads the Busse Woods Reservoir site excavation project, part of the Salt Creek Watershed flood control plan.

"I don't really see the machinery or chow up landscape; in my mind's eye it is transformed into the serene, lake-dotted landscape that will soon be here," said Takahashi.

He has supervised the excavation project since the first dirt was dug out of the main pool in late 1973.

TAKAHASHI AND resident engineer William Doeringfeld gauge the weather by the amount of cubic yards of dirt it will allow them to move that day. They both hate rain.

The massive dirt moving project involves excavating more than one million cubic feet of dirt. This is just part of the damming and improvements that eventually will create a 589-acre lake and connecting waterways and smaller basins.

The Division of Water Resources is responsible for the reservoir work it expects to tame Salt Creek, and alleviate flooding in the area.

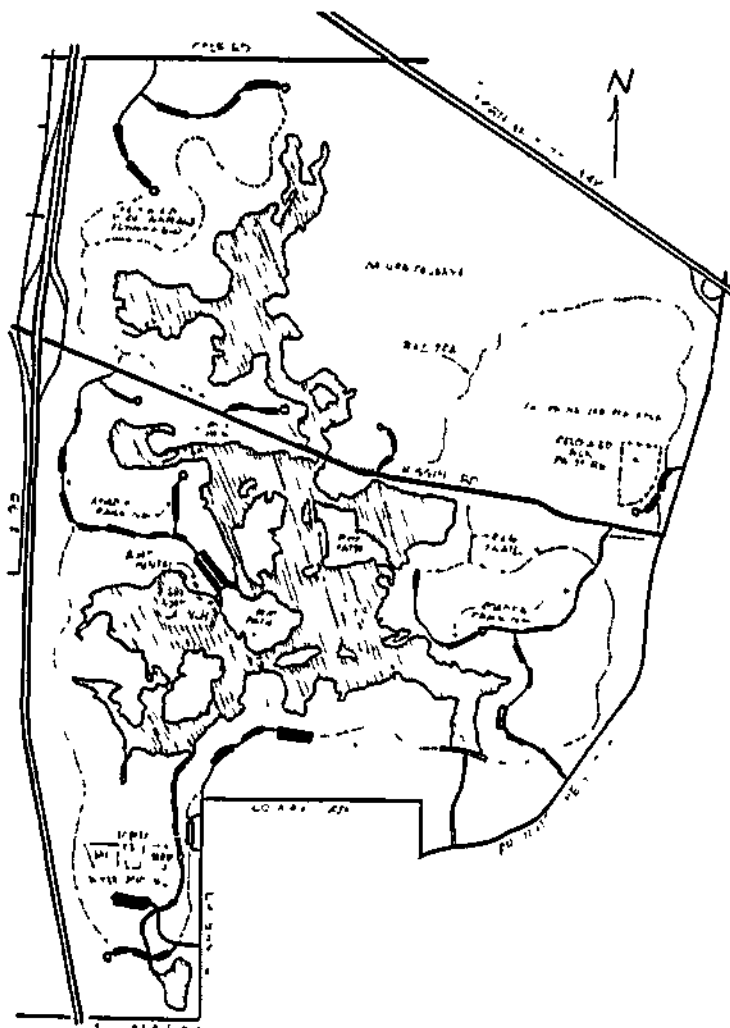

The Busse Woods project is in its final phase of construction, with more than two thirds of the excavation completed and only minor shaping still to come.

Although Takahashi's job is to create a system of waterways and a reservoir to curb flooding, he also has an opportunity to create a natural recreation area by working closely with the Cook County Forest Preserve District.

THE FOREST PRESERVE owns the land and is planning to develop it as a recreation area to attract an estimated 3-million people each year.

Although the watershed project covers about 32,000 acres, the Busse Woods area is approximately 3,600 acres.

Takahashi said that with luck and dry weather, the remaining 850,000 cubic yards of dirt to be excavated will be moved by December.

Two of the three dams are built, and the main dam at the southeast border of the project near Arlington Heights and Cosman roads in Elk Grove Township should be constructed by late 1976.

Although some surface water has partially filled the main lake and pools, flooding will not be complete until the main dam is constructed.

APPROXIMATELY $9 million went into the site excavation flood control portion of the project. The total project is expected to cost $33 million.

State studies show Salt Creek caused an estimated $10 million in flood damage on suburban communities, including Elk Grove Village, Schaumburg, Rolling Meadows and Palatine, during 1972.

"The years of temporary mess that includes dust and construction noise is worth the final benefit — the end of flooding for people who live along the Salt Creek Basin," said Takahashi.

A tour of the construction area gives a hint of its recreation potential. Although the Busse Woods area is surrounded by Schaumburg, Elk Grove Village and Palatine, the land has been contoured so its users can enjoy open vistas of water dotted landscape, without a background of houses or roads. A ski hill and hiking and nature trails also are planned.

FOREST PRESERVE Forester John Froehlich, who has also been concerned with the project since its beginning, works closely with the Division of Waterways engineers and acts as liaison between the district and the department.

Froehlich is impatient. He said the area already is a haven for waterfowl and small animals, despite the heavy construction.

Flooding feared near Meadow Edge

Several Palatine Township homeowners near the Meadow Edge development, Rolling Meadows, fear the project will contribute to flooding problems in the area.

Residents voiced their concerns at a special zoning commission hearing Wednesday night, called to consider a shift in the original plan for the development north of Old Plum Grove Road between Meacham and Quentin roads.

The commission unanimously granted developer Edward Zale's request for two zoning changes in the latest phase of the project. A group of single-family houses will be relocated to an area originally planned for townhouses. The townhouses will be moved to the single-family house area.

Several residents said they are worried existing flooding problems will become worse as land is graded for the new section of the development and streets are constructed.

KATHY HALLORAN, 1384 S. Vermont St., said water being used to sprinkle newly sodded lawns in other areas of the project already is draining into her neighborhood.

"What happens when we get a hard rain?" she asked. "It seems to me things are just going to get worse. There's no place for the water to go."

Zale said although engineering drawings for the new phase have not been completed, the plan is to direct stormwater to a retention lake within the development.

"People in the surrounding areas shouldn't have any drainage problems because of us," he said. "In fact, I would say their present problems probably will be alleviated, although I can't say to what extent."

The city's plan commission also must approve plans for the new section before construction can begin. No date for the hearing has been scheduled.

Nixon talks of Watergate

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Former President Richard Nixon, breaking his year-long silence on Watergate, said in a court document Wednesday that he — not Congress — would decide whether to make public his secret Watergate tapes.

In a 171-page deposition filed in U.S. District Court, Nixon also denied under oath that his remarks in a critical White House tape show that he ordered the Watergate coverup.

Teacher pact talks resume

Teachers and board members in Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 have resumed contract negotiations but don't expect to reach an agreement before school starts Aug. 29.

The two sides met for two hours Wednesday, exchanged counter proposals and set their next meeting date for Aug. 28. Both sides characterized Wednesday's talks as positive.

CONTRACT TALKS broke down a month ago when board members refused to discuss any issues but salary in the year-old contract. At the time, teachers were concerned about the inclusion of maternity leave provisions in the new contract and the removal of existing strike prohibitions from the current document.

Teachers claimed a victory on the maternity leave question after a school board decision last week. Although the board previously had granted traditional maternity leaves

Jones supports resident's annexation resolution

Palatine Village Pres. Wendell E. Jones Wednesday said he supports a 10-point resolution drafted by a township resident to provide conditions for the annexation of his subdivision to the village.

Aileen Finkelman, 230 Timberlane Dr., said he composed the resolution, because he is not satisfied with the annexation conditions provided by the village board in two other resolutions earlier this week.

"I am generally in support of these points, although I think they need to be toned down somewhat and the wording needs to be clarified," Jones said.

"I think the resolution reflects the basic intent of the village board, and I believe the majority on the village board that has supported the annexation of these areas all along also will support this resolution," he said.

FINKELMAN'S resolution clarifies the impact of the annexation of the northern English Valley, Heatherlea, Pepper Tree and Shenandoah subdivisions to the Village of Palatine, he said.

Finkelman's resolution includes the following points:

- Owners of wells and septic tanks will not be forced to pay for services from the Ferndale Heights Utility Co. unless their facilities become a public hazard.

- Newly annexed residents will not be forced to make home, street or lot improvements to conform with village codes and standards.

- Newly annexed residents who are served by the Ferndale Heights Utility Co. will not be assessed for repairs or revisions in other water systems.

- Street or sidewalk revisions made in newly annexed areas will be paid for by the village with federal revenue sharing or motor fuel tax funds. Residents will not be assessed for the work unless they request it.

- Newly annexed residents will not be assessed for improvements made in old sections of the village, for joining the Metropolitan Sanitary District deep tunnel project or other projects that are unrelated to their area.

Finkelman's resolution also guarantees the village board will provide crossing guards for the new areas with available tax revenues, will provide police protection to newly annexed areas without imposing a special assessment and will support the development of a proposed five-acre township park at Home Avenue and Oak Street.

The resolution also provides the village board will keep the water rates for residents served by the Ferndale Heights Utility Co., "reasonable and at a fair level."

The village board also will allow homeowners' association officials of the newly annexed subdivisions to serve on the Palatine Advisory Board.

"I've talked with residents in Heatherlea, where I live, and I have their support. I think if the village board approves this resolution, without making radical changes in the conditions I have offered, that residents of most of the northern subdivisions will vote to annex," Finkelman said.

FINKELMAN WAS among about 100 township residents who formed a citizens' group in opposition to the proposed annexation several weeks ago.

He said, "The things I objected to are covered the way I think they should be in this resolution. So, if the village approves it, I have no qualms. If they don't approve it, then I have my doubts about the annexation, and I will not support it."

Jones said he will meet with Finkelman and other interested residents at 10 a.m. Saturday at the village hall, 54 S. Brockway St., to discuss the proposed resolutions.

The village board tentatively adopted two resolutions this week. One resolution is similar to the one proposed by Finkelman and offers annexation conditions for residents in the northern subdivisions.

THE OTHER resolution provides annexation conditions for residents of the Palatine Park Estates subdivision, west of Palatine, which also may enter the village.

Jones said he will request township residents, "in good faith, agree to immediately begin a petition drive for annexation" after the village board approves the resolutions.

"I want to get this thing taken care of, one way or another, within two weeks," he said.

The village board is expected to finalize all of the resolutions during a meeting Monday.

Newer residents rely on the village of Deer Park for services provided to some by Lake County.

voted to pave some interior roads, contract for police service with Barrington and started a study for sewers.

The decisions split the town into two camps: the older areas versus the two newer subdivisions. Although the first petition fell three names short of forcing a referendum to dissolve the village on their first attempt, they vow to petition until they get the 51 per cent from the last election that is needed to call for the question.

Mrs. Schmitt, a 20-year resident of the area, said the actions of the board are high-handed.

She and other petitioners would rather that it not come to a vote, but they think they have no other way to get the board's ear, Mrs. Schmitt said.

The "Improvements" voted by the board are unwanted and unnecessary, she said. Unimproved roads discourage drag racers; the Lake County Sheriff provides adequate protection and improved sewers would just encourage more development of the rural area, she said.

Johnson, the original board member, said the village "served its purpose" and is no longer needed. He said Deer Park was incorporated to block a developer's plans for incorporating on his own with higher density.

HIS NEEDS ARE met by county services for police, road repair and snow plowing, said Johnson. He said he is sorry that others do not get that service, "But there's nothing I can do about it."

Trustee Grogan said some could have gotten the impression that the board is arrogant from the board's effort to strike a balance between an efficient meeting and one that gives everyone a chance to be heard.

"It's difficult to run an efficient meeting. People feel they aren't getting a chance to be heard. We can't turn the meeting over to the public and they feel put down," Mrs. Grogan said.

Part of the problem, Mrs. Grogan said, is that the people are not talking with trustees outside the formal board setting.

"The trustees will try to do anything the people want — if they just let us know," she said.

EVEN THOUGH almost half the people voting in the last election want to abolish the village, Mrs. Grogan said "I feel this is a good thing. It's important to know what the people are thinking. We never like to see extremes, but we'll see what we can do."

Village Pres. Brown is not so sure the petition is such a good idea. "It bothers me no end. This has been a labor of love. It hurts — really hurts," Brown said.

Like Mrs. Grogan, Brown said part of the problem is that unhappy residents haven't conveyed their wishes to the board in the past. Brown said the petitioners have assumed a "begrudging attitude," when village funds were spent on services for others.

"There is a definite communication problem here. Unfortunately, they don't tell me what they're unhappy about. And of that, I accuse them very harshly," he said.

Brown said citizen apathy is almost staggering at times. When the petition was first put forward, he said there were only four citizens at the meeting.

"I asked them what was wrong and they didn't say boo," he said. "What am I supposed to do if they won't tell me what's wrong?"

HE SAID HE IS convinced the referendum, should it be held, will be defeated by a 3 to 1 margin. But he is still upset, and sounds wounded, by its proposal.

"I would expect some input about their problems, but this hasn't been the case at all," he said.

Brown said if the referendum is successful, residents would find it hard to reincorporate as protection from large developers or losing area to neighboring towns.

"Their problems are mine, too. I have no personal ax to grind in this. But if the timbers start breaking away, the village will sink," he said.

For good or ill, the revolutionary idea of the citizens' absolute power over their government still is struggling in Deer Park.

Flood control gives beauty, recreation

by JERRY THOMAS

The muted rumble of the massive dirt mover as it cuts lake basins in the Busse Woods Forest Preserve is sweet music to Jim Takahashi's ears.

Takahashi, construction engineer with the Illinois Division of Water Resources, heads the Busse Woods Reservoir site excavation project, part of the Salt Creek Watershed flood control plan.

"I don't really see the machinery or chewed up landscape; in my mind's eye it is transformed into the serene, lake-dotted landscape that will soon be here," said Takahashi.

He has supervised the excavation project since the first dirt was dug out of the main pool in late 1973.

TAKAHASHI AND resident engineer William Doeringsfeld gauge the weather by the amount of cubic yards of dirt it will allow them to move that day. They both hate rain.

The massive dirt moving project involves excavating more than one million cubic feet of dirt. This is just part of the damming and improvements that eventually will create a 589-acre lake and connecting waterways and smaller basins.

The Division of Water Resources is responsible for the reservoir work it expects to tame Salt Creek, and alleviate flooding in the area.

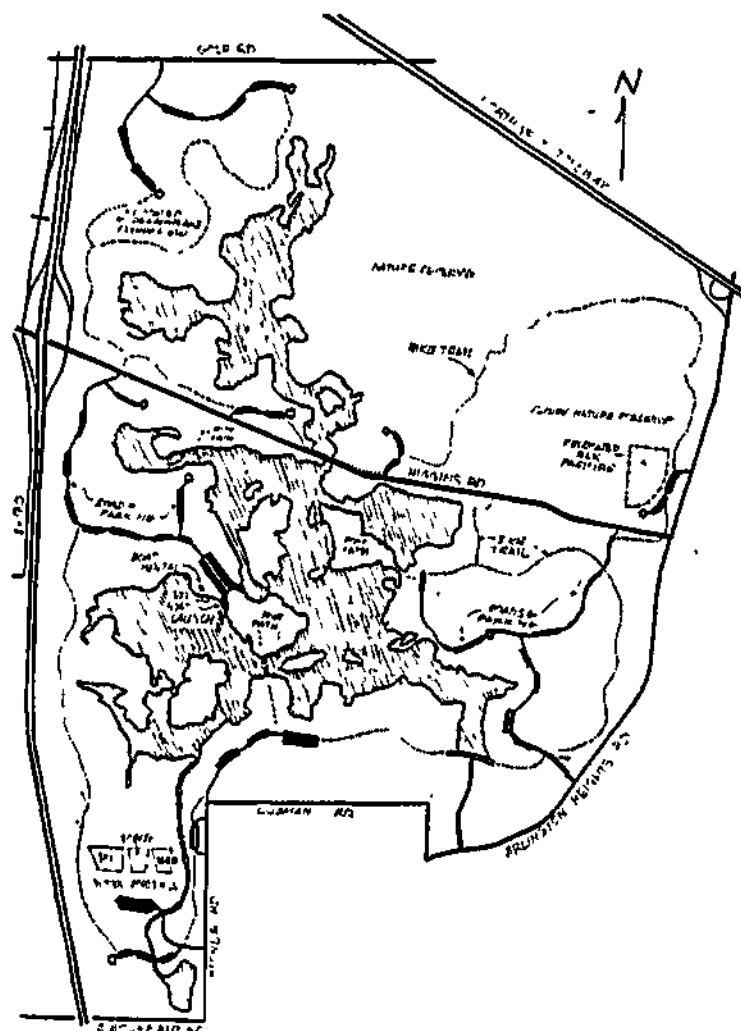

The Busse Woods project is in its final phase of construction, with more than two thirds of the excavation completed and only minor shaping still to come.

Although Takahashi's job is to create a system of waterways and a reservoir to curb flooding, he also has an opportunity to create a natural recreation area by working closely with the Cook County Forest Preserve District.

THE FOREST PRESERVE owns the land and is planning to develop it as a recreation area to attract an estimated 3-million people each year.

Although the watershed project covers about 32,000 acres, the Busse Woods area is approximately 3,600 acres.

Takahashi said that with luck and dry weather, the remaining 850,000 cubic yards of dirt to be excavated will be moved by December.

Two of the three dams are built, and the main dam at the southeast border of the project near Arlington Heights and Cosman roads in Elk Grove Township should be constructed by late 1976.

Although some surface water has partially filled the main lake and pools, flooding will not be complete until the main dam is constructed.

APPROXIMATELY $9 million went into the site excavation flood control portion of the project. The total project is expected to cost $33 million.

State studies show Salt Creek caused an estimated $10 million in flood damage on suburban communities, including Elk Grove Village, Schaumburg, Rolling Meadows and Palatine, during 1972.

"The years of temporary mess that includes dust and construction noise is worth the final benefit — the end of flooding for people who live along the Salt Creek Basin," said Takahashi.

A tour of the construction area gives a hint of its recreation potential. Although the Busse Woods area is surrounded by Schaumburg, Elk Grove Village and Palatine, the land has been contoured so its users can enjoy open vistas of water dotted landscape, without a background of houses or roads. A ski hill and hiking and nature trails also are planned.

FOREST PRESERVE Forester John Froehlich, who has also been concerned with the project since its beginning, works closely with the Division of Waterways engineers and acts as liaison between the district and the department.

Froehlich is impatient. He said the area already is a haven for waterfowl and small animals, despite the heavy construction.

Group pushes fire service upgrade

A blue ribbon citizens' committee will begin placing posters in the windows of Palatine businesses this week to promote the Sept. 9 referendum to upgrade fire services.

Gas pumps knocked down, fire results

A car knocked over two gasoline pumps Wednesday night, touching off a small explosion and fire at the J & L Oil Inc., Hicks and Dundee roads, Palatine Township.

Palatine firefighters extinguished the flames about 9 p.m. Safety valves on the pumps shut off the gasoline flow. The car, which was driven by one of the service station employees, was burned slightly in the mishap. No injuries were reported.

The posters are among several activities planned to support the referendum which proposes a fire department tax increase from 7.5 cents to 20 cents per $100 assessed valuation. The additional revenue will be used to hire and train 26 firemen and remodel the Slade Street Fire Station.

Fred Bickel, chairman of the 18-member committee, said the group plans to organize informational meetings on the referendum which will be sponsored by various civic groups and homeowners' associations.

THE ARLINGTON Crest Civic Assn. has agreed to sponsor an informational meeting Sept. 4 at 8 p.m. at the Rose Park Fieldhouse, 530 S. Williams Ave.

The Palatine Rotary and Kiwanis clubs also have agreed to sponsor meetings during which village officials and committee members will answer questions about the referendum, Bickel said.

Members of the committee, who have been appointed by the village board, will tour the Slade Street Fire Station tonight before the meeting "to familiarize themselves with the needs of the fire department," he said.

The committee also is preparing fact sheets to distribute during the informational meetings and plans to include referendum facts in the village newsletter.

Nixon talks of Watergate

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Former President Richard Nixon, breaking his year-long silence on Watergate, said in a court document Wednesday that he — not Congress — would decide whether to make public his secret Watergate tapes.

In a 171-page deposition filed in U.S. District Court, Nixon also denied under oath that his remarks in a critical White House tape show that he ordered the Watergate coverup.

Nixon's sworn testimony was taken at San Clemente July 25 by a battery of lawyers involved in his suit to gain custody of White House tapes and documents. Several times Nixon refused to answer questions directly related to Watergate, taking the advice of his lawyers who said the matters were not relevant to the suit.

AS FOR PUBLIC disclosure of the tapes and documents, in government custody pending outcome of the suit, Nixon told the lawyers:

"I shall determine . . . not the Congress, what can appropriately be made public. The President should have a right to make a determination as to whether or not and how and when there should be a disclosure."

Nixon said he intended to make the material public, but only after a review "which can only be undertaken by me and members of my family."

"Do you expect it to be longer than five years?" one lawyer asked.

"I can't tell you until I see how big the task is," Nixon replied.

In his only comment bearing directly on his role in the Watergate scandal, Nixon said he never ordered the Watergate coverup in a March 23, 1973, meeting with John W. Dean III, his counsel.

Floros to try to kill pact to study cable TV feeling

Trustee Leo Floros Wednesday said he plans to investigate the possibility of killing a contract for a study of the acceptance of cable television in Mount Prospect.

"I have little enthusiasm for the program," Floros said, noting the contract was approved by the previous village board. As head of the board's fire and police committee, Floros is overseeing progress of the cable television study.

The contract was approved more than a year and a half ago at an estimated cost of $10,976. The village already has paid Telcom Engineering Inc., St. Louis, $7,768.57 for work completed on the study. The firm has not, however, conducted the final survey in the report.

THE PROJECT has been at a stalemate since February, when the local Lions Club turned down Telcom's request they conduct the 11-question survey.

Telcom had hoped to reach 1,500 or 10 per cent of the households in the village with its questionnaire. The questions pertain to the number of televisions owned by a family; hours the televisions are watched; desirable programming and how much a family would be willing to pay, if anything, for a cable television hookup.

Floros said he has been dragging his feet in finding out the status of the cable television study, because he is not in favor of the program.

"I just don't see any use in pursuing the subject," Floros said. "I'm not interested in spending and more money on further study."

FLOROS SAID he plans to invite a representative from Telcom to the October meeting of the fire and police committee so board members can be updated on the project.

"I have to find out where it stands, and if it is going to require more money, I think we'll have to take another look at it," Floros said.

When the original cable television study was ordered, a special advisory committee was set up. The board was interested in the safety as well as the entertainment features of cable television.

Possibilities for public use of cable television include police and fire alarm protection in private residences, surveillance of major intersections, closed circuit police and fire training, community relations and school information programs.

Buzzer ambulance calls set for handicapped here

by TOM VON MALDER
Handicapped and bed-ridden Mount Prospect residents will be able to summon a fire department ambulance at the push of a button under a new program.

The fire department has approved the use of mobile transmitters which, when activated, will trigger an automatic telephone message requesting an ambulance. The fire department will respond immediately after receiving the call for help, said firefighter Lonnie Jackson.

Jackson, who along with Chief Lawrence A. Pairitz and Lt. Donald Barra helped set up the program, said "the system will not tie up the fire department phones as other alarm systems do. The recorded message will stop as soon as the call has been answered, freeing the phone lines for other emergency calls."

THE FIRST of the devices, manufactured by Qonaar Security Systems Inc. of Elk Grove Village, will be put into use Friday. The first recipient will be Connie Peters, 32, of 214 S. George St., who is a victim of multiple sclerosis.

Jackson said it was Mrs. Peters' husband, Ronald, who first interested the fire department in the automatic message program.

"Mrs. Peters has fallen from her wheelchair several times, having to wait eight hours until her husband got home on one occasion," Jackson said. "He couldn't afford to hire a nurse to stay with his wife while he worked and happened to mention his problem at a Lions Club meeting."

Barra, who also is a Lion, brought Peters' problem back to the department, where the solution eventually was found.

THE LIONS CLUB Tuesday volunteered to pay for the first "buzzer" device and will donate it for Mrs. Peters' use. In the future, the Lions will maintain ownership of the unit and reassign it when necessary to other persons who need the device but cannot afford it, Jackson said.

"We have over 100 bed-ridden people in our files," said Jackson, referring to fire department emergency files which tell where handicapped and bed-ridden persons are located, so they can be looked for in case of fire or other emergencies.

Jackson said the fire department hopes all of these persons eventually will be equipped with the signaling device, which would operate only at their homes.

The devices normally cost $630, but an arrangement has been made with the manufacturer to sell them to Mount Prospect residents for $400 each, Jackson said. Persons who are interested should call the fire department at 392-6000.

Best form of government? None, Deer Park decides

by JOE SWICKARD

"Governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed, that whenever any form of government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the right of the people to alter or abolish it . . ."

So said Thomas Jefferson and so say some residents of Deer Park as they petition to abolish their tiny village almost 200 years after the nation's founding principle was spelled out.

Deer Park hardly seems a town with insurmountable problems. Its borders are marked with signs set in bean fields and its residents live in two subdivisions or on scattered farm sites.

There is no business district, nor even a village for the town, incorporated in 1957. There are just the nice homes set in rolling, wooded fields.

THE SIGNS SAY there are 500 people in Deer Park, but the 1970 census said there are 832 residents of the community north of the Lake-Cook county line.

Under state law, the village can be disbanded through a referendum if 51 per cent of persons voting in the last election so petition. In Deer Park, that means only 53 valid signatures are required to force a vote on dissolution and residents of the community are gathering the names.

What's so wrong in Deer Park that the residents would want to disband the 18-year-old corporation?

"Nothing really. There aren't many problems here. It's just the way the decisions are being made," said Roberta Schmitt, one of those petitioning to end the village.

"The signers want to be heard. It's a matter of communication," said trustee Alice Grogan.

After 18 years, "The village has served its purpose," said Carl Johnson, one of the original trustees in 1957 and self-described "anchor man of the village."

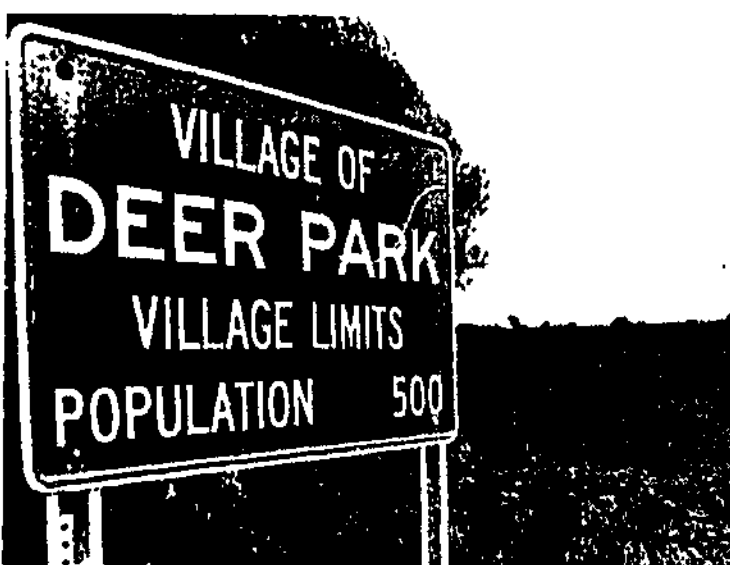

THE ISSUES are not complex. The village board, under the leadership of President Charles Brown, recently

Study of utility purchase begins

The Mount Prospect Village Board's public works committee tonight will begin its study of the possible purchase of the Citizens Utilities Co. water and sewer system, which serves the northeast part of the village.

Trustee Theodore J. Wattenberg, committee chairman, has called for a report on the condition of Citizens Utilities' equipment from the village public works director.

Although a special consulting firm's report on the system stated it is in "pretty good" shape, Wattenberg said he wants an evaluation from the village staff.

"We have asked for a specific report on what is the condition of the pipes, what is the condition of the sewage system," Wattenberg said. "We want to make sure that we do not get involved in an unprofitable venture."

WATTENBERG'S committee is one of two studying the proposed purchase, which has been under consideration for more than a year. Residents in the area requested the purchase, complaining Citizens Utilities charges exorbitant rates for poor-quality water and service.

The finance committee is scheduled to take up the financial aspect of the purchase at its September meeting. As proposed, residents using the system would pay for its purchase through extra charges tacked onto the village water bills.

Wattenberg said he does not expect his committee to come up with its recommendations for several weeks. "I hope to come up with recommendations within the next three weeks," he said. "I think we should have reasonable opportunity to go over the information we will be getting from the public works department."

The Northwest Suburban Council of Associations, an umbrella organization for homeowners' groups, has urged the board to give the Citizens Utilities purchase special priority in its committee meetings.

Wattenberg said he also expects the committee to consider the need for a new well in the northern part of the village. The meeting will begin at 8 p.m. at the village hall, 112 E. Northwest Hwy.

New principal to take Sunset School post

A new principal for Sunset Park School, 603 W. Lonquist, Mount Prospect, has been hired, following the unexpected resignation of the school's principal, Robert Clinkert.

Apparently prepared in advance, the Mount Prospect Dist. 57 Board of Education Monday accepted Clinkert's resignation and immediately hired Walter Olds, 37, as Sunset Park principal.

Clinkert resigned to accept the position of assistant superintendent of instruction in the Woodridge Elementary School District, DuPage County. He has been principal at Sunset for the last two years.

A graduate of Indiana University, Olds has been a student at the University of Chicago in the Midwest Center for Administration for the last three years.

Before that, Olds worked as an elementary school principal in West Bend, Wis.

"We hate to lose Mr. Clinkert, but it's a fine opportunity for him," said Supt. Earl Sutter. "He's made a great contribution to the district," Sutter said.

Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 is considering allowing children born between Dec. 1 and March 1 to enter kindergarten early.

Currently, children must be 5 years old on or before Dec. 1, 1975, to enter kindergarten this year. The school board this week directed the administration to look into the possibility of letting up to 20 children enroll in kindergarten this year who will turn 5 after the Dec. 1 deadline.

Supt. Roger Bardwell said the administration has received several requests from parents who want their children to enter kindergarten a year early. He said they feel their children are mature enough to start kindergarten, although their youngsters were born after the Dec. 1 deadline.

BARDWELL SAID the program would not cost additional money this year, although the district will not receive state aid for children born after the Dec. 1 deadline. He said the district can place up to 20 youngsters into classes already set for this year.

Toni Kane, learning disability teacher at Byrd School, Elk Grove Village, said she has reservations about the program because "many parents feel their children are ready when they're not."

Several parents spoke in favor of the program, at a recent meeting saying an arbitrary date should not determine who is ready for kindergarten.

Darrell Crouch, 2011 Scott Terr., Mount Prospect, said, "We'd at least like to have the chance to have them accepted rather than have an arbitrary age level. If they're ready, they should go." He has a child whose birthday falls between the extension dates.

THE BOARD IS waiting to see what response the district gets before approving the program. If the response is too great, Bardwell said it might not be possible to implement the program this year because of the limited number of openings. The board will decide on the program at the Sept. 2 meeting.

Parents interested in the program, who have children becoming 5 between Dec. 1 and March 1, 1976, should write a letter to the administration by Sept. 2. The letter should explain why they believe their youngster is ready to enter kindergarten early, said Bardwell.

The child and parents will be interviewed by a group of psychologists and kindergarten teachers to determine whether the child is mature enough to enter kindergarten early.

If the program is approved, parents will be notified about their child's acceptance by Sept. 15.
